French Report Germans Falling Back

Roosevelt Bolsters U. S. Defense With 100,000 Men

FBI Gets 150 More Agents to Hunt Spies; Limited Emergency Is Proclaimed

By William V. Nessly.

The United States, in a presidentially proclaimed "national emergency" of limited extent, last night was driving forward in many directions to safeguard the Nation's neutral interests and bolster its many-sided defenses.

Following up his declaration of an emergency "to the extent necessary for the proper observance, safeguarding and enforcing of the neutrality of the United States and the strengthening of our national defense within the limits of peacetime authorization," the President also:

Ordered an increase of approximately 100,000 officers and men in the present authorized strength of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and National Guard.

FBI to Be Expanded

Directed addition of up to 150 persons to the personnel of the FBI already charged with leadership in the drive against espionage, sabotage and subversive activities.

Made available to the State Department $500,000 to protect Americans caught in Europe by the outbreak of hostilities and help them to return home.

Chose Undersecretary of State Welles to represent this Government at the Panama City consultations of all 21 American republics on means of preserving the neutrality of the American continents.

Signed a proclamation applying to the Union of South Africa, now officially at war with Germany, the neutrality act's embargo on arms, previously applied to Germany, Poland, France, Britain, Australia, India and New Zealand.

Prepared a similar proclamation with respect to Canada but delayed promulgating it until the Canadian parliament actually declares war.

Report on Athenia Disaster

Issued through the State Department, without comment, a report from two American naval attaches saying evidence showed the British liner Athenia had been torpedoed.

The President, announcing his proclamation at a press conference, declared emphatically that his action should in no way be construed as placing the Nation on a war basis. There was no intention, he said, to do all of the many things a great many statutes authorize him to do in case of such emergencies, and he repeatedly made it clear that the Government would continue functioning just as it has been in peacetime without addition of war boards or other such agencies.

But he made it plain, also, that he was prepared to prevent a repetition of propaganda, sabotage and actions subversive of the American form of Government which swept the country in 1914, 1915 and 1916.

While he said some additional orders may be expected in the efforts to protect neutrality, no more major actions were contemplated.

Plenty of Food, He Says

The public need not fear that food prices will go through the roof as they did in the World War, Mr. Roosevelt and, in pointing to surpluses in all supplies.

Regarding the special session of Congress, which he wants to repeal the mandatory arms embargo, the President said there never had been a question of whether it would be summoned but the date still has not been decided on.

He said that so far as he could tell now it seemed unnecessary to ask Congress for anything except repeal of the embargo clause, which action would permit any nation to buy munitions here by paying cash and transporting its purchases through the sea. Again the President used the phrase so-called in referring to the neutrality act.

Mr. Roosevelt said he saw absolutely no reason for the extra session to continue until the date for the regular session in January. He said there are always things it would be nice to have Congress do when it is in session but they are not essential.

He had never heard, he said, of any proposal for changes in the

Announcement

The Washington Post has added The New York Times War News Service, and starting Sunday, September 10, dispatches of this service will appear in this newspaper.

Readers of The Post have long been accustomed to the thorough coverage afforded them by The Associated Press, The United Press, The International News Service, and The Herald Tribune News Service.

With the advent of war, The New York Times extended its already unexcelled foreign service and is co-operating with The Post in seeing to it that cables received by its New York office are immediately put on a special wire direct to this newspaper.

Thus The Post has achieved complete encirclement of all top flight news services.

The New York Times service needs no descriptive adjectives.

Its addition is simply further proof of the purpose of The Post to give Washington an "ever-improving newspaper."

5 More Ships Sunk in Day As Sea Warfare Is Intensified

Submarine Torpedo Sank Liner Athenia, Kennedy Reports

A torpedo fired by a submarine sank the Athenia, drowning passengers who at the time were in the third class and tourist dining saloons, according to a report to the State Department yesterday from Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy in London.

Kennedy submitted the report made to him by Capt. Alan G. Kirk, Naval Attache of the London Embassy, and Comdr. Norman R. Hitchcock, Assistant Naval Attache, who interviewed officers and crew of the ship and survivors.

The State Department also made public a report from John Cudahy, American Minister to Ireland, saying testimony of officers and survivors not only was that the Athenia was torpedoed but that a shell was fired into her side as she was listing.

Neither the London Embassy officers nor Cudahy attempted to say whether it was a German submarine.

Five More Survivors Found

President Roosevelt declined to comment at his press conference yesterday on the Kennedy and Cudahy reports, saying they spoke for themselves.

The State Department was advised that five more survivors of the Athenia had been found at Glasgow, Scotland, and two aboard the rescue steamer City of Flint.

The five reported safe at Glasgow: Damon Boynton, Trumansburg, N. Y.; Elizabeth Bruce, whom the department said might be Elizabeth Barbour Bruce, Louisville; John Lawrence, presumably John Hundale Lawrence, Berkeley, Calif.; Mrs. Sage, presumably Mrs. Catherine Sage, Salt Lake City; Helen Dewitt Smith, presumably Mrs. Henry Dewitt Smith, Plainfield, N. J.

Two Believed New Yorkers

The two aboard the City of Flint are Mr. and Mrs. James Gordon, believed to be of New York City.

Kennedy's report, written by Hitchcock, did not corroborate the shelling. Hitchcock, quoting officers of the ill-fated liner, however, said the conning tower of the submarine first emerged from the surface about 800 yards on the port side of the Athenia, and that an explosive gun or signal was fired from the conning tower platform.

The flash from the conning tower was reported by three witnesses, he said, but no witness heard a shell

16 Now Destroyed; German, 2 British Sent to Bottom

By the Associated Press

The known toll of ships sunk by torpedoes, mines and shells in the widespread sea warfare accompanying European hostilities mounted to 16 last night as belligerents continued their efforts to choke off the flow of supplies to their foes.

Five ships were reported destroyed during the sixth day of the conflict. Among them were the British freighter Winkleigh and tanker Regent Tiger, which sent the known British-French losses to nine, and the German freighter Helfrid Bissmark, the fourth definite Nazi loss.

In addition, an unidentified vessel which observers believed German was blown up—apparently a mine victim like the Helfrid Bissmark off the Danish Island of Aeroe, and all hands were reported killed.

30 Lives Lost

The fifth casualty of the day was the Dutch minesweeper Willem van Ewyck which went down off the north Netherlands coast with a loss of 30 lives. The tragedy apparently was apart from the war as the Netherlands government said the craft, a neutral in neutral waters, had struck a Netherlands mine.

The campaign to cut down shipping on both sides brought results in the flight of many vessels to neutral ports, as well as in actual sinkings. The British Thursday asserted 63 Nazi ships grossing 240,000 tons, had sought refuge in Spanish and Japanese ports and the big German passenger-cargo craft were inactive.

Germany made no claims in this connection but there was no doubt allied shipping was reduced. For example, the French Normandie and British Queen Mary, largest of their respective fleets, were both playing safe in New York harbor.

Sank Near Denmark

The Helfrid Bissmark, 727-ton German freighter, sank on the eastern side of the Danish Peninsula with the loss of seven lives. Seven were saved.

The 5,055-ton Winkleigh, which sailed August 24 from Kingston, Jamaica, for London, was presumed to have been destroyed as the Holland America liner Statendam wirelessed its New York office that it had taken aboard the Winkleigh's crew of 37 somewhere in mid-Atlantic.

The sinking of the Regent Tiger, a 10,176-ton ship, was also reported by another vessel, the Belgian cruiser Jean Jadot advised Radiomarine it had saved the tanker's

Food Plentiful, Say President And Wallace; Prices Leveling

Definite signs of an early halt to rising food prices and hoarding were seen in Washington yesterday as President Roosevelt, at his press conference, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, in a radio address last night, assured the country there was not the slightest danger of a shortage.

Meantime, a novel twist to the Capital's food price situation was furnished by the District Commissioners when they authorized issuance of a requisition to the Treasury's Procurement Division, through which the Federal and District governments buy their supplies, for a year's supply of sugar, salt, soap and other staples required by municipal institutions.

Accordingly, Gallinger Hospital, the home for the aged, penal and welfare institutions were directed to make up lists of their year's needs so that the order can be prepared. Officials said there was no precedent in the District for purchasing supplies a year in advance.

In the face of governmental activity here to curb hoarding and to prevent sharp price rises, the step taken by the District yesterday put Commissioner Hazen and other officials in an embarrassing and contradictory position.

A ranking officer of the District government, however, told The Post the issuance of the requisition was authorized after the District had been requested to take the step by an official of the Procurement Division.

Retail price fluctuations were the least yesterday of any day this week, though the run on sugar continued, with many food markets and at least one wholesale house reporting supplies exhausted.

In a national broadcast, Wallace said "there is absolutely no reason for a sugar panic," citing tremendous

British Plan To Ration Food Soon

U-Boat Warfare Blamed for Step; Raid Reported on Kiel Canal Forts

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Sept. 8.—With new attacks by U-boats on merchant vessels reported every few hours, the British government declared today that it is "now palpably evident" Germany is prosecuting "an unrestricted submarine campaign as violent as that on which she embarked in 1917, and that German submarine commanders have been given orders to sink merchant ships on sight and without warning."

After asserting such a campaign "is in direct contravention to the rule of submarine warfare which was unconditionally accepted by Germany in 1935 for all time, irrespective of the actions of any other powers," the official communique on the subject adds:

"It is also quite clear that Germany's submarines were on their stations on ocean trade routes with these orders several days before the war broke out. This confirms the statement of the prime minister that Germany was determined on war, and although a just settlement was possible without war 'Hitler wouldn't have it.'"

New Kiel Raid Reported

[A concentrated bombing attack on the heavily fortified German Island of Sylt near the western end of the Kiel Canal apparently was made today by what one observer described as 10 to 15 planes which came from the southwest, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Copenhagen.

[Antiaircraft guns boomed and explosions indicated bombs were being dropped.

[The sound of the attacking planes' motors could be heard distinctly on the Danish island of Reomoe, nearby.

[It had been preceded by another attack last night.

[The British made no reference today to a bombing mission having been directed at Sylt.

[Britain's first blow at Germany occurred on Monday in the same area when a squadron of bombers struck at ships of the tiny German fleet near the North Sea entrance of the canal. The ministry of information announced 24 hours later that heavy bombs had damaged two German battleships severely.—Editor's note.]

Food to Be Rationed

Meanwhile, the swift thrust by Germany to cut off British food supplies through submarine raids was followed today by disclosure that food rationing would be enforced in the British Isles within "three or four weeks."

W. S. Morrison, food minister, who predicted in an interview that there would be food restrictions, emphasized: "There is no shortage of food and no cause for the slightest apprehension or alarm, however long the war may last, as far as one can see."

With goods which are to be treated as contraband by the British government listed in a royal proclamation, it was announced that in order to prevent contraband from reaching the enemy, "the government will use its belligerent rights to the full," but that everything possible will be done to facilitate bona fide neutral trade.

The list of goods designated as contraband in the royal proclamation covers a wide range of instruments of war, munitions, manufactured goods, raw materials, precious metals, foodstuffs and feed.

Formal Blockade Denied

More specifically it applies to all kinds of arms, ammunition, explosives, chemicals or appliances suitable for use in chemical warfare, as well as machines for their manufacture or repair and materials or ingredients used in their manufacture.

It also applies to fuel of all kinds, to all contrivances for transportation, to machines, materials and ingredients used in their manufacture, and to animals necessary or of aid in such use. It also affects all means of communication, coins, bullion, currency, evidences of debt and similar commercial documents. Also included are all kinds of food, feed, forage, clothing and materials used in the production of any of these.

This communique adds that though "no blockade of Germany in a formal sense of the word has

Saar City Declared Circled; Warsaw Entered, Nazis Say

Motor Column In Polish Capital, DNB Announces; Germans Jubilant

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 8.—The German high command declared tonight that an advanced guard of fast-traveling armored cars had smashed its way into Warsaw at 5:15 p. m. (11:15 a. m., E. S. T.), while other motorized divisions had sped to within 10 miles of the Polish capital.

The announcement did not say how far into the bombed city the armored cars had penetrated or what resistance was met.

Warsaw thus was reached on the eighth day of the German drive that started September 1.

Meanwhile, from Lublin, the Polish government announced that Bydgoszcz, largest town in Pomorze (the Polish Corridor), was regained from the Germans today by Polish troops.

The entry of Warsaw was reported in a special announcement of D. N. B., the official German news agency, as follows:

"The high command of the army makes known: German armored troops entered Warsaw at 5:15 p. m. today."

May Strike to East

Formal army communiques come once daily at about noon, with D. N. B. making such additional announcements as the above.

The high command did not say the city was captured, but word that German troops were in Warsaw still was a surprise. The taking of the Polish capital had not been expected by most Germans before Sunday night.

The feeling now is that unless the defense tightens suddenly, motorized divisions may occupy the city tonight or tomorrow, then strike again to the east.

Meanwhile a "radio war" was being carried on in Poland, with claims and counter-claims of successes filling the ether waves. A broadcaster speaking Polish with a German accent on the Warsaw station's wave length announced the Polish capital was being entered and warned all residents punishment would be meted out to Poles with weapons when the city "finally falls."

At the same time another announcer professing to speak from the Polish station denied the capital had fallen, and stated "the Germans have taken our wave length." The Polish station said, "everyone in Warsaw is at his post."

Germans Jubilant

[From Budapest came word that Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz tonight appointed Gen. Czuma as commander of Polish troops defending Warsaw with orders to hold the city to the last drop of blood, the Warsaw radio station announced at 10:30 p. m.—Editor's note.]

The terse announcement that German troops had entered Warsaw was received jubilantly in the German capital. After the announcement a radio band played "Deutschland Uber Alles."

The army, it was believed here, was keeping its offensive in high gear in the hope of taking Warsaw before a Franco-British drive against Germany's heavily fortified west wall could be started.

Motorized divisions from the southwest, the high command said, reached the town of Mszcznomow, 25 miles from Warsaw, earlier in the day, then pushed ahead a few miles before dusk. These troops have been driven like a dagger thrust toward the heart of Poland.

Germans Urged To Stage Revolt

Revolt against the Hitler regime was urged upon the German people today by the Social Democratic Federation, U. S. A.

A cable signed by Jasper McLevy, Socialist Mayor of Bridgeport, Conn., an I federation chairman, was dispatched to the German Social Democratic Party in Exile, at its Paris, France headquarters, saying:

"We welcome your manifesto urging the German people to overthrow the Nazist regime and thus restore peace and freedom. By prompt response, they can save the German nation from ruin and strengthen democracy all over the world."

Air Raid Alarm in Berlin

Berlin (Saturday), Sept. 9 (UP).—An air raid alarm for the German capital sent the city's 4,000,000 inhabitants into shelters at 3:37 a. m. today, but apparently no enemy planes reached Berlin. The sirens sounded again, ending the alarm at 4:22 a. m.

Duke of Kent Joins Navy

Americans Reach Latvia

Riga, Latvia, Sept. 8 (AP).—A train carrying 55 passengers arrived at the Latvian frontier today from Wilno, Poland. Several Americans were aboard, en route from Warsaw. They were more than four days detouring through Brest-Litovsk and other points.

Goering to Broadcast

Berlin, Sept. 8 (INS).—Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Germany's number two man, will make an important speech tomorrow afternoon, it was announced tonight. His address will be broadcast from all German radio stations, beginning at 1 p. m. (7 a. m. E.S.T.) The speech will be made at an armaments factory. Goering will speak in his newly-created capacity as president of Germany's military council for national defense.

Sub Seen Off Nantucket

Boston, Sept. 8 (AP).—An unidentified submarine was sighted by the crew of the Pollock Rip lightship, which guards the westerly approach to Nantucket Sound, coastguard headquarters at Boston reported.

Those aboard the lightship said the submersible had no identifying marks and that she was headed in a southerly direction.

Soviets Rush Raw Materials To Polish Front

Reserves Called Up As Germans Sweep Toward Border

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Sept. 8.—Soviet Russia tonight was rushing raw materials to the western front, where there appeared to be the possibility of Germany establishing a border with Russia.

Although Moscow on the surface displayed a complete calm, the action was undertaken suddenly as German forces were sweeping eastward through Poland.

According to unofficial sources, the Soviet government yesterday, or possibly before, began calling up reserves.

Doctors and nurses have been registered and instructed on their duties in "case of emergency."

Another significant step was the closing of one of Moscow's two leading gasoline stations.

It was believed the destination of the reservists was in the direction of the Polish frontier, although this could not be confirmed. However, it was believed the reserves were not being sent immediately to the border but some distance behind the line.

British Sound Out Italians on Their Plans

Envoy Sees Ciano; Reported Urging Neutral Course

By the Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 8.—New diplomatic conversations took place tonight between Great Britain and Italy.

Informed quarters said following the meeting between British Ambassador Sir Percy Loraine and Italian Foreign Minister Ciano that Britain was doing everything possible to persuade Italy not to enter the war on Germany's side.

Official information was lacking but usually well-informed circles were of the opinion Britain was telling Italy that Britain and France were prepared to continue the fight with Fuehrer Hitler for years if necessary, and that because of their greater resources Germany had no chance of winning.

These quarters said Britain also was endeavoring to persuade Premier Mussolini that a German victory would be just as injurious to Italy as to Britain and France.

They said the British advanced the argument that Hitler, once he became the master of Europe, would begin thinking of the Southern Tyrol, points on the Adriatic and complete domination of the Balkans.

Record 100-Degree Heat Fells 8, Drives 2,500 From Desks Early

Withering heat, which set an all-year record of 100 degrees to make yesterday the hottest September 8 in Washington history, prostrated eight persons here, contributed to the death of another and drove more than 2,500 Government employes from their desks.

Eric Johanson, 40, of 414 A street southeast, a carpenter, was mortally injured when, overcome by the heat, he fell 18 feet to a concrete floor while working at the new Juvenile Court Building, Fourth and E streets northwest. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Providence Hospital.

Police said that Anton Westerberg, of 16 Eighth street southeast, foreman of the carpenters, reported that he saw Johanson, who was putting up wooden forms for concrete shake his head, pale, then apparently lose his balance. He said Johanson had been working in the sun all day. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered an autopsy.

Charles Norris, 66, of Edmonston, Md., overcome in front of the State Department Building, received treatment for heat exhaustion at Emergency Hospital, police said.

James Lowrie, 35, of 637 Florida avenue northwest, also was treated at Emergency after he collapsed at Third street and Indiana avenue northwest. Edward Thompson, 35, of 605 O street northwest, was overcome while working on a WPA project in Maryland, and was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Adam Williams, colored, 9, of 909 Desmond court southwest, suffered a cramp when he sought to escape the heat with a swim in the Tidal Basin. Police said Williams was pulled from the water by James Daugherty, 107 D street northwest, and taken to Emergency

Paris Claims 8-Mile Gain; Artillery and Planes Blast Nazi Line, Swiss Report

By Taylor Henry.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Sept. 8.—French forces were reported tonight to have penetrated from 7 to 8 miles into German territory, with German troops retreating before increasingly heavy attacks on the northern sector of the Western Front.

Nazi troops were reported thrown back on their main Siegfried Line fortifications.

[French forces have surrounded Saarbruecken, the United Press was informed reliably in Paris.

["Our forces are pressing forward," the informant said.

[Saarbruecken is on the German frontier at the entrance to the rich Saar industrial and mining basin, toward which the French have been driving for several days.—Editor's note.]

The farthest advance of the French left wing, whose flank is protected by the neutral Luxemburg frontier, was believed from information reaching Paris to be in the direction of the important German industrial center of Trier, in the rich Saar mining basin.

An official army communique said French troops were advancing behind retreating Nazi troops who were destroying bridges, railroads and tunnels as they gave ground.

The extent of the French advance was not disclosed by the high command, but the army communique said there was a "continuance of our local progress."

Sea Forces Active

The extent of aviation participation in the drive was shielded behind the terse statement that "our aerial reconnaissance is active."

The communique added that "on the sea our patrol forces are showing very great activity. Co-operation with British naval forces is closely assured, with a view to defending sea communications."

The communique indicated that infantry patrols were supported by tanks and armored cars, moving through the Saar mining area nearest the French frontier.

French bombing planes co-ordinating with artillery action rained explosives on the main forts of Germany's Siegfried Line near Wissemburg today in an attempt to blast an opening for gathering French forces, according to dispatches from Basel, Switzerland.

Wissemburg is 100 miles north of Basel.

Infantry action during the day was confined to what military observers called "blockhouse snatching," which consisted chiefly of sending small, well-armed forces backed by 75's and 105's against machine gun nests.

When the French fire became too hot, German machine gunners simply scurried down deep-cut trenches to the steel doors of the larger forts behind.

Casualties of these minor attacks, however, were reported heavy on both sides considering the small number of men engaged.

Supported by Tanks

The French mechanized forces were meeting their first real test as they ran into the blasted area, which had been mined by the Germans to cover their retreat.

An 8-mile advance would place the French advance guards at the extreme northern end of the front, approximately half-way between the German frontier and the Siegfried Line.

The deployed French infantry was reported to have received support,

Ile de France Near U. S. With 1,677 Refugees

Secret Westward Crossing Expected to End This Morning

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 8.—The secret westward Atlantic crossing of the French liner Ile de France—carrying 1,667 passengers fleeing from Europe's war—neared an end tonight, while prospects brightened for getting other thousands of Americans back from Europe in a hurry.

The big French ship, it was learned, was due to reach quarantine in New York Harbor tonight and was to dock in the morning, ending a voyage in which she was cut off completely from both sides of the Atlantic because of the danger of enemy attacks. For five days her radio was silent and her whereabouts a mystery.

Two British passenger ships, meanwhile, sailed from New York for Europe. They were the Cunard White Star Georgic, the first British liner to leave since Sunday, and the Cunard's Samaria.

Ships Camouflaged

While in port, both had been camouflaged with coats of gray paint. The Georgic carried 152 passengers but only one American, J. Dickson Carr, a writer who lives in London. Also aboard were 600 crew members of the Queen Mary, which the British are leaving here indefinitely rather than risk the homeward voyage. The Samaria had 66 passengers, all British.

The outlook for removing Americans from European countries was improved by two developments:

The United States Maritime Commission ordered four more American ships withdrawn from their regular coastwise runs for transatlantic service as the National Maritime Union (C. I. O.) offered the services of seamen to man ships without pay provided the owners carried passengers free and eliminated cargoes.

The offer of the N. M. U. was telegraphed to President Roosevelt by Joseph Curran, president of the union, who said he could get crews on a volunteer basis.

More Ships Ready

The ships ordered for European service by the maritime commission were the Shawnee and Iroquois, of the Clyde-Mallory Line, and the St. John and Acadia, of the Eastern Steamship Line. The former are sister ships with estimated capacity of 500 passengers each if all available space is utilized.

The Shawnee arrived today from Jacksonville, Fla., and Miami. The Iroquois, on a West Indies cruise, is expected to dock Wednesday.

The Acadia and St. John also are sister ships and can probably carry 750 passengers each. The Acadia arrived today from Bermuda; the St. John is due Sunday from Nova Scotia.

The liner Manhattan will sail at noon tomorrow as scheduled so far as the N. M. U. is concerned, Curran announced. After a union meeting on the liner, Curran disclosed that the United States Lines would be unable to pay the extra compensation sought by the union for risking the perils of travel in the war zone.

Curran said, however, he believed the maritime commission might arrange compensation for the seamen. Curran said seamen also were signing on the New York & Cuba Mail liner Orizaba, which had been ordered into European service.

Food Plentiful, Says Roosevelt

surpluses and adding that in case of need Government quotas can be modified or removed altogether.

"These sugar runs will stop when people find that stocks are plentiful," he declared.

Going down the commodity list—lard, butter, flour, etc.—he showed that there is no cause for concern anywhere. This is the third year of good corn crops, he said, which gives assurance of ample livestock.

"I only hope the farmers will get justice," he said. "They cannot profiteer because their crops are so abundant." He expressed confidence that producer, wholesaler, retailer and consumer alike will do "the patriotic thing."

At his press conference the President emphasized that there would be no repetition of the fantastic food prices which this country experienced two decades ago, that there is an ample supply of every commodity and fears of a shortage are without foundation.

The present grocery stampede, said Mr. Roosevelt, came about when a lot of well-meaning people, learning that a few items had gone up in price, were panicked into large-scale buying, which had the effect of sending other commodities upward.

Although the President made it clear that antiprofiteering legislation will not be sought at the special session of Congress he plans to call, Attorney General Murphy yesterday reiterated his belief that existing laws on the subject are "inadequate to do a real job."

Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that even with the rises during the past few days in sugar, flour, lard, beans and other edibles, prices are, on the whole, still quite low, compared with the normal level sought by the Administration.

Merchants Blamed In Part

Hoarders are victimizing themselves, said D. E. Montgomery, director of the Consumers Division, Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Through their large volume buying, they are running up prices which may remain at relatively high levels even after hoarding has been stopped, Montgomery declared. The current rise, he said, provides an opportunity to increase profit margins along the line between producer and consumer, and once these adjustments are made, it is not easy to tighten them up again, he said.

He placed part of the blame for the current food boom on unscrupulous or misinformed merchants who encourage customers to believe a food shortage and skyrocketing prices are on the way because of the European war.

"We canvassed the local wholesale situation today," said Montgomery, "and found that one large warehouse was completely out of sugar and another had only a small amount left.

"This sugar run has disrupted the distribution system. There is plenty of it, but the refineries can't ship it here fast enough to meet the abnormal demand."

The president of a large Washington grocery chain said he thought "the rises are pretty well stopped" and credited Secretary Wallace's reassurances of Thursday and yesterday for the apparent slackening of the hoarding trend.

"We've done all in our power to discourage large-scale buying by individuals," said the executive, who asked not to be quoted by name. "Our stores have not limited quantities to purchasers, however, because to do so only stimulates fear of an impending shortage."

He pointed out that the increases on lard, flour and pork are not without justification, in that they have been too low. He cited the following anomalous situation: Lard sold at 10 cents a pound yesterday in the chain stores of which he is president, 2 cents cheaper than the wholesale price.

Not only has this chain system had difficulty supplying customers with sugar this week, but it has been unable to buy enough potatoes for the last three or four days, its head asserted. The reason for this, he explained, is that farmers are refusing to sell, anticipating better prices if they wait.

The National Association of Food Chains, with headquarters in Washington, yesterday informed Secretary Wallace that its member companies throughout the country will co-operate in preserving reasonable prices.

A press announcement pointed out that John A. Logan, president of the association, informed Wallace on September 1 that in view of chaotic conditions abroad and any emergency situations which might arise in this country, "it is the desire and intent of organized chain food distributors to continue to maintain low-profit ratios and reasonable spreads between the prices producers receive and consumers pay."

The Sanitary Grocery Co., of Washington, is a member of the association.

The association, said Logan, offered:

4. To make available the experience and facilities of chain food companies for purchasing, assembling, warehousing, transporting and distributing food products.

To continue to co-operate with the producers of crops in an effort to maintain satisfactory markets.

To co-operate with designated agencies of government to acquaint consumers, producers and processors with any needed adjustments.

To make available the research, statistical and co-ordinating facilities of the association and to assist in the development and execution of plans and programs as needed.

"The wave of consumer buying which has increased prices of some commodities apparently was not necessitated by any fundamental shortage of food products," said the announcement. "A quick survey among chain food companies in various sections of the country reveals adequate stocks of necessary foodstuffs with price increases only where required by increased costs.

James McNamara, international vice president of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance, yesterday sent the following telegram to President Roosevelt:

"A half million hotel workers receiving an average approximate monthly wage of less than $70 are vitally concerned in threatened unwarranted raise in prices of foodstuffs and other necessities. We ask the intervention of Government and the establishment, if necessary, of agencies to prevent such occurrence, to stop profiteering and to alleviate the deprivation and suffering which will necessarily follow."

Status of Food Supplies

Capital War Zone Refugee Returns With Her Gas Mask

Mrs. Melville B. Grosvenor (right), of 2901 Woodland drive northwest, brought the gas mask with her when she returned on liner Manhattan from Paris with Mrs. William A. Morgan (left), of 2610 Thirty-first street northwest. She bought it ten days ago for 200 francs when aides at the American Embassy warned her that the reserve stock was running low

An olive drab cylinder, packed with a gas mask and priced at 200 francs, was opened in Washington yesterday—souvenir of Mrs. Melville B. Grosvenor's hastily ended European trip.

Mrs. Grosvenor, who lives at 2901 Woodland drive northwest, bought the gas mask ten days ago when American Embassy aides in Paris warned her that reserve stocks were running low.

"I didn't really think I'd have to use it," she said yesterday, "but when you saw all the French people carrying them it seemed a good idea to have one." She had to pay duty on the mask, incidentally, when she came through the customs Wednesday in New York.

Mrs. Grosvenor returned on the S. S. Manhattan with Mrs. William A. Morgan, 2610 Thirty-first street northwest, with whom she spent a month in Italy and France.

Last Sunday had an unreal quality, she said. News of Britain's declaration of war came through a few minutes before church services held on the open deck because the ship's parlors were crowded with cots and baggage. Later in the day came wild rumors of the Bremen's capture, then the first report of the sinking of the Athenia.

"The spirit on the boat was wonderful," she recalled. "Nobody did any grumbling. I thought the United States Lines did a grand job."

The Washington women first tried to take the German liner Hansa for New York. They waited two hours on a tender in Cherbourg harbor, as the vessel turned back to Hamburg under orders from the German government. They returned to Paris rapidly mobilizing.

"Waiters would serve you, and then announce they were leaving for the front in a few hours. You came down one morning to find all the hotel bellboys replaced by old men."

There was no outward excitement in Paris on the edge of war, Mrs. Grosvenor said. "Everyone seemed calm. When we took the train to Havre to catch the Manhattan, we saw the 40 and 8 boxcars on sidings, soldiers 18 and 19 years old sitting on the hay, eating bread and cheese."

Passengers watched anxiously as the Manhattan maneuvered into the heavily mined Southampton and Cobh harbors, she said, but once at sea, "nobody even imagined they saw a submarine."

Mrs. Grosvenor is the wife of the assistant editor of the National Geographic Magazine.

Confession In Louisiana Trial Names Dr. Smith

New Orleans, Sept. 8 (INS).—The Federal Government, nearing the close of its testimony against five prominent Louisianans for alleged mail fraud, late today exploded a bombshell when it introduced an alleged confession of one of the defendants, John Emory Adams.

Frank W. Lohn, acting special agent for the Internal Revenue Bureau, testified Adams confessed he never received any money as a result of the $75,000 resale of Bienville Hotel furniture, but reported it on his income tax statement as a "favor" to Dr. James Monroe Smith, former president of Louisiana State University.

The alleged confession caught the defense completely by surprise. Ben Daly, attorney for Dr. Smith, unsuccessfully objected to its admission, charging, in view of it, his client was entitled to severance of trial.

War Cripples Latin Trade Of Germany

Republics Will Have To Turn to U. S. for Imports, Experts Say

Nazi Germany's ocean trade has been swept from the seas by the war, crumpling the system of barter agreements built up with Latin American governments and some other countries, foreign trade experts said yesterday.

The result has been to deprive a number of Latin American countries of much of their accustomed sources of supply in such goods as steel and pharmaceutical products, electrical equipment, heavy machinery, optical and scientific instruments.

These countries, it is pointed out, naturally will have to turn to other sources of supply, and the United States stands the best chance of getting the additional business. The Administration is anxious to help American businessmen take the fullest advantage of their opportunity.

Fair Prices Stressed

The thing which officials emphasize most, however, is the need for supplying highest quality American manufactures to Latin America at "fair prices." In the last war, there was considerable criticism of the quality of American products sold to these countries as well as the prices charged.

Trade and related matters, such as finance, exchange and transportation, informed sources said, will be on the agenda of the neutrality conference at Panama City, which probably will begin September 21.

At a meeting next Tuesday of the Pan American Union's governing board, of which Secretary of State Hull is chairman, representatives of the various American governments will suggest subjects for consideration at the conference.

Welles to Represent U. S.

President Roosevelt announced yesterday that Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles would be this country's representative at the meeting.

Latin America has been cut off not only from Germany as a source of supply for manufactured goods. The war dislocation extends to imports from other European countries. The disruption of trade with Europe is said to have become a serious problem for many countries.

For one thing, they find themselves "holding the bag" in varying degrees as a result of the barter agreements with Germany. Raw materials had been sold to the Reich, and payment was to be made in manufactured goods. But, due to delays in shipments from Germany, some caused by the intense concentration on production of war materials, credits granted to Germany accumulated.

Debts Now Doubtful

Now Germany is at war, and there is a question whether Latin American countries granting these credits will ever receive payment for their raw materials.

German ocean trade, military experts say, has virtually ceased. It is possible Germany may receive needed raw materials from overseas countries, such as copper, cotton and oil, to a limited extent through neutral European countries. But the extent to which this will be true is speculative.

Germany had built up trade arrangements with a number of Latin-American countries. Compensation and barter agreements, however, had been made with Brazil, Colombia, Argentina, Chile and Uruguay. Trade arrangements had been made with Canada, and with South Africa and some Asiatic countries.

Technically speaking, these agreements still exist, but operation under them has ceased. German ships, which carried much of the trade, have been called home or interned in neutral ports. And submarines, however menacing, are not equipped to carry on trade.

U. S. Continues Hunt for Plane

Cristobal, C. Z., Sept. 8 (AP).—Despite four days of fruitless search, Army authorities decided tonight to continue looking for the United States Army plane piloted by Lieut. H. A. Jenkins which has been missing since Monday.

Unfavorable weather has considerably hampered the search conducted by planes from Albrook Field, commanded by Lieut. Col. A. G. Ilkinson. The search, henceforth, will be limited to daylight hours.

Fair Chute Holds 2 Aloft Half Hour

New York, Sept. 8 (U.P.).—Two women passengers in the parachute ride at the World's Fair remained aloft 35 minutes tonight when the unit in which they were riding jammed 220 feet above the ground.

When the passengers, Mrs. Lottie Keller, 36, and Mrs. Sallie Mackenzie, 33, of New York, were brought down both announced that they wanted another ride.

Armed Forces To Be Highest Since the War

Standing Army and Navy Will Comprise 431,000 Under Order

By John G. Norris

America's armed forces will attain their highest level since World War demobilization days under a 100,000-man expansion of the military and naval services ordered yesterday by President Roosevelt.

A total of 431,000 officers and men will make up the standing Army and Navy when the increase is realized, and counting the National Guard and Reserves, the aggregate will swell to 880,000. It was ordered, President Roosevelt told his press conference, to fill gaps in the national defense program and provide additional men needed for neutrality enforcement duties.

To enroll the additional men, the War and Navy departments prepared to launch the most intensive recruiting campaign in peace-time history. Including personnel increases previously authorized, the services expect to recruit 133,000 men between now and next summer.

Most to Be Volunteers

Almost all the additional men will be volunteers, officials declared. While some reserve personnel will be ordered into service, it was said, no one will be called who does not consent to serve.

A $2,000,000,000 defense budget for the current year became likely as the result of the expansion and corollary measures expected to be presented in a deficiency appropriation bill when Congress convenes. Already, $1,800,000,000 has been made available in direct funds or contract authorizations for defense purposes this year.

Increases Authorized

The increases authorized by the President are:

Regular Army—Seventeen thousand men, from 210,000 anticipated by next June 30 under a previously authorized expansion, to 227,000.

Navy—Twenty-nine thousand men, from an anticipated 116,000 by next June, to 145,000.

Marine Corps—Six thousand men, from an expansion to 19,000 already started, to 25,000.

National Guard—45,000 men, from approximately 190,000 to 235,000 exclusive of officers.

Reserves to Be Called

Additional officers will also be added by calling in reserves and retired personnel, it was said, bringing the total to approximately 100,000. War Department officials said, however, that not more than a few hundred additional reserve officers would be called to active duty, and that few National Guard officers would be added as the new men will go into existing units.

Secretary of War Woodring, in announcing details of the expansion, said it was "designed for the sole purpose of strengthening our protective land forces in view of existing world conditions and the recently ordered transfer of troops to Panama and Puerto Rico."

He and other officials emphasized that with the increases, the Army will still be 53,000 men short of its authorized peace-time strength, the National Guard 190,000 men short of such strength, and the Navy some 46,000 short of its top strength.

Destroyers Refurbished

The additional men, it was said, will be used to man old destroyers now being fitted for active service in the Atlantic coast patrol, to give naval vessels full crews instead of the 85 per cent complements most of them now have, and to bolster up Army garrisons depleted to strengthen the Panama Canal and Puerto Rico.

To stimulate recruiting the Navy advanced the maximum recruiting age from 25 to 31, and lowered the passing mark on entrance examinations from 85 to 50 per cent. The minimum age is 18. Former members of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard may be enlisted if less than 35 years old, and former Navy men will be accepted in their former ranks, if they have been out of the service less than 8 years.

FBI Takes Charge of Blocking Sabotage of U. S. Airways

Protection of the Nation's 25,000-mile airways system against saboteurs and foreign espionage agents has been undertaken as a national defense measure by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, it was revealed last night.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority disclosed an intricate system of safeguard has been worked out, by which the FBI forces, with J. Edgar Hoover as chief, are aiding the authority and the aviation industry in guaranteeing uninterrupted efficiency of the airways.

This includes a careful scrutiny of all airlines passengers, an increased guard over 2,374 airports, 300 emergency landing fields, and 11,160 certificated commercial and private airplanes, considered a valuable equipment "backlog" for aerial national defense.

FBI agents have been riding the passenger airlines all over the country for three weeks in a confidential, precautionary drive which was in full motion before actual outbreak of the European war, it was learned.

All foreign passengers have been "checked out" on departures and arrivals and their activities carefully followed, on land and in the air.

Heavy end of the task is to provide adequate protection against sabotage for the Federal Government's land equipment, including 2,497 airway lighting beacons, "guideposts" for pilots; 230 radio beacon stations, 348 weather reporting stations, 182 Weather Bureau first-order stations, 23,771 miles of teletype service, and thousands of airways "markers."

Alteration or destruction of any of these might produce serious aircraft accidents and dislocation of air traffic, officials said. Even the radio beams, the aerial highways of present-day pilots, must be kept clear of wireless interference.

Indian Runs 30 Hours in Wilds to Carry War News

Juneau, Alaska, Sept. 8 (AP).—An Indian runner made a forced 30-hour march through Alaskan wilds to inform a member of the United States Emergency War Council that Europe was at war.

Gen. Robert E. Wood, one of the five war council members, and head of Sears, Roebuck & Co., told the story as he arrived today on a Pacific Alaska Airways plane.

Wood, Russell B. Stearns and H. Wendell Endicott, Boston, and Col. William Donovan, New York City, were hunting in the Donjek River country when the Indian stumbled into their camp last Saturday with the news German-Polish hostilities had begun.

The Wood party, which had been seeking sheep and grizzly bears for American museums, immediately headed for civilization.

District A.F.G.E. Backing Custer For Presidency

Delegates to the eighth annual convention of the American Federation of Government Employes, opening in Atlantic City for four days beginning Monday, will leave on special cars at 1 P. M. tomorrow—with an almost unanimous opinion that Cecil E. Custer, Civil Service Commission assistant budget officer, will be elected president.

The election will be a convention high-light. To date, several local groups of the A. F. G. E. have indorsed Custer for the presidency. He has not indicated that he would accept. In any event, a president will have to be chosen inasmuch as Col. Charles I. Stengle, president since 1936, has announced that he will not seek the office again.

Castle Urges Neutrality Act Be Rescinded

Calls Arms Embago Foolish; Says Change Later Might Mean War

By the Associated Press

Rehoboth Beach, Del., Sept. 8.—William R. Castle, former Under Secretary of State, declared tonight the United States "should rescind the so-called neutrality law and return frankly to the tried and tested principles of international law."

In a speech prepared for delivery before the Delaware Bankers Association, Castle said repeal of the neutrality act "would do away with the foolish and dangerous arms embargo which appears to work against the Democratic nations only and will in time, therefore, excite such disgust at home that Congress will be forced to change it." A change later, Castle warned, "might well involve us in war."

U. S. Held Hitler Ally

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 8 (INS).—That the present American neutrality laws make the United States "an ally of Hitler," was the charge voiced today by Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, jr., U. S. N. retired, before the State American Legion convention here.

After declaring he considered the present conflict a continuation of the last war, he added:

"If we were correct in fighting in the last war, which I believe we were, then we belong beside Great Britain and France today, against Hitler and all he stands for."

Against Sending Troops

Los Angeles, Sept. 8 (AP).—Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee said tonight he was unalterably opposed to sending American troops abroad "under any circumstances."

Senator Pittman, leader of the group that proposes abolition of the existing embargo on manufactured implements of war, said he believed there would be a special session of Congress to settle that question.

"The embargo is not effective," he told newsmen, "because materials with which to make implements of war can be shipped to be manufactured by the belligerents. There are some absurdities. All castings and many parts for airplanes and guns and shells under the embargo can be shipped to Canada, where they can be put together, often in factories financed by American capital. Yet, the economic benefits accrue to Canada, not the United States."

Ex-Aide Calls Earl Browder Stalin Puppet

Dies Repeats Proposal Reds, Nazis Be Jailed As Foreign Agents

By John B. Oakes

Prosecution of Communist Party and Nazi Bund leaders as agents of foreign governments was envisaged yesterday by Chairman Dies of the House Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities.

After hearing Benjamin Gitlow, former general secretary of the Communist Party in the United States, charge that the party is directly controlled by the Communist International in Moscow, Dies reiterated a demand for Federal action which he first made several months ago.

"The evidence is even clearer now," Dies declared.

Earl Browder, present general secretary of the party, was characterized by his former comrade as a puppet or "pet boy" of Stalin. Browder reached his present position "as a result of the direct interference of Joseph Stalin in the affairs of our party," said Gitlow, who before his expulsion from the party in 1929 was twice Communist vice presidential candidate.

Stalin Personally Interested

The burly witness related with some feeling how Stalin and Molotov, the latter then as now premier of the U. S. S. R., "considered absolute control of the Communist Party of the United States so important that they found time to give attention to our problems."

Two or three times in the day's testimony, Dies referred to the possibility of Federal prosecution of the Communist Party on the grounds of violation of the Federal statute requiring registration of agents of foreign governments. He coupled Nazis with the Communists.

"There's ample law covering this," remarked Dies.

"Then that law ought to be invoked," asserted Representative Mason, of Illinois, one of the two Republicans on the committee.

Gitlow testified that during his connection with the party, plans were made to penetrate the armed forces of the United States. He presented an order sent out in 1928 by Jay Lovestone, executive secretary, to all party units, urging "manifold increase in our work among the armed forces" and "strengthening our apparatus for illegal work." At that time, Gitlow said, the Comintern (Communist International) expected a war to break out soon against Russia.

Espionage Charged

Communists penetrated the National Guard and the Citizen's Military Training Corps as well as the Regular Army and organized a Workers' Ex-servicemen's League, Gitlow said. They also devoted attention to the chemical industry, coal, steel, automobiles and the maritime industry, he declared.

"Secrets" of military importance have been transmitted to Moscow, he said, adding that this "also applies to those who are in Government positions of trust." However, when Dies asked if the party had made plans to "penetrate the Government" by obtaining Federal posts for party members, Gitlow said the question had been discussed in the party without result.

Gitlow alleged that the Communist Party was never without representatives of the Comintern to see to it that Comintern orders were carried out. Despite Browder's testimony early in the week that he had known of only one such representative, Gitlow named several.

"Browder knew them all," he caustically declared "I think he must be in his second childhood, he forgets so much." Every one of the Comintern representatives entered the United States "with fictitious passports," said Gitlow. During their stay in this country, they were "bosses" of the American party, he asserted.

Brophy to Be Called

Gitlow said he was removed from the executive committee of both the Comintern and the American party. Browder subsequently became secretary, said Gitlow, "because Stalin said he 'could be depended on to carry out orders.'"

"Stalin pulls the strings and Browder does the dance," Gitlow alleged.

Mason told Gitlow he had presented "an ironbound case" to prove that the party is "nothing but an agent of the Comintern and therefore is at least indirectly an agent of the Soviet goverment."

One of the few points on which Gitlow agreed with Browder's testimony was a statement that Jews play merely a minor role in the Communist Party. In response to Dies' sugestion that "the majority of Communist leadership is not Jewish," Gitlow added that "there is absolutely no basis in fact" for the charge that Jews are dominant in communism.

The committee decided to give John Brophy, C. I. O. director, a chance to appear before it to explain his alleged former Communist connections. Gitlow states Brophy received Communist aid in his fight for the presidency of the United Mine Workers in 1927 and 1928 against John L. Lewis, now C. I. O. chieftain.

General Attacks Reds

San Francisco, Sept. 8 (AP).—Maj. Gen. David P. Barrows told today of what he described as efforts of the Communist Party to "soften" the authority of governments and to turn every labor strike toward violence.

Testifying at the Harry Bridges deportation hearing, the professor of political science at the University of California and wartime officer with the A. E. F., paused briefly and said:

"I speak humbly here because I think there is a better authority in the room."

He looked at Bridges with hardly a perceptible nod. Bridges did not change his expression.

The Government seeks to deport Bridges on the grounds he is a Communist.

Audience Hisses as Germans Slay Nurse Cavell in Movie

Lovely Anna Neagle, British film star, made her first Washington appearance yesterday as she stepped off the train at Union Station into the hands of District Commissioner McCoach. Anna was here to see the world premiere of her picture, "Nurse Edith Cavell," at RKO-Keith's Theater last night

World War Atrocity Film Stirs Crowd Watching World Premiere Here; Lights Playing on Building Create Raid Scare

A Washington movie audience, partly hand-picked "for its discriminating taste," last night hissed the Germans who executed the war nurse, Edith Cavell.

The movie, having a world premiere in one showing here at the Keith R. K. O. Theater last night, brought to the screen a stark portrayal of the dawn execution of the English nurse, October 12, 1915, in Brussels, Belgium.

The first hiss occurred when a graphic map appeared, depicting the war-ravaged areas of Belgium with a superimposed legend: "Deutchland Uber Alles." Ensuing hisses came as the Germans, striding in hob-nail through Brussels streets, spun a web more and more closely about the nurse who, with sundry colorful accomplices, was aiding wounded soldiers to flee beyond a neutral frontier.

Outside the theater, two giant searchlights weaved on the sky, playing intermittently on the theater. Citizens watched it. Some grew frantic, thinking war had reached America, that the National Capital was being bombed. They telephoned places of public information:

"Is there an air raid? Is the United States in the war? What is happening?" the questions flew.

It was the 260th Coast Artillery antiaircraft unit of the District National Guard having one of its regular drills with lights.

Within the theater, the audience watched Edith Cavell, finally ensnared by the German intelligence service, taken to prison and to a military court. There was a good German, a sympathetic man behind a monocle, who previously had found some inkling of Miss Cavell's activities and kept silent on the score.

He walked the scene as a symbol, possibly of the goodness in German people generally; he had encouraging words for Miss Cavell and the audience applauded him.

Star Also Appears

In the end, when the six Mauser rifles had crashed across the courtyard and Hugh Gibson, American aid in Brussels, had failed to save the doomed woman, a legendary summation appeared, calling on all men to entertain peace and brotherliness one to another.

The movie company representatives intimated that there was a dual purpose in bringing the film here in advance of its formal release. A movie depicting Germans in disadvantage should be tested here against the future possibility of changes of propaganda, it was said.

The director, Herbert Wilcox, and the English star, Anna Neagle, made personal appearances.

Shows War's Futility

"There is no propaganda and no 'message' in the Hollywood term," Wilcox commented yesterday. "It simply portrays the futility of war. Every effort was made to be impartial," he went on. Ninety per cent of the script was factual and the research was lengthy, he said.

Miss Neagle, relaxing in her hotel here, and attired in a black crepe dress that clung to the waist, insisted that much of the historic occurence was left out of the film, it seeming too melodramatic.

Poles Here Belittle Reported Capture Of Gasiorowski

The Polish Press Bureau here yesterday belittled German reports that Gen. Janusz Gasiorowski, Polish military leader, was captured in battle soon after the outbreak of hostilities.

"Immediately prior to the outbreak of German Polish hostilities," the bureau reported, "Gen. Gasiorowski was confined to a military hospital in Czestochowa suffering from a dangerous intestinal disorder.

"If, therefore, the general fell into the enemy's hands during the occupation of Czestochowa the capture took place on a hospital bed and not on the field of battle."

U. S. Developing Planes Faster Than Sound

By the Associated Press

By the end of the year the United States may have airplanes so speedy that they cannot be heard until after they have passed over a city.

Such planes would fly at 500 miles an hour, because of the development of a new type of wing by technicians for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics at Langley Field, Va. This is one of the most secret of all secret military inventions.

The speed of sound is approximately 475 miles an hour. Therefore, an airplane traveling 500 miles an hour cannot be heard until after it has passed a given point.

Powers Just Sparring So Far, Says Rep. Dingell

Representative Dingell (Democrat), of Michigan), predicted upon his return from Europe today that "Mr. Hitler may have his hide stuffed" before he finishes his war upon Poland.

"The European powers are just sparring now," Dingell said. "The world probably has some real surprises coming from Poland."

Mrs. Melvin Hazen Is Resting Easily After Operation

Mrs. Melvin C. Hazen, wife of the District Commissioner, who yesterday underwent an abdominal operation, was reported "resting comfortably" at Emergency Hospital last night.

Mrs. Hazen has been ill for some time. When her condition became worse Thursday afternoon, Dr. John H. Lyons, the family physician, hurried her to the hospital. The Commissioner was conducting hearings on the 1941 District budget and did not know his wife had been taken to Emergency until late in the day.

It was indicated last night that Commissioner Hazen would continue plans to visit the New York World's Fair for District Day today unless his wife's condition takes a turn for the worse.

French, Nazis Swim in Rhine

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 8 (AP).—Germans and Frenchmen today went swimming on their respective banks of the Rhine, in plain view of each other.

North of Huningue, near the Swiss border, the sector was so quiet men on both sides doffed uniforms, kicked off field boots and dived overboard. No one tried to swim the river, however.

Carey Says Business Seeks No War Profits

C. of C. President Urges Solution of Domestic Problems

W. Gibson Carey, jr., president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said last night that businessmen "wish no profit advantage" from the European war.

In a message to all members of the chamber, Carey said that the essential task of business is to "build our national strength on self-discipline, productivity and good will."

Domestic Problems First

He said the membership must work assiduously to solve such domestic problems as unemployment, relief, labor relations, farm prices and taxes.

Because a strong national fiscal position is of vital importance now, he urged that everything be done to persuade localities and States to cease demanding or even accepting unnecessary Federal funds.

"In any changing situation which may occur, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States is ready for service," he added.

His message said further:

"We businessmen, as all others, are aghast at the prospect of slaughter and misery abroad. We wish no profit advantage through the wrecking of great cultural and spiritual values which have been built painfully and slowly through generations of thought and effort. We want peace in the world. . . .

Time for Tolerance

"This is the time for maximum effort, great tolerance and fervent prayer. . . .

"I believe I am expressing the views of businessmen generally when I say that the course of action indicated will be in accord with our interests as a nation, and that it will be welcomed by a Federal Government which will unquestionably have many pressing problems to solve. In this way, business improvement may be encouraged to the end that the return of men to useful employment may continue."

Poles at Mass Here Vow To Fight Always for Country

Ambassador Potocki Heads List of Worshipers; After Services They Sing, 'As Long as We Live, Poland Will Live . . .'

By Lucia Giddens

"As long as we live, Poland will never be lost . . ."

The organ throbbed with the Polish national anthem, and its words echoed in the minds of people at the solemn mass for the welfare of Poland yesterday at the Church of St. Paul.

Fresh from reading the morning's headlines on the thunder of battle, the people filed into the hush of the church at Fifteenth and V streets northwest, where two red and white flags of Poland hung in the candlelight.

Czech Attaches Attend

Already scores of persons had gathered there—diplomats, housewives holding their children by the hand, persons who were born in Poland and persons whose only connection with Poland was the sympathy of one human being for another.

Near the front sat two men in deeply meditative mood. They had come from the Czecho-Slovakian legation. In the light of what has happened to their country in the past year, Dr. Karel Cervenka, first secretary of the legation, and Dr. Vladimir Palic, counselor, wore expressions reflecting sympathy for Poland's plight.

Jacques Dumaine, first secretary of the French Embassy sat across the aisle from representatives of the country fighting shoulder to shoulder with his own. Count Antoin Tarnowski, new second secretary at the Polish Embassy, was there, having just arrived a few days ago on the Batory. The tall solemn-faced man beside him was Rafal Lepkowski, also secretary at the embassy.

Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, and his sisters, Miss Ida Guffey and Miss Pauletta Guffey, sat near the front.

Expressions Disclosed Hope

Somber Polish music flowed from the organ. The expressions on the faces in the dim light held forebodings, but hope too flickered through.

The Rev. C. J. Dacey, pastor of the church, in white vestments, celebrated the mass. To the regular litany was added: "Our lady, queen of the Polish throne." Then the several hundred people prayed.

The Polish national anthem sounded, bringing everyone to their feet. They filed out into the sunshine to crowd around the Ambassador, and to echo the words of the anthem.

In the crowd was the Rev. Ladislaus Kosinski, of Krakow, Poland, who was worried about what may happen to the Polish youths whom he has been teaching there. He had intended to go back to Poland next month.

Out on the sidewalk the words of the anthem seemed to follow the crowd . . .

"As long as we live, Poland will never be lost."

Navy to Broadcast Warnings to Ships

The Navy Hydrographic Office here announced yesterday that, in order that American shipping may be safeguarded as far as possible during the present European situation," special warnings will be broadcast to navigators.

First of these issued by Capt. G. S. Bryan, the Navy hydrographer, sent out an announcement from Berlin that two areas in the western part of the Baltic Sea had been mined. Another reported that ship examination offices have been set up at nine Canadian ports to search vessels entering their territorial waters.

Canadian Fliers Will Be Sent To Aid Britain

Premier Pledges Support to Mother Country

Ottawa, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press). Canada will stand shoulder to shoulder with Great Britain in the war against Nazi Germany or find another government, Prime Minister MacKenzie King told the House of Commons tonight.

Conforming to his announced policy of leaving the issue of Canadian participation in the European war to Parliament itself, the premier outlined his plans and asked the house to support him.

"If the house wi" not support us in these policies it will have to find another government," he declared to an applauding assembly.

On the question of peace or war for Canada, the premier said:

"That is not decided yet. The government has made its decision as to what its policy is. It has announced that policy. But it is for the honorable members of this House to say whether they stand by that policy."

The Liberal premier said Canada's immediate steps would be the defense of Canadian territory and nearby British territory, such as Newfoundland, co-operation in economic measures aimed at Germany, and the furnishing of arms and supplies to Great Britain.

Canadian airmen, however, may enter the war at once and they probably will be the first Canadian fighters to see active service, it was indicated.

"The information we have obtained," said Mackenzie King, indicates that the most immediate and effective further means of co-operation would be a rapid expansion of air training and of air and naval facilities and the dispatch of trained air personnel. These measures we propose to institute immediately."

A few minutes before the Premier spoke, the Conservative leader, R. J. Manion, declared himself for participation in the war and pledged his support to the government in its policies. He said there is no doubt that Canada actually is at war.

The Prime Minister, in detailing the government's policy, said it would continue in close consultation with the British government.

He asserted Canada's coastal defense and internal security were the first things required from the government. Then, he added, a variety of economic measures would be taken to prevent profiteering, to maintain essential services and bring industry and agriculture to the highest efficiency.

Slip Reveals Nazi Pretending He's On Warsaw Radio

Budapest (Saturday), Sept. 9 (AP). An announcer speaking Polish with a German accent broke in on a Polish radio station at 12:15 a. m. today (6:15 p. m., Friday, Eastern standard time), and called upon Poles to "lay down your arms for your leaders have deserted you."

The speaker, obviously German, pretended to be speaking not only from the Warsaw station, but also from the station at Lwow, which is still far behind the Polish lines.

The speaker made a slip when, after announcing he was the Warsaw radio announcer, he used the phrase "When we enter Warsaw tomorrow."

U. S. Must Defend Air Frontier, Johnson Says

Air progress has added a new frontier to America—the air frontier—and the Nation must provide an adequate air defense to guard it, Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson declared last night.

Speaking over a Nation-wide radio hook-up to inaugurate a two-week observance of "Air Progress," Johnson reviewed the national defense program authorized by Congress last session and declared the two-year expansion plan will be completed on time.

"As we look across the sea to troubled Europe, now torn by conflict," he stated, "every sane American will applaud the President of the United States for his foresight and vision in planning and building an adequate defense for this Nation—air, sea and ground."

An indication of the armament production possible in this country was given by the Assistant War Secretary in citing how aircraft production expanded in the World War. The aircraft industry, he said, grew from an annual production of fewer than 50 planes in 1916, to an organization which by 1918 could produce 23,000 planes and 30,000 engines.

Five More Ships Sunk in Day crew of 44 after a submarine torpedo attack.

It was confirmed yesterday, too, that the British freighter Pukkastan, 5,809 tons, had been sunk and its crew saved, and it was reported, but unconfirmed, that the French freighter Tamara, 3,747 tons, had been sent to the bottom. The U. S. Line's American Farmer reported Thursday that both of these had been attacked off the European coast.

Greater British Tonnage Sunk

Counting both the Winkleigh and the Tamara, the British-French loss to date in tonnage was 56,930, compared with the Nazis' 14,764. Shipping observers pointed out the greater British loss was natural because of the far greater number of British vessels in operation.

Lloyd's Register as of July, 1939, showed Britain had 6,722 steamers and motorships in its merchant service, compared with Germany's 2,459, France's 1,231 and Poland's 63.

Germany, according to reliable reports, had 71 submarines when the new European war started. At the outbreak of the World War, she was believed to have had only 28 U-boats but by a rapid building program raised the number more than five-fold by the time her undersea campaign reached its peak in 1917.

War on Radio Goes to Any Wave Length

Warsaw Taken, Nazis Say; Just Our Air, The Poles Retort

By the Associated Press

Budapest (Saturday), Sept. 9.—A broadcaster speaking Polish with a German accent on the Warsaw station's wave length announced early today the Polish capital was being entered, and warned all residents punishment would be meted out to Poles found with weapons when the city "finally falls."

Meanwhile, another announcer, professing to speak from the Polish station, denied the capital had fallen, and stated "the Germans have taken our wave length." The Polish station said, "everyone in Warsaw is at his post."

The Warsaw radio broadcast a general order to the army from the chief of staff to his soldiers, saying:

"Soldiers, you must defend the capital with all your strength. We have taken positions from which we cannot retreat one step.

Calls For Revenge

"The time has come to take revenge for the spilling of blood of women, children and soldiers who have fallen in Poland's defense.

"The attack of the enemy will exhaust itself against our defense. Order will prevail."

Earlier the Polish announcer stated Polish land forces in the southwest were withdrawing in the face of the face of the German onslaught.

The announcer said that German airplanes were steadily bombing the center of the city. He said bombs were raining on theaters, squares and in Warsaw's main streets.

At 10:55 p. m., the Polish station at Lwow had announced the Germans, whose motorized units had made swift progress from the north during the day, had entered the residential suburbs of Warsaw, within the city limits.

Warsaw Bridges Bombed

The station identified as Warsaw said:

"The push of the German army has been so terrific that Polish land forces have been obliged to yield in the direction of Kielce (50 miles northeast of Krakow), Piotrkow and Tarnoff, where they will take up new positions."

The station identifying itself as Warsaw asserted that German planes were dumping loads of bombs onto the Vistula River bridges in Warsaw.

"We will continue broadcasting day and night until the hostile forces prevent us from doing so," the announcer said.

At 11:40 p. m. the announcer, speaking in English, said "the Germans are bombing purely nonmilitary objectives in the central and most densely populated sector of the town."

The English speaker said:

"Due to constant heavy air raids on the bridges, the inhabitans had moved to the center of Warsaw, where now there is severe bombings.

"The entire populace, with the full support of radio warnings, now is preparing a defense in the streets, erecting barricades of all sorts and digging deep trenches in the hope of catching enemy tanks.

Trolleys Run, Shops Open

"Streetcars are running, shops are open and there is no food shortage.

"Yesterday three German pilots parachuted down in outlying villages and were immediately delivered to the proper authorities. Yesterday there were two raids on the Vistula bridges and today two more extremely heavy and prolonged raids.

"Crowds of refugees streaming in from the provinces were utterly destitute and in shocking condition. They were cared for in Warsaw."

The station interspersed its announcements with stirring military marches and songs.

"We will never give up Silesia," ran one chorus, and another said, "we will never give up Wilno."

Red Cross Calls Women

An appeal was made to all women between 18 and 35 to report immediately for Red Cross work. Girl Scouts were asked to present themselves at headquarters for duty.

All men not fit for military duty were ordered to report with spades and axes for digging trenches.

Admission that the Germans were inside the capital followed by only 40 minutes an earlier denial of a Berlin announcement that German advance motorized units had entered the city at 5:15 p. m.

The speaker, after calmly relating the desperate plight of Warsaw, announced with equal aplomb that "Poland must annex East Prussia from Germany when our victory is assured."

He said:

"We will win because we must win. We must win because our will power and dynamic force cannot forsake us.

"Whatever exists cannot perish. We must win because we fight for a just cause in Christ's name.

"We must win because through this war we can obtain East Prussia, which has been lost to us for centuries and which would mean security from the Germans for us.

"We must win because we are a young state and feel in our veins young blood. This young life looks forward to a great future for our nation."

Resistance Stiffened

East Prussian divisions at Pultusk, on the Narew River, are about 20 miles from Warsaw. They reached that position yesterday and apparently made no advance today. Meanwhile, reinforcements from East Prussia arrived at Lomza, farther up the river.

Heavy fighting was reported in the vicinity of Kielce in the Lysa Gora mountains, where troops advancing toward Lublin and the Polish industrial section, have reported meeting stiff resistance.

Lublin now is the temporary seat of Poland's government, which left Warsaw, 90 miles to the northwest, several days ago after repeated bombings.

Some departments of the government were reported in Berlin to have moved again—this time farther southeast to Lwow.

Despite French communiques announcing fighting on the western front, German officials denied emphatically tonight that any attacks had been made along the heavily fortified boundary between Germany and France.

"That fighting of any importance has taken place is completely impossible," authorized sources said. "There is no question of France's having taken any German territory. There may have been shots fired, but it would serve no good end for us to deny an action of any size if it were true.

Deny Military Action

"We can assure you there has been no military action. That a French offensive against the west wall has been successful is just as true as reports spread over the world that Berlin has been bombed. You foreign correspondents are in a position to know personally that this latter is completely untrue."

A campaign against the British (charges against France since the war started have been lacking) continued with the German official news agency publishing a list of eight cases in which it said Britain violated the neutrality of five countries since September 1. Neutrals named were the Netherlands, Denmark, Norway, Brazil and Belgium.

The published cases:

1. September 1, a military plane fell near Kyrkjeboe, Norway.
2. The nights of September 3 and 4 British planes flew over Holland to drop leaflets on German soil.
3. The Danish town of Esbjerg was bombed September 4.
4. Planes flew over Holland September 4 to attack Wilhelmshaven.
5. Planes were sighted over the Netherlands September 5 and Dutch anti-aircraft guns opened fire.
6. The British cruiser Ajax sank the German freighter Olinda in the Brazilian harbor of Rio Grande, no date given.
7. Planes flew over Antwerp, September 6.
8. A British plane attacked the German freighter Franken in Netherlands waters near Padang, Sumatra, Dutch West Indies, September 6.

A list of 16 "war atrocity lies" also was published. It contained denials of reports that Germans had sunk the British liner Athenia, or bombed open towns and Red Cross trains.

The first train returning wounded soldiers arrived in Berlin from the eastern front, and Berlin newspapers published the first lists of soldier deaths.

At the same time, the government decreed more stringent food regulations and measures against theft during "blackout" nights.

White and rye flour were rationed. Many other fundamental food supplies already had been restricted. Death was decreed for anyone caught stealing during "black nights," plundering in territories evacuated by the civil administration for military necessity, for arson on important buildings, and for hindering railways.

Three deaths were attributed to accidents caused by Berlin's blackouts. Many pedestrians have been using flashlights to trace their way along street curbs, but this was banned tonight on the grounds the flashlights blinded automobile drivers.

Reporting industrial aspects of the campaign, the German press reported reopening of the Polish-Upper Silesian mines and rolling mills to help meet Germany's demand for war materials. The Katowice mines and Chorzow furnaces and steel works were singled out as spots where production is to be stepped up.

Nazis Ready to Blast Moselle Span

Brussels, Sept. 8 (INS).—Many inhabitants of Schengen, southernmost village in Luxemburg, tonight were fleeing their homes after the Germans had warned them the bridge across the Moselle River will be blown up at the first appearance of French soldiers.

The landscape along the frontier is a strange, deserted area, and in the no man's land between the Maginot and Siegfried lines villages lie deserted and empty, crops rot in the fields and the cattle which roamed the pastures for the first few days seem to have wandered off.

Windsors Rush Home at Bid Of King George

Destroyer Waits for Them at Channel Port; Job Still Undisclosed

Cannes, France, Sept. 8 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor, ready to undertake an important wartime task for the empire which he ruled until he left as a voluntary exile three years ago, sped across France tonight on the way home with his American-born duchess.

Responding to a summons from his brother and successor, King George VI, the former Edward VIII and his wife, the former Wallis Warfield, left Cannes at 5:45 p. m. (11:45 a. m., E. S. T.) for Paris. They were bound for an undisclosed English Channel port where, it was reported, a destroyer waited to rush them to London.

Preliminary steps for Edward's return to England were taken last Saturday, the day before England declared war.

Yesterday, a messenger from King George flew from London to Cannes and was closeted for some time with the duke at his chateau on the French Riviera.

Windsor abdicated Great Britain's throne on December 10, 1936, for "the woman I love," and he left London the next day for France, where his bride-to-be already had gone. They were married June 3, 1937.

Nature of the task awaiting the duke was not disclosed. He has been reported anxious to get back home and help his country in its struggle with Germany. In the World War, Windsor, then Prince of Wales, saw service in the front lines.

Nazi Troop Train In Crash, 12 Killed

Luxemburg, Sept. 8 (U.P.).—A German troop train collided with one carrying refugees today between Metzdorf and Wintersdorf and 12 persons were killed.

Swallows Flout Tradition, South 2 Months Ahead

San Juan Capistrano, Calif. Sept. 8 (INS).—Breaking a tradition of a century and a half and providing a mystery with a hint of eeriness, the famous swallows of San Juan Capistrano have flown south two months ahead of time.

Since the founding of the mission by the Spanish padres the swallows have arrived from their southern migration precisely on St. Joseph's Day, March 19. Without variation until this year, they left on St. John's Day, October 23.

But this year the birds left in August. Why they did, Father Arthur J. Hutchinson, head of the mission was at a loss to explain.

Roosevelt Phones Hull From Train

Highland, N. Y., Sept. 8 (AP).—After a brief "precautionary checkup" on the war with Secretary Hull by telephone en route, President Roosevelt arrived here from Washington about 9 o'clock (E. S. T.) tonight.

He motored immediately to his family home at Hyde Park to spend the week-end with his 83-year-old mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, who returned from Europe just before the war broke out.

The President's talk with the Secretary of State took place when his train paused in the Jersey City, N. J., railroad yards.

'Plenty of Beer,' Berliners Told

Berlin, Sept. 8 (AP).—Residents of Berlin were reassured today they would get their beer in spite of rationed foods and delivery difficulties owing to shortage of trucks and men.

The government eased regulations on brewers, permitting them to sell to any retailer, regardless of whether he is a regular customer. Authorities have said there is plenty of beer.

May 11th, 1939.
Dear Sirs:
Since many of our members prefer Gunther's to some of Europe's most famous imported beers, we would like to serve it regularly in our Club House.
If you have a distributor here in New York City, would you kindly ask him to call on us at regular intervals, or send us the names of one or two distributors here and we will phone in our orders direct.
We trust you are enjoying the good business your fine beer deserves.
Yours very truly,
INTERNATIONAL BARMEN ASSOCIATION
Harry Bogaards, President
By this Pledge
Let it be known that Gunther's beer will always be brewed according to the highest standards of the art of brewing. We will never use any but the finest ingredients, and thus maintain the same remarkable dry lager quality.
The high cost of making Gunther's prohibits the giving away of premiums or prizes. All the value is in the beer.
Gunther's Beer

And Gunther's has just had the biggest May, June and July sales in its history. Have you tried this "Special Dry Lager" that experts rank with the world-famous brews from Europe?

IT'S A LANDSLIDE to Gunther's! Thousands are switching away from sweet-type beers . . . to this Special Dry Lager that international experts rank on a par with the world-famous brews from abroad! For sales are up. The biggest sales Gunther's has ever known in May, June and July.

What's Gunther's Got?

In the first place Gunther's is a dry beer . . . there isn't a trace of the sweetness that tends to fill you up. In the second place Gunther's has none of those extra solids that make beer heavy.

One glass shows you what the international experts mean when they say: "The U. S. A. can well be proud of Gunther's . . . it's just as dry and beer-y as any of the costly beers made in the old country."

How Can Gunther's Do It?

How can Gunther's make such a great glass of beer . . . yet charge you no more than beers regularly made and regularly sold here? There are no long haul freight charges added to your glass of Gunther's. No import charges. Most all of Gunther's beer is made here and sold here, and thus there is another saving of some 30¢ to 50¢ a case that out-of-state brewers pay "middle-men" for handling their beer for them.

Add these up plus the fact that Gunther's buys the best ingredients in the biggest volume of any brewer in the South . . . even the advertising cost on this big Gunther volume is less than one-sixth of a cent per bottle! Think those savings over and you'll know why Gunther's offers you such a beer for so little. Gunther Brewing Co., Baltimore, Md.

MARYLAND IS FAMOUS FOR GUNTHER'S DRY BEER-Y BEER

Text of Report to Secretary Hull on Athenia Sinking

The text of the cablegram from Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy to Secretary Hull relaying the report on the sinking of the Athenia follows:

Report of Commander (Norman R.) Hitchcock, assistant naval attache, and agreed to by Capt. (Alan G.) Kirk, naval attache, who together made investigation regarding Athenia survivors landed at Galway follows:

We proceeded immediately to Galway, Ireland, where we landed in an improvised field and proceeded to the dock where the tender was disembarking the refugees from the Athenia.

The officers and crew of the Athenia talked freely to Capt. Kirk and myself. They were courteous, and, under close questioning, no conflict in their stories could be discovered.

It was established by the evidence of the commander of the Athenia, the officer of the watch, the assistant officer of the watch, the quartermaster of the watch, the quartermaster off duty, but on the bridge, the chief engineer and assistant engineer officer and several other crew members that at evening twilight, three September, a torpedo struck the portside of the Athenia, slightly abaft midships in the way of the bulkhead between the fireroom and the engineroom.

Drowned Below Deck

The explosion caused a large volume of water in the outside of the ship to be blown into the air, destroyed the bulkhead between the fireroom and the engineroom, shattering the oil tank and destroying access of stairs from the third class and tourist dining saloons to the upper decks. It was impossible for the passengers trapped in the dining room to escape and they were drowned below decks.

From evidence given by a quartermaster not on watch, submarine conning tower broke surface about 800 yards on the port quarter of the Athenia. A gun or explosive signal was fired from the conning tower platform. If a gun, it was of small caliber, according to one of these men who had served for years as a gunlayer in the Royal Navy.

As the submarine was on the weather side of the Athenia the smoke from this discharge blew down over the Athenia and a distinct smell of cordite was recognized. No witness heard a shell in the air; no witness heard a shell strike the ship; only one such discharge was seen. The flash was distinctly reported by three witnesses; the smoke of the discharge was seen by the commander and many witnesses. No splash of the projective was seen. The commander of the Athenia stated that it occurred to him that the submarine might be attempting to destroy their radio but said that any statement by him that this was so was an error, as he had no evidence to this effect.

No Panic Indicated

Immediately after the explosion which sank the Athenia the officer of the watch sounded eight short blasts and one long blast of the whistle and the submarine submerged and was not again seen.

The officer of the watch immediately closed the "long arm watertight doors" which apparently prevented the ship sinking for many hours. All officers and crew and a few passengers interviewed indicated there was no panic aboard the ship, and women and children passengers, as well as the crew and men passengers were calm in going to their boat stations and in abandoning ship.

Some little difficulty was had in lowering the starboard side lifeboats as the ship primarily took a considerable list to port, but all boats got off without casualty. One boat alongside the rescue ship, Knute Nelson, drifted aft into the propellers and was sunk, resulting in the loss of several of the occupants.

The Irish authorities kept a careful list of all survivors disembarking at Galway."

Text of telegram from the American Minister to Ireland, John Cudahy, to the Secretary of State, which was filed from Galway Ireland, and received in the State Department September 5:

Athenia carrying 1,400 passengers, of which the captain tells me about one-half were American, was torpedoed 7:40 p. m., September 3, north of Ennistrahull, 10 miles beyond North Irish coast. Testimony of officers and number of American passengers I have interviewed is that ship was struck amidship and that shortly thereafter was struck again, wrecking engine room by projectile projected through air.

Witnesses state immediately after second explosion they saw a line of black smoke from water surface 800 to 1,000 yards on port side to where the ship was hit.

One witness states he saw the periscope of submarine. Second explosion hit with terrific force and ship was abandoned at 9:30 p. m.

Norwegian ship Knute Nelson, with 430 survivors, landed here this morning. Authorities, with splendid human spirit, provided shelter, provisions, clothing and hospital facilities for 10 wounded by explosion.

Capt. James Cook, of destroyed ship, tells me three British destroyers, a tanker, City of Flint, and Swedish ship, the Southern Cross, picked up other survivors, but he cannot state whether capacity of these craft was sufficient for all, nor can he give their destination. He states many killed by attack, which caught most passengers in dining room.

Cannot too highly praise efficient handling of situation by Galway and Irish government, and splendid human spirit.

Jewish Year 5,700 To Start Wednesday

Principal Orthodox and Reformed Congregations Here Are Preparing at Home And in Synagogues for Rosh Hashanah

Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year 5,700, will be ushered in next Wednesday at sundown in local snyagogues and temples with the traditional blasts of the Shofar (ram's horn), serving to remind Judaism of the need of repentance and reflection and inspiring confidence in the future.

Principal orthodox services, which continue for two days, will be centered at Adas Israel Synagogue, Sixth and I streets northwest; Beth Sholom, B'Nai Israel, Southeast Hebrew, Tifereth Israel, Ohev Sholom and other sanctuaries, with the latter congregation having engaged the services of young Cantor Yesrolikel Flosberg, of New York City, for the two-day rites.

According to Rabbi Zemach Green, leader of the Ohev Sholom group, which worships at Fifth and I streets northwest, Cantor Flosberg has officiated before some of the largest congregations in the United States, and will be assisted by a 12-voiced male choir, directed by Henry Spector, also of New York City. The cantor also will conduct a Slicoth service tonight at midnight at Chev Sholom.

Reformed Rites Last One Day

The Washington Hebrew Congregation (Reformed) will sponsor services on Wednesday at 8 p. m. and Thursday at 10:15 a. m. with Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, successor to the late Rabbi Simon, speaking on "Not Peace, But a Sword" and "The Next Generation Is Ours." Reformed rites are of one-day duration.

Rabbi Henry Segal has announced that he will preach on Thursday at 10:15 a. m. at B'Nai Israel Synogogue on "Preoccupied With What," and at 5:30 p. m. of the same day on "Caught In the Thicket." "Do We Really Want to Work Together?" will be his Friday morning theme.

Worshippers attending Thursday morning services at the Southeast Hebrew Congregation will hear Rabbi Julius Loeb discuss "Truth, Justice and Peace" and at 5 p. m. "The Call to Duty." Friday morning's topic will be "Looking Forward."

At Tifereth Israel Synogogue, Fourteenth and Euclid streets northwest, Rabbi Harry Silverstone will speak on Thursday morning on "Our Relation to the Past and on Friday morning on "Our Relation to the Future. Cantor Charles Intrater will assist. Slicoth services are set for midnight tonight.

Rabbi M. H. Levinson is scheduled to address his Beth Sholom-Talmud Torah congregation Thursday morning on "Has Humanity Outgrown Religion" and on Friday on "Righteousness." Cantor Kirschner and his choir, of New York City, will participate.

At Adas Israel Synogogue, Sixth and I streets northwest, Rabbi Solomon Metz' themes will be "Israel Among the Nations," Thursday morning, and "In the Tenth of Jewry," Friday morning. Cantor Louis Novick will assist.

Honey Is Symbolic

The Rosh Hashanah rites, following custom, are divided into three parts—the Malchroth, Zichronoth and Shofroth, with 30 trumpet blasts blown at the conclusion of each section and 10 final blasts.

In the average Jewish family the New Year is ushered in by preparation of the finest delicacies and sweetmeats, including honey, symbolizing a sweet and pleasant New Year. The home is also provided with the customary wine for Kiddish (sanctification of the Holy Day) and two white loaves of bread of finely-wrought "chaloths" for blessing at the festive board. Twist-shaped and rising upward, the loaves typify the prayers of Israel which shall rise up toward Heaven and be acceptable to God.

Miss Robinson for 75 Years Has Watched Her Church Grow

Miss Mary Robinson, First Congregational's only living charter member

Attended Initial Service of First Congregational

Back in 1865, just after the Civil War's end, an 11-year-old girl came on the arm of her father to the inaugural services of First Congregational Church, then meeting in the old Unitarian Church at Sixth and D streets northwest.

In a few weeks Miss Mary L. Robinson, now white-haired and 89, hopes she'll be able to attend the opening of the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration of the First Congregational Church, now located at Tenth and G streets northwest, one of the city's largest, of which she is the only living charter member.

Yesterday, in her favorite rocker near the window of her apartment at 1424 R street northwest, she recalled those former days.

Father Was Retired Cleric

Her father, the Rev. Ebenezer A. Robinson, a retired Congregational minister, was sent to duty in the War Department and soon Miss Mary had become active in the congregation, then led by Dr. C. B. Boynton.

"All our first ministers were nice looking men," she smiled, telling how Dr. Boynton filled the church to overflowing every Sunday. Until the present edifice was completed about 1870, services were held in the House of Representatives.

Standing out vividly in her memory is the figure of "Christian General" Oliver O. Howard, Civil War military leader and co-founder of Howard University.

Remembers Dr. Bischoff

"He was my Sunday school teacher and made the school a very interesting part of the service," she said, pointing out that when he also joined James B. Johnson in launching First Congregational-sponsored services for colored people in "Hell's Bottom," as the area near Eleventh and P streets northwest was then known. She told how Howard wrote with his left hand—his right had been shot off—letters to 500 Congregationalists throughout America, seeking funds for the present First Congregational edifice.

Mention of music brought recollections to Miss Robinson of Dr. John R. Bischoff, for 34 years a blind organist and choir leader at First Church, and who, she said, could conduct the entire musical part of the service without error.

Met Mrs. Coolidge

There's one occasion she'll never forget—the day she had luncheon at the White House as guest of Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, who, with the President, was a member of First Church.

"She stopped and talked to me like we were old friends," Miss Robinson remarked.

Chevy Chase Baptists Plan To Erect $100,000 Building

Church and Sunday School Edifice Will Be Built Beside Present Structures as 'One of Finest Types of Colonial Architecture'

The Chevy Chase Baptist congregation expects to start construction of a new $100,000 church and Sunday school edifice in the near future, The Post learned last night.

According to the Rev. Edward O. Clark, only pastor during the church's 15-year history, tentative plans are now being drafted for the structure, which will rise beside present buildings at 5671 Western avenue northwest, near Chevy Chase Circle.

"We are hoping to have one of the finest types of colonial architecture in the city," said the Rev. Mr. Clark, emphasizing that the main auditorium probably will be completed first.

The Sunday School building will probably have accommodations for 800 children, individual classrooms for men and women and a modern kitchen.

Fraser

Financing of the project will be carried on through a drive to be launched in November under the chairmanship of George B. Fraser, Sunday School superintendent and local barrister. More than $40,000 is to be raised.

Harold E. Burton, vice president of Southern Dairies Company, is chairman of the building committee, and his aides are Fraser, William Hughes, Charles D. Demarest, Lloyd H. Sutton, Mrs. Donald M. Earll, Mrs. Harry M. Watkins, Mrs. Hugh Loftis Murrell, Milton D. Burdick, Frank H. Jackson, C. Verne Bowen and Thomas H Patterson.

The Rev. Mr. Clark said last night that the history of his church has been one of expansion to meet needs of a growing community. He recalled that several members who met for the first service in 1924 at the home of Mrs. William D. Henry are still active in the congregation.

Among those still active are William Hughes, first Sunday School superintendent; B. H. Forbes, first deacon; Miss Pearl Stevens, present church clerk; Frank Jackson, present church treasurer and Thomas H. Patterson, now president of the board of trustess. Fraser is virtually a charter member, too, as he joined six months after the congregation's formation.

The cornerstone of the present edifice was laid on October 11, 1925, and the church was dedicated January 17, 1926.

Rev. Mr. Clark

The Rev. Mr. Clark pointed out the importance of Christian Endeavor, where young people discuss love, marriage, temperance, war and peace. Endeavor leaders are William C. Mooney, seniors; Chester Finch, intermediates, and Maynard Hughes, junior high.

Women's activities are co-ordinated under the Women's Society, with Mrs. Joseph Spano as president and Mrs. Sidney H. Pearce and Mrs. Frank H. Jackson, vice presidents. Scout work is led by W. S. Anderson, Fraser, L. J. Outlaw, Mrs. A. V. Verville and Mrs. Harold E. Burton. Sunday School leaders, in addition to Fraser, are Kenneth B. Forbes, C. Verne Bowen, Milton D. Burdick, Mrs. Frank H. Jackson, Mrs. Elmer R. E. Weaver, Mrs. J. Herbert Yule and Mrs. Charles H. Schafer.

Other organizations and their leaders are the Evening Auxiliary, Mrs. W. C. Fielder, president; Men's club, William H Gottlieb is president; the Columbian Girls, Mrs. Ira B. Tice and Margaret Russell as counselor and president, respectively, and the Sunday Evening Club, with William Gass as president.

Phillips and Mrs. Harold B. Anderson. Trustees include Donald M. Earll, William Hughes, Kenneth B. Forbes, Paul E. Keene, John B. Reynolds, Harold B. Anderson and Thomas H Patterson.

Gestapo Drive On Saboteurs Reported

Former Socialists, Union Chiefs, Czech Leaders Arrested

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 8.—Operating under drastic war-time measures, engendered by fears of sabotage, the German Gestapo (secret police), was disclosed by reliable sources today to have made numerous "protective" arrests of former Socialists and trade union chiefs.

Most of those arrested were described as permanent leaders of the workers before Hitler's rise to power. Some had been held in concentration camps for a time after 1933.

Authorities apparently believe that men and women who have already expressed dissatisfaction with the Nazi regime, must be segregated from a people which is "united as one."

Union Chief Seized

This attitude seemed to spring from increasingly stringent steps being taken in Germany to guard against industrial or other economic sabotage, against cleavage within the nation and from efforts to get everyone to co-operate in defense measures.

For example a former executive of the foreign department of the German Federation of Trade Unions has been arrested, while many former Socialist party diet leaders also have been taken into custody.

A woman once prominent in Socialist women's work was arrested at the office where she is now employed.

Coincidentally, it was reliably learned here that many leading citizens of the Czech protectorate had been arrested by the Gestapo. Since last week-end, in almost every city in the protectorate, such arrests have been made. Some estimates said the number ran into thousands, but this was impossible to confirm.

The purpose of the action in Moravia was described in informed circles as a guarantee of the maintenance of order and security and to keep those arrested as hostages and as a safeguard against eventual sabotage.

Passive resistance among the Czechs has been some bother to some German authorities since last March, when Nazis took over the former republic.

And now that war has come, the Czechs are not expected to be moved by any great patriotic fervor in behalf of the German cause.

According to responsible sources, Czechs of all classes, even among German circles, were being held. These sources said that one-third of the members of the board of the National Unity Party, which is the protectorate's only legal political group, were under protective arrest.

Nazis Retreating, French Report

for the first time, from tanks and armored cars.

The infantry was reported in a give-and-take action with German troops in the No Man's Land at the tip of the frontier where the French Maginot Line and the German Siegfried Line fan out to a distance of some 25 miles apart.

French observers said German reinforcements were being rushed toward that sector.

Information here, apparently based on aerial scouting operations over the German lines, said German roads leading to Trier through the Eifel and Ahr valleys were jammed with troop convoys and heavy artillery moving toward the front.

Reports Varied Advances

Trier (Treves in French) lies just in front of the Siegfried Line, Germany's fortification wall facing France, and in a "No Man's Land" extending about 25 miles to the French Maginot Line.

All indications in Paris were that the main French attack and the deepest French advance on German soil so far had come on the extreme northren flank.

The war communique today, No. 9, merely reported that French forces had "succeeded in effecting local advances of varied importance, improving noticeably the conditions of our advance at certain points."

Considering the original French front as a straight line running from Sierek, at the junction of the French-German-Luxemburg borders, to Bitche, 55 miles southwest, military observers picture the present situation thus:

With Bitche as a pivot, the line swings forward into Germany in the general direction of Trier.

The northern end of the line is about 3 or 4 miles—only the French and German staffs know exactly—inside German territory in the Saar Basin "No Man's Land," between the two strong fortifications lines.

The southern end of this line these sources believe, still rests at Bitche or, at the most, less than one mile in advance of Bitche.

To complete the picture of this sector, they say, the front line should be bulged out in a slight curve from the northern end to a point a few hundred yards within German territory in front of the French-fortified point of Forbach. From Forbach to Bitche the line runs almost straight.

Cautious Advance Reported

From there on, the frontier becomes dormant in the rock-strewn, forest-covered hills between Bitche and Wissembourg except for artillery fire.

At Wissembourg the front again bulges out slightly into the German forest of Bienwald where the French advance guard was reported cautiously fighting its way forward. The line bends back from there to Lauterbourg, where the front joins the Rhine.

This does not mean that the French have a continuous line of trenches or field forces in advance of the Maginot Line. More likely, there are large gaps between advance units which have been reported warily cleaning out German machine-gun nests and blockhouses and, as a semiofficial statement said, taking up "better positions."

Advices received here indicated that French advance forces near Forbach had not yet reached the City of Saarbruecken, which is only 2 miles within Germany.

These reports said that Saarbruecken, an industrial city, was being abandoned by German civilians and that highways from there north to Coblenz and Cologne were closed to civilian traffic. An endless stream of troops was said to be moving over them toward the front.

British warplanes have been active in this area, "bombing" it with leaflets telling the German people their leaders have betrayed them. (British reports in London said 3,500,000 propaganda leaflets were dropped on northern Germany today.)

Premier Daladier conferred with the superior national defense council at the Elysee Palace, the residence of President Albert Lebrun, and saw United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt at the war ministry.

Remaining members of the Chamber of Deputies organized themselves into committees to facilitate contact with the government and avoid the necessity of full Parliamentary sessions.

About 150 deputies or one-fourth of the Chamber already have been mobilized or have volunteered and are with the French armies.

Two days without the shrill warning of air raid sirens have given the people of Paris a chance to catch up with their sleep and has caused a somewhat better feeling toward the police official who sets off all 80 of Paris' air raid sirens with a touch of one button.

Applications To Join Reserve Swamp Navy

Department Lists Proper Procedure For Enlistment

Navy officials revealed yesterday they had been flooded with inquiries and applications for appointment in the reserve since the war started in Europe.

Announcing proper procedure for applying for commissions or enlistment in the reserve, the department also said that many former Navy men had volunteered their services in case of an emergency. The offers have been made in person, by letter and telegram, it was stated.

"There is no indication of any need for the services of such persons on active duty at present, as the regular Navy is in a position to cope with the increase in naval activity," the department said.

Rules for Applying

Officials emphasize, however, that applications for appointment in the naval reserve are always in order. Applications should not be submitted to the department, it was said, but should be directed to the commandant of the local naval district or the head of the local naval reserve unit.

Applicants for commissions in the reserve from Washington and vicinity should apply to the commandant of the Navy Yard here, it was stated. Men who wish to enlist in the reserve should apply to commander of the local reserve battalion, also at the Navy Yard. The Navy defines the Washington area as including Prince Georges, Montgomery and Charles counties in Maryland, and Arlington, Fairfax, Stafford, King George, Prince William counties and the City of Alexandria in Virginia.

Other residents of Maryland and Virginia should submit their applications to the commandant of the Fifth Naval District, Naval Operating Base, Norfolk, Va.

Washington's Budget

The making of the annual budget is the most important routine task of a city commission or council. For that reason it is customary for municipal officials to ask advice from civic groups and individual citizens as to how the city's funds should be spent. In following that practice here the District Commissioners have notably strengthened the prestige of their forthcoming budget. They have emphasized their competence to manage Washington's financial affairs.

At Thursday's hearings the will of the community seems to have emerged with complete clarity. Many groups wish to see various community services improved. But they all hope that the total budget will be kept within the limits of prospective revenue, so that no higher taxes will have to be imposed. That is also the aim of the Board of Commissioners.

With this consensus of opinion before them, the Commissioners are ready to formulate a budget that should meet with general public approval. Most estimates of department heads will have to be trimmed. Many desirable projects will have to be postponed. But the funds available can be allocated so as to provide a maximum of community service in those fields where the need is most acute. Obviously the heads of the local government are in a better position to make this allocation than any other agency.

In actual practice, however, the budget to be formulated by the Commissioners will be overhauled by the Federal Budget Bureau and by House and Senate committees. By the time it is enacted into a law it is likely to bear only a remote resemblance to the program of spending to be outlined at the District Building. That prospect makes it extremely difficult for the local authorities to devise a scientific budget. They are under a strong temptation to make allowance for the customary trimming which their estimates undergo in the Budget Bureau and in Congress.

The fact that the board has consistently resisted this temptation, emphasizes its competence as a budget-making agency. It also strongly indicates that the District would be governed far more effectively if the Commissioners' budgets were allowed to stand, without any adjustment by Federal authorities. If members of Congress have any doubt as to the ability of a local regime to govern the District, in the interest of its residents as well as those of the Nation, that doubt should be very largely resolved by the conscientious and deliberate way in which the Commissioners work out the city's annual budget.

The U-Boat Menace

In the month that the United States entered the first World War, one out of every four ships that left British ports became the victim of German U-boats. British shipping losses alone, during that fateful month, amounted to no less than 600,000 tons. Had such losses continued much longer, Great Britain would have been starved out.

In less than a week of the present war at least seven vessels of British registry have gone to the bottom, presumed victims of German undersea raiders. Thus far the losses are not such as to imperil Britain's vital communications with the outside world. But in view of what happened in the last war the British can hardly afford to take a complacent view of the situation. They must act, and act quickly, to meet the revived menace of the German submarine.

In the course of 1917 the British discovered that shipping losses could be very materially cut down by the convoy system. Begun in May, it proved its efficacy in the months that followed. By September British shipping losses had fallen to 200,000 tons a month and by the end of that year the threat of the submarine was largely under control.

In his speech in the House of Commons on Thursday, Premier Chamberlain indicated that this time, as in 1917, Great Britain will resort to the convoy system, for which she is now better prepared because of a decidedly greater tonnage in destroyers. In addition, improved detecting devices and more destructive depth bombs have made the submarine more vulnerable.

It may, indeed, have been the possibility that the U-boat's efficacy would be greater at the very outset of the war, before adequate defense measures could be taken by the allies, that led Germany to embark on a submarine campaign so quickly. It is not forgotten that the Athenia was torpedoed only a few hours after war was declared.

There is a strong possibility that, as the war progresses, the submarine will be less rather than more of a threat to British security. In this respect as in many others, the development of the present war is likely to differ markedly from that of its predecessor.

National Emergency

The President's proclamation of a state of "national emergency" is a natural and indeed inevitable consequence of the European war. Even if there were no neutrality law in force an executive move of this character would have been anticipated. A number of orders have to be given for "the strengthening of our national defense within the limits of peacetime authorizations." It is customary and appropriate that these should be prefaced by a Presidential statement as to the reasons for such action.

But beyond the authorized increases in the military establishment, and beyond such relatively minor steps as counter-espionage precautions, there is another reason for the Presidential proclamation issued yesterday. In the words of Mr. Roosevelt, "a national emergency exists in connection with and to the extent necessary for the proper observance, safeguarding and enforcing of the neutrality of the United States!"

The neutrality act, with its embargo on the export of "arms, ammunition and implements of war," is in effect. A long list of articles, divided into seven categories, has been enumerated by the President as falling under this ban. But it is obvious at a glance that between the announcement of this embargo and its effective enforcement lies a world of difference.

Even with the fullest cooperation from American manufacturers and exporters it will be a tremendous administrative task to make this embargo effective. Police and inspection powers beyond anything as yet imagined by most Americans will be required. If Canada enters the war, opening 3,000 miles of border to the temptation of smuggling, the emergency powers assumed by the President yesterday will soon become anything but nominal.

The morality of what Mr. Roosevelt describes as "the so-called neutrality act" may for the moment be left out of the picture. What the President foreshadowed yesterday is its terrific administrative complexity, for the operation of which there is as yet only a bare nucleus of governmental organization. If there are any who think that the neutrality act will operate automatically, or without perceptible inconvenience to a large part of American industry, they will shortly be disillusioned.

No call for a special session of Congress to reconsider neutrality act revision has yet been issued. It is as well that there should be no rush about this. The effect of the embargo on the fortunes of war in Europe is one issue. Equally important is the effect on the United States of trying to make this unprecedented legislation operative. Some practical experience here should, as in the case of the Volstead act, assist many legislators to view the problem with more realism than it has heretofore been accorded.

Of Propaganda

There can be few Americans, nowadays, who are not thoroughly alive to the deadly perils of propaganda. Radio commentators feel obliged to warn their listeners to beware of everything they hear, and newspapers to caution readers about believing everything they read. Mr. Roosevelt, in his neutrality proclamation, called attention to the danger. Indeed, so vast, so ubiquitious, does the menace now appear that only those who are at once deaf and illiterate are likely to escape it.

It is, of course, comforting to know that the psychologists are now rapidly mobilizing themselves into antipropaganda defense units for our protection. A group of them meeting yesterday at Palo Alto, Calif., promised to "expose hidden or ulterior factors in statements which might appear innocent or altruistic." A noble purpose, certainly, provided it conceals no hidden or ulterior motive.

The great difficulty is that nobody, including the editors of dictionaries, seems able to define "propaganda" in explicit terms. The origin of the word, from the Congregation of Propaganda Fide, is well enough known, but nobody nowadays construes "propaganda" as meaning the missionary activities of the Catholic Church. It would be equally naif to imagine that "propaganda" is necessarily equivalent to falsehood. Propaganda may be something in itself absolutely true, yet so cunningly presented as to achieve a calculated effect. For example:

> Mary had a little lamb,
> Its fleece was white as snow.

Here, ostensibly, are two simple statements of fact apparently innocuous and unimportant. It can hardly be denied, however, that the whole effect of these statements is to dispose the reader favorably toward Mary and the lamb, though there is no evidence that Mary is not a very disagreeable little brat and the lamb an unregenerate little beast. Somehow, without knowing exactly why, we are already ardently pro-Mary and pro-lamb, and quite ready to take a poke at anybody who insinuates Mary might be hoarding foodstuffs.

Thus "propaganda" might be described as the art of making us believe what the propagandist wishes us to believe, whether true or false. Just to complicate the problem, however, we are being warned even more strenuously against the dangers of "wishful thinking," which is to say believing what we would like to believe on our own account. All in all, we should say that the gallant members of the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues have their work cut out for them.

Continental Solidarity

When delegates from the 21 republics of the Western Hemisphere met at Lima last December the war clouds hanging over the Old World were already sufficiently heavy to cast a disturbing shadow over the New.

That is one reason, and a very important one, why the nations of the Americas drew closer at the Lima conference than they had ever done before. There they agreed on a declaration in which they "reaffirmed their continental solidarity" and their decision to defend American principles "against all foreign intervention or activity that may threaten them." And for the first time in the history of inter-American relations there was established machinery for immediate consultation in the event of a common emergency.

With war raging in Europe, that machinery is being put in motion. As soon as the conflict broke out six American republics suggested the convening of a conference to unify and harmonize continental policy in respect of the European war. Invitations to attend that conference have since been sent out by the government of Panama. The parley will convene at Panama shortly and its importance is attested by the President's announcement that the Undersecretary of State will represent this country.

It is not to be assumed that the mere summoning of such a conference means that all the republics of this hemisphere are agreed as to the precise action that should be taken to keep the New World free of war. The Lima declaration specifically declares that the governments of the American republics "will act independently in their individual capacity, recognizing fully their juridical equality as sovereign states."

But on certain matters of mutual concern the necessities arising out of the present crisis may lead to parallel if not joint measures by the American republics to preserve the safety of the Western Hemisphere. In any event, the Panama parley will of itself constitute a manifestation of solidarity whose long-range as well as immediate significance may prove considerable.

Buying Hysteria

The mad rush of local householders to lay in supplies of sugar and other foodstuffs, in anticipation of wartime shortages, can only be attributed to a manifestation of mob hysteria inducing otherwise intelligent people to act in a most irrational fashion.

Of course any sudden and unanticipated increase in demand for an essential commodity creates local shortages and offers opportunity for the very price increases people are seeking to avoid. While such abnormal conditions prevail, local consumers are victimized.

Local buying stampedes such as have been occurring in this community and elsewhere are utterly without justification in view of the embarrassingly large agricultural surpluses on hand. Government officials are not only still struggling with the unsolved problems created by such surpluses, but they are planning to continue production control policies by acreage restriction of major crops. That certainly does not indicate danger of shortages ahead.

If facts and figures do not allay consumer fears, the inevitable price adjustments that follow increases not warranted by the state of the market will doubtless soon bring a sobering realization of the folly of hoarding. Unfortunately, the longer that realization is delayed, the greater the probable losses suffered by the hoarders.

The young man who drives with his right hand and grasps the roof of the car with his left doesn't know he is adding to evidence in support of the theory of natural selection.

Another reason why national affairs are in the fix they're in is because we voters have no choice but to vote for the kind of men who run for office.

An Ohio woman killed her husband because he stayed away from home several nights a week. Now he spends every night away from home.

Shavian Sanity

From the St. Louis Star-Times.

American publicists have adopted the habit of greeting every cryptic utterance of George Bernard Shaw, the antique Irish-British playwright, as a publicity stunt. Shaw has given sufficient reason in his numerous jibes obviously designed maliciously to puncture American self-sufficiency and needle our editors into innocently defending home and country, to Shaw's probable delight.

Shaw's comment on the still-pending European war, however, is not so light-hearted. Everybody's ready to slaughter his neighbors, he observes. "Why? Am I mad?" he asks. The answer is that he isn't, but that most of Europe is.

Reactions To The War

Profiteering

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note the food profiteer is at work in Washington and vicinity.

There is no shortage of sugar or coffee in the United States, yet the price of both have been raised in this area since the European war became a fact. Why should the consumer in the United States be put to the expense of paying higher prices for food and everything?

We also read about the stock market going hay wire, with the stock gamblers at work taking advantage of the other fellow's needs.

I am in favor of putting Gen. Hugh Johnson or some other hard boiled American citizen on the job to crack down on all the pirates who are now or will be profiteering at the expense of the people of this Nation.

Profiteering is an outcome of other people's needs for the various commodities. If some action is not taken we will be paying higher prices for everything that goes into the home.

Cost of production has not increased in the eight days since the European powers declared a state of war.

THOMAS R. MECHEM.
Arlington, Va., Sept. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: War begins in Europe and immediately profiteers in the United States begin jumping prices for foodstuffs. Surpluses of wheat, pork products, copper, coffee, sugar, etc., have been with us ever since the World War and every political campaign has highlighted the necessity of curing this evil.

One week of war apparently provides the necessary cure!

The profiteer of the World War is, and always will be, the pet bugaboo of World War veterans. Their American Legion has tried repeatedly to get a law prohibiting profiteering and sad to relate some of the country's outstanding businessmen, and labor, have been able to keep the teeth out of such a measure, with the plea that it would hurt business and is not needed. Yet war is only a week old and the corner grocery store is hiking prices of daily necessities already. What is the Administration going to do about such profiteering?

It is lots more important to the American people to put Attorney General Murphy on the trail of profiteers in foodstuffs, etc., than it is to keep his agents busy with spy investigations, or political exposes. Profiteering is only now beginning again and the time to stop it is in the bud.

Communist Correctness

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial today on Earl Browder's testimony before the Dies committee could not have been fairly written had you read your news article which appeared simultaneously with it. That article quoted Mr. Browder's statement to the committee showing clearly and lucidly how the Soviet-German non-aggression pact has safeguarded the national interests of the United States and of the peace-loving peoples of the world.

That statement completely refuted the biased standpoint of your editorial that the Communist Party position on the pact is a product of "devious processes of reasoning." Certainly the facts demonstrating the correctness of our position are apparent to any unprejudiced eye.

The charge of "devious reasoning" may much more accurately be leveled against the declaration of your editorial that the pact called attention to "the likenesses of the social and economic structures" of Germany and the Soviet Union. I suppose, following this specious kind of analysis, that each time the Soviet Union signed one of its many non-aggression pacts with the various nations of Europe, it changed its form of government to conform with that of its co-signers.

The Athenia

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our immediate indignation at the torpedoing of the Athenia was dulled by doubts cast by the official German denial.

Now that we know this denial is absolutely false and the full atrocity is plain, it brings home as nothing else can the limits to which Hitler, Goering and their cohorts will go.

Frightful and unjustifiable as was the torpedoing of the Lusitania, she was sailing to Great Britain and did have war materials on board.

The Athenia was sailing from Great Britain.

There could be no more horrible example of heathen savagery.

But our horror must not be for the German people as a whole; only for that horde who have become Hitlerites.

Course Of Action

To The Editor of The Post—Sir:—Now seems to be as good a time as any to check up on the various subversive activities of other nations in this country. Of course, aliens found guilty of such actions are expelled, and sometimes punished. These methods should be used in the case of any persons of U. S. citizenship found guilty of any act thought detrimental to the best interests of the country. A closer check should be kept on the movements of all strangers, as is the case in Europe and elsewhere.

Further, the prices of all commodities should not be allowed to rise because of war conditions, but should be subject to regulation by Federal agencies.

Nothing should be published which may be construed as giving aid or information to belligerents.

Let there be rules governing our course of action as a nation at this time, so that we can profit by the example of the last war.

WILLIAM P. THOMAS, Jr.

Totalitarian State

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I protest the raucous emotionalism of your editorial, "Is Neutrality Possible," in the issue of September 2. Its whole tone indicates preoccupation with surface appearances, if not with catch phrases completely unfounded on reason. Why evade the fact that "heroic Poland" has for years been a dictatorship backed by a long history of Jewish pogroms, only too glad, last year, to seize its share of that dismembered democracy, Czecho-Slovakia?

Why, even in the case of France and England, use the word "democracy," since every line of news from radio or newspaper brings closer home the fact that the most totalitarian state is the state of war? I object to your beating the drums of war for the United States even before it had been declared by European powers. If the news must be interpreted, give us a thoughtful interpretation!

MOLLY B. CANAN.

"Adroit Maneuver"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From your editorial of September 4 headed "Trying to Stay Out," I quote:

"In the nerve racking days before the die was cast in Europe, no nation strove more earnestly and more persistently than Italy to avert a general war.

"This laudable activity on Mussolini's part was no product of any sudden conversion to pacifism."

Though Mussolini lately has been more "persistent" in his endeavor for peace, it is a question whether there was any real "earnest" sincerity. His activity evidently "arose from a very actual realization of the dangers inherent in Italy's position as the more exposed of the axis partners," and is more likely to be the real clew to his peace proposals and present attitude.

Besides this, however, there appears another element, namely, the appeal of President Roosevelt directly to the King of Italy, which apparently further helped to knock the pins from under Mussolini's former bellicose attitude by bringing this appeal, through the King, to the attention of the people, who, we are told, are not anxious for war.

If Mussolini at this time followed his axis partner into war, it would put the onus of bringing hardship and possible disaster squarely on himself. He therefore is placed in a quandary and concludes, for the time being, it would be better to appear neutral and abide his time. So far as I know it is probably the first time within recent times that a communication or appeal has been sent directly to the King of Italy, who is ostensibly the head of the Italian government. A very adroit maneuver on the part of President Roosevelt.

American Sympathies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A newspaper like The Post exerts a strong influence over its readers and it seems to me that in such serious times a paper should make it a policy to do all in its power to protect the citizens of the country from the influence of the current wave of subtle British and French propaganda, designed to cause our early entry into the war by appealing to our emotions.

Everyone who reads your editorials does not use his head first and last. Instead, it seems that, day after day, in every way, the Post, for quite some time, has used every means at its command to turn Americans' sympathies toward the allies. Our sympathies are there already, but not enough to want to fight again.

England and France are today the greatest menace there is to our staying neutral because of the subtle methods (some not so subtle) they employ to drag us into war. They are determined in this and will carry on a vast propaganda campaign to do so. Every atrocity will be played up and enlarged on. The Athenia incident is typical, and Ernest Lindley paints the picture of that perfectly in The Post of September 6.

If The Post is 100 per cent American and truly has the interests of the country at heart now that there is a war menacing our peace, it will adopt a policy warning Americans against dangerous pro-ally propaganda and no; present such propaganda in any form.

The Children's Crusade

THROUGHOUT the last weeks, with the air filled with war and rumors of war, every hour has reached its own high peak of drama. Some of these have been sensational and some inspirational; others have been infinitely pathetic. But I doubt if the gravest moment approximated, in sheer heart appeal, the radio description of the evacuation of the London children as they made ready to leave the Waterloo Station.

They seemed so gay, so full of enthusiasm for this new adventure. But one needed no device of television to see faces of the parents who were there to see them off, or the crowds of youthful pilgrims, bright with anticipation or pale with fright. Some of the youngsters who were called to the microphone responded like veterans, but all that one terrified little girl could manage to say was, "Na . . . Na . . ." a feeble protest, perhaps, against all the events that had brought this moment to pass.

This exodus of children is very different from another that took place over 700 years ago, and yet one cannot help but draw comparisons. In the year of our Lord 1212, Stephen, a shepherd boy of France, and Nicholas of Germany each began a movement in his own country which was to be known as the Children's Crusade. Enthusiasm for this new venture caught hold of the imagination and swept through northern Europe like wildfire, and these boys gathered to their sides many thousands of young comrades to march against the infidel, believing that the peaceful little army could succeed where men of arms had failed.

Perhaps the crusade had its inception in the zealous mind of Pope Innocent III, who hoped thus to shame the men of Christendom out of their somewhat lethargic attitude toward the capture of Jerusalem; for Europe seemed content to observe the series of truces granted by Saladin's successor.

Evidently the parents were not unwilling to see their offspring embark upon the perilous journey; perhaps they felt that if Abraham was prepared to sacrifice his son Isaac, the relinquishing of their children to go upon a splendid pilgrimage was necessary and right. There is no doubt but that the adults encouraged the movement, taking the Holy Writ literally when it said, "And a little child shall lead them."

The boy Stephen shepherded his new flock of small pilgrims through the north of France, scouring the countryside for new recruits, and proclaiming as their motto, "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings hast Thou ordained strength, O Lord." But the French King was more practical than his subjects, for after calling together for consultation the learned doctors of the University of Paris and hearing them declare the crusade to be unwise, he commanded the children to return to their homes. So Stephen and his followers went back to their flocks and furrows and games, still untried by too much hardship and still longing to see the miracles which would have befallen them upon their travels.

In Germany, however, Nicholas and his Youth Movement met with success on every side. Some historians say that as many as 20,000 girls and boys from every walk of life left their homes to follow after him, singing joyful songs and eager for the wonders that would meet their eyes. For would not the sea draw back at their approach and let them pass by on dry land, as did the children of Israel? After they crossed the Alps and marched, still singing, under the warm sun of Italy, they could not grumble at the fearful and unaccustomed heat, for it was a good omen, presaging, as it surely must, the retreat of the blue waves of the Mediterranean.

They were well received along the way; perhaps the adults were more than willing to have the gates of salvation opened to them by the hands of children. At Genoa, however, where the little crusaders expected to behold the greatest miracle of all—the subjugation of the sea—they were ordered to remain outside the city gates. Apparently the Genoese considered the youthful army a grave problem, as indeed it must have been, in spite of its saintly errand. After some parleying, the children were allowed to enter and remain a single night before beginning their march across the dry bed of the Mediterranean.

But the sea refused to open, and the tide lapped upon the sands, heedless to the command that it retreat in the name of the Holy Sepulchre. Some of the small pilgrims continued their way farther into Italy, where the fatherly Bishop of Brindisi advised them to turn homeward, but few ever reached their people again. Others went to Marseilles, perhaps thinking that the water might be persuaded to withdraw at that point, but more than likely in search of a ship that would give them passage. They were kidnaped and sold into slavery in the land of Egypt. And thus, say the historians, ended the most tragic and futile pilgrimage that the world has ever known, leaving behind only the evidence of a great and simple faith and the strange legend of the Pied Piper.

Yet this later pilgrimage, leading not into danger, but away from it, is filled with a pathos scarcely less acute, for it was brought about by a situation that could not have existed in the Middle Ages.

Hereafter, few of the radio listeners who heard the broadcast will be able to hear the "Lambeth Walk" without a tightening of the throat and a memory of the English children singing it as they waited to be taken away from "the terror by night" and "the destruction that wasteth at noonday." Perhaps, after all, this is another crusade—the unconscious plea of these children for the world to return to sanity.

Foul Flirtation

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S intimation that it might be necessary to prevent or offset communistic propaganda, along with other poisons, is only an intimation, no bigger than your hand, up to now. But it is the first evidence that the New Deal is disgusted with the political miscegenation which has revolted many Americans during the last few years. The change itself, if it is to be a complete breaking off of this foul flirtation of the radical wing of the Democratic Party, is encouraging, although the obvious motives for the jilting are not as noble as they could be.

For a long time it has been noticed that, although the New Deal hated fascism and Hitlerism with admirable fury and even went to the point of virtual suspension of diplomatic relations with Germany on the issue of Hitler's beastliness, the Administration was, in a rather positive way, cordial to Communists.

When Harold Ickes wanted to sound off he selected as his hosts on two occasions professional groups which had been plagued by the activities of the bolos. Mrs. Roosevelt gave aid and comfort to the American and International Youth Congress, which the Communists were using as camouflage for their conspiracy against the American form of government.

Communist Support Gently Repudiated

THE WORKERS' ALLIANCE received encouragement, and men were planted around in the Government who not only despaired of saving the American system but thought it not worth saving. Communists, if they were not acknowledged, at least were tolerated as New Dealer or fellow travelers of the New Deal.

The Communists supported Mr. Roosevelt in 1936, to be sure, but he gently repudiated that support, and, on Earl Browder's own statement, they had only 100,000 members and perhaps 50,000 sympathizers who, however, were not entirely reliable. The Communists, therefore, had no mandate to govern or even help govern or exert their anti-American influence on the policies of the elected Government.

They acknowledge, with foggy evasions, their status of a subordinate and obedient branch of the Russian government, which is a dictatorship only superficially different from that of Germany and is now a partner of Adolf Hitler in a war against democracy, the full scope of which is not yet known.

Stalin-Hitler Pact Hurt Reds Here

YET UNDER the New Deal a Communist or fellow traveler of the Communists, doing the work of the Moscow government in the United States, was deemed to be more American than a Republican or an orthodox Democrat of the type which first elected the Roosevelt Administration.

But since the conclusion of the deal between Stalin and Hitler, whereby they mutually dropped the pretense of resisting each other for the purpose of destroying the other's ism, the Communists have become a liability not only to their friends in Washington but even to themselves. Browder admits that he traveled abroad within the last two years on a false, which would seem a forged, passport and, pinned down by Martin Dies, of the Committee on Anti-American Activities, further admits that an American Communist must obey Moscow to the extent of supporting the Stalin-Hitler agreement which became the signal for the start of the second World War.

Inasmuch as the personal sympathies of this country very plainly lie with the allies in this war and Russia is Hitler's ally, the Communists find themselves suddenly in wrong with the Americans and all their patient, stealthy scheming undone by the decision of an inconsiderate and demanding boss.

Should Kick Out Known Communists

THEY ARE NO longer of any use to the New Deal, and in a space of two weeks the President comes to the point of acknowledging that communistic propaganda, like the propaganda of Hitler and Mussolini, is aimed against the democratic system of government.

Propaganda, however, is a vague thing. Nobody knows just what it is, and those who claim to know find themselves distinguishing between good and bad propaganda, which calls for a personal decision in each case.

But the New Deal itself could make anti-communistic propaganda if it were disposed to, and it remains to be seen whether this disposition exists. The New Deal could do it by refusing henceforth to indulge in that activity which George W. Babbitt called fellow-shipping with Communists, and, most emphatic of all measures of repudiation, could kick out of the Government in Washington and elsewhere every known Communist and fellow traveler. That would do for evidence of a sincere intention to hit the sawdust trail back to the principles of the party which elected Mr. Roosevelt. That was the Democratic Party, not the Communist.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Congress Leaders, President Need Understanding

THERE WILL, of course, have to be a special session of Congress, not only because there are bound to be innumerable questions requiring the action of Congress but because in such critical times the people and the Administration must maintain close and continual contact. That cannot be done through the press and the radio alone. It must be done officially and responsibly through daily consultation in Washington between the Executive and the Legislature.

But until an effective method of consultation has been arranged between the President and the representative leaders in Congress, it is the part of wisdom to postpone the calling of a special session. For it would be humiliating and it would be dangerous to call together Congress only to resume the partisan and factional quarrel which was raging when Congress adjourned in July.

Collaboration Is Vital Need

THE PRESIDENT will have to call Congress. But he should not call it until he has reached an understanding with the leaders of Congress as to how he and they will live together and work together for the long and difficult months to come.

This is the first and the essential need of the hour. It is not a matter of reaching an agreement on the specific question of the embargo on arms. Once Congress convenes, it is bound not to adjourn, though it need not necessarily remain in session every day, for the duration of the war. The real question, to which the arms embargo is incidental and subordinate, is how the President, who has quarreled with Congress, is to dispose of the quarrel and establish an effective and reliable, in short a patriotic, collaboration between the Executive and Congress.

This is the crux of the question as to what to do about the arms embargo. There are relatively small groups who want the embargo kept because they desire the victory of Hitler, and certain others who think they would like to see the destruction of the British empire. There are somewhat larger groups who honestly believe that if this country sells arms to Great Britain and France it will automatically and inevitably be compelled to send another army to Europe.

Conservatives Fear Embargo Repeal

BUT MUCH the most important group, most important because it holds the balance of power in Congress, is composed of conservative Republicans and Democrats who fear that if they repeal the embargo, Mr. Roosevelt will deliverately maneuver the country toward a policy of intervention. Most of these conservatives see that the embargo jeopardizes the real interests of this country. They do not believe that its repeal would automatically lead to American military intervention, in fact many of them realize that repeal would normally be the best insurance against military intervention.

But they know how strong are Mr. Roosevelt's sympathies, and how impulsive he is by temperament, and they hesitate to take a step which would seem to give him a free hand and a blank check. They do not object to repeal. They object to what they fear Mr. Roosevelt might do after they had voted for repeal.

This is the opinion that must be reassured before Congress is convened. Words alone will not reassure it. Those who hold this opinion represent the great mass of substantial and responsible people in the country, the very people who can supply the experience, the seasoned judgment, and the executive talent that in critical times a nation must fall back upon. Mr. Roosevelt cannot conduct the Government without their support. He will wreck himself and his policies if he ignores them or antagonizes them. He must work with them, and the only way to work with them is to call them in, confide in them, consult them, and work with them. If he will do that, there will be no filibustering and no paralyzing debates in Congress, and the embargo can be lifted, and the country made ready to safeguard its vital interests.

Must Forget Private, Partisan Grudges

BUT AS THINGS were when Congress adjourned, as in a considerable degree they still are, the domestic political quarrel between the President and Congress falsifies every question of national defense and foreign policy. Instead of our being able to debate on its merits what policy best serves the interests of the country and the way of life which it cherishes, the debate at bottom is made to turn upon Mr. Roosevelt's ambitions, upon partisan advantages, upon the extraneous and tiresomely irrelevant disputes of politicians. Only the President can lift the country out of this morass. He can do it only by lifting himself above his own personal and factional resentments and grudges and suspicious and raising a standard to which the wise and the honest can repair, remembering the words of Washington that "the independence and liberty you possess are the work of joint councils and joint efforts, of common dangers, suffering and successes."

Only in a moral atmosphere of this kind, and only when the people have the confidence that national unity would give them, should the question of the arms embargo be placed before Congress. Then only can the question be safely raised. For if the question is raised without uniting and reassuring the people, it had much better not be raised at all.

Failure to Repeal Would Be Big Blow

IN THE ABSENCE of a real understanding Congress might refuse to lift the embargo. That would make matters far worse than they are today. The failure of repeal would be a devastating blow to the democracies, equal to the loss of a decisive naval battle, and no man can calculate the encouragement it would give, not merely to Nazi Germany but to Communist Russia and Fascist Italy and even to Japan. All of these neutrals are waiting to see who is going to win. So deadly a defeat to the democracies would influence profoundly these dangerous neutrals.

To put the question of repeal, and to fail to repeal, would be a world-wide catastrophe for all the free nations. For that reason the President must not put the question unless and until he has a complete understanding with Congress.

Johnson act forbidding loans to nations in default on their debts to this country.

There were indications that the President is continuing his canvassing, direct or indirect, of members of Congress on their present views toward repeal of the embargo clauses, and that a call for an extra session might be expected when he has assurance of enough votes to accomplish that objective.

The intensive recruiting drive, to follow the new Presidential orders, will provide the country with an overall defense force of some 1,035,000 officers and men. The Army, Navy and Marine Corps will have 431,000, the Reserves and National Guard 448,000 and the R. O. T. C. about 160,000.

Attaining of the strength authorized by the Chief Executive actually will mean an increase of about 135,000 officers and men over the present existing strength, since the latter is still below numbers authorized before the President's 100,000 increase.

Asked the reason for his proclamation, Mr. Roosevelt said that under the expansion program, the appropriations for the Army, Navy and Marine Corps for this fiscal year ending next July 1 would last only until about June 1. Under the defense laws he is authorized to permit more rapid use of the money appropriated when he finds an emergency exists. A deficiency appropriation later will be required to complete the fiscal year.

Likewise he cited the State Department appropriation act which authorizes use of up to $500,000 "whenever the President shall find that a state of emergency exists endangering the lives of American citizens."

Repeatedly, the President emphasized that the expansion of the armed forces he was ordering was well below the maximum authorized for peacetime. He said it was the idea to fill in the chinks with enough men to man certain defenses, such as the Panama Canal, and Puerto Rico, and to fill up certain arms of the service which have been robbed to care for expansion of aviation.

There were numerous other developments coloring the picture of this country's neutrality preparedness undertaking.

The Army and Navy Journal will publish today an article saying that President Roosevelt is developing a "Government for national defense," a "high command" essential "for the protection of American interests in these critical times, and for the successful prosecution of war should we become engaged."

It points to meetings being held at the White House and participated in by the President, Secretary of State Hull, the Secretary of War, the Acting Secretary of the Navy, the Army Chief of Staff and the Chief of Naval Operations, and says it is "obvious" that the meetings are more than for the exchange of information.

The Maritime Commission awarded a contract for construction of 10 cargo vessels of the C-1 type, bringing to 93 vessels, costing about $210,000,000 the number of new craft ordered for the American merchant marine, always considered an auxiliary to the naval service.

Five of the new ships will be built by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation at its Sparrows Point (Md.) yard at a price of $1,889,000 each, and five by its subsidiary, the Union Iron Works, San Francisco, at $2,002,000. The latter price includes the 6 per cent differential allowed by law on West Coast construction.

The Coast Guard withdrew the cutter Northland from the Byrd Antarctic expedition and ordered it to replace, at San Francisco, the cutter Shoshone, which was ordered into neutrality patrol work in the Pacific.

The railroad industry, following a meeting here to discuss its position in view of the European war, said it was prepared to handle "any anticipated increase in traffic."

The executive committee of the Association of American Railroads said the roads could take care of a 25 per cent increase in present tonnage with equipment now in use, and a 50 per cent increase by repairing equipment on hand but not now needed.

Bar to Discuss Pre-Trial System

The District Bar Association will discuss the new pre-trial procedure, which is expected to speed up the work of the District Court, at a special meeting at the Mayflower Hotel Monday night.

Justice Laws will speak on the plan in his courtroom in the new Police Court Building at 10 a. m. Tuesday. The pre-trial hearing system will be inaugurated in District Court September 18.

Roosevelt Stays Calm

By Mark Sullivan

Sets U. S. Example

IN ALL the press conferences President Roosevelt has held since the war in Europe began, he has maintained an outstanding spirit. It is to avoid exciting the country, to preserve in the people a mental attitude of calm, to be on guard against anything that might stir emotion. To this end Mr. Roosevelt has practiced conscious and meticulous care in phrasing his own informal statements and answers to questions; and at the same time has urged the newspapermen, on their part, to so write their dispatches as to avoid occasion for sensational headlines. Both seriously and with occasional use of the device of humor, he has "played down" any possible atmosphere of excitement or urgency.

Newspapermen ask Mr. Roosevelt "when and whether" he will call a special session of Congress. As to "whether" he will call a special session, Mr. Roosevelt says there is no decision, and avoids discussion. As to "when," he adopts a manner of mock seriousness, saying he cannot tell the exact date, but he can give the approximate period; it will be sometime between September 9 and January 2—which latter is the day Congress will reassemble in regular session anyhow.

At Mr. Roosevelt's latest press conference, on Friday, he applied the spirit of avoiding excitement to two topics, the only two of any consequence that came up. About the rush of many persons to buy more food than is their current need, he said, very positively, there is no need to fear either scarcity of food or excessive prices for it. He said that no shortage of food is conceivable, and that the immense surpluses existing in practically all lines make the fear of high prices unnecessary.

WHEN MR. ROOSEVELT came to explain a proclamation he was about to issue, he was most careful to guard against headlines which might make the proclamation seem startling, which, in fact, it is not. Apparently the statutes which give the President authority to issue this kind of proclamation are so phrased that it is necessary to describe it as a "national emergency" proclamation. Mr. Roosevelt used the word "limited" preceding the words "national emergency." He made it clear that the statutes authorizing this proclamation were ordinary peace-time statutes, and that the steps he was taking under the proclamation are far short of what the statutes authorize as peace-time actions.

For example, the authorized peace-time limit of strength for the Navy is 180,000 men. At present the number is between 115,000 and 120,000. The President, under his present proclamation, will increase the Navy personnel somewhat—but still far short of the peace-time limit. Similarly, the enlisted personnel of the Army will be increased somewhat—but still far short of the 280,000 which is the authorized peace-time limit. If actual war were contemplated, the Administration would be dealing in terms of an Army of 20 times 280,000. Mr. Roosevelt made it clear and emphatic that everything that is being done about the Army, the Navy and the Marine Corps is within the limit of peace-time authorization.

Few Drastic Steps Are Contemplated

THESE PEACE-TIME additions of personnel to the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, are made merely for the purpose of, so to speak, filling out chinks in the organizations. Men are needed to bring certain functions of the services into proper proportion with other functions. Also, in the Navy, some destroyers not now active will be manned for activity. But the spirit of what is being done is shown by the fact that some two-thirds of the destroyers that are now inactive will continue inactive.

Mr. Roosevelt said that only two other actions are now contemplated under his proclamation. One is use of a fund of half a million dollars by the State Department to bring stranded Americans back from Europe. The other is, an increase in the number of Government agents available to take precautions against alien propaganda, subversive activity, possible alien sabotage and the like.

Under the proclamation, and under the statutes authorizing the proclamation, the President is empowered to take other steps. But Mr. Roosevelt made it clear that he expects to make use of only a limited number of the powers that are authorized.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S care to avert national excitement seems to be having effect. The present mood of the country, including its attitude toward radio and newspaper dispatches from Europe, seems to be one of consciously resisting infection by emotion. If, though Mr. Roosevelt's efforts and in other ways, this mood of national coolness is maintained, it will be easier for the country to make, in reason and not in emotion, the decisions which developments in Europe will make necessary from time to time.

In the popular American attitude toward this war, there is one striking difference from the attitude at the outbreak of the Great War 25 years ago. At that time, not one American in 10,000 dreamed there was the faintest likelihood or possibility that we would ever be drawn into the Great War to the extent of sending a conscripted army abroad. That was utterly absent from our thoughts and calculations. We looked upon the Great War, for many months after it began, as something distant—very dramatic and tragic, but not of direct concern to us.

Today, from the experience we had before, we know that a major European war is a thing containing possibility of involving us. Because we realize that possibility, and because fully nine out of ten Americans are determined to avoid it, we are much more cautious and cool in our attitude toward the opening stage of this war.

The First Week

The War On Five Fronts

THE WAR BEGINS. When the war broke out on September 1 with a simultaneous thrust by four German armies into Poland and concentrated air raids on Polish cities and lines of communications, Germany enjoyed certain initial advantages. She has since exploited these advantages to the full.

Her first advantage arose out of her ability to determine the exact moment for the outbreak of hostilities. Until the very last Great Britain and France were still trying to find a diplomatic settlement of the crisis. They continued their efforts even after the invasion of Poland began. For two whole days, therefore, Poland had to bear alone the full weight of the German attack.

Germany's second advantage arises out of her central position. She can shift her forces easily. The Allies, on the other hand, are geographically separated. Their superiority in manpower, sea power and financial strength cannot easily or effectively be employed against the Reich for some time to come. Because of that Poland's position has proved extremely vulnerable.

THE EASTERN FRONT. The German invasion began at four separate points on the Polish border. One army moved south and west from East Prussia. Another army moved east from Pomerania. A third army penetrated the Polish lines in Upper Silesia, one of Poland's most important industrial areas. A fourth German army moved north from Slovakia.

Moving at greater speed than any modern army has ever moved in war time, the German forces rapidly overcame opposition in the Corridor, Upper Silesia and the western part of Posen. Cracow, Poland's ancient capital and the burial place of her kings, was taken before the war was five days old. By the end of the first week Warsaw was in dire peril of capture.

In the face of the terrific German drive, supported by mechanized divisions and an overwhelmingly superior air force, the Polish forces steadily fell back. As they did so, the loss of Poland's great industrial areas of the west and the prospective loss of her capital was offset, to some extent, by the shortening of their lines. And with the Polish army undestroyed, that fact may compel the Germans to slow up their drive.

Indeed, some military experts insist that the first great stand of the Polish army will be at some point east of Warsaw. There with Polish forces consolidated and with German lines of communication considerably extended, the present German superiority would be reduced. Yet, even assuming the Polish high command can carry out such a maneuver, which is possible, the loss of some of the nation's principal industrial areas may make the provisioning of the Polish army difficult.

In the meantime the Polish capacity to carry out an orderly strategic retreat is reduced by German air operations on communications behind the Polish lines.

THE WESTERN FRONT. Any immediate easing of the German pressure on Poland depends on French and British capacity to launch a successful offensive in the west. There have been innumerable reports during the last few days of Allied penetration of the German lines. There is no indication, however, that the German west wall has been broken to any material extent or that it can be broken without a vast expenditure of men and munitions.

It is reported that the Anglo-French offensive, however, has compelled Germany to send reinforcements to the west. These reports are unconfirmed. But even if true, it does not appear to have weakened Germany's offensive capacity in the east. Both the strength of the west wall and the strategy Great Britain and France will follow in an effort to penetrate the Siegfried Line remain to be determined.

WAR IN THE AIR. One of the surprises of the present war has been the relative absence of air fighting during this initial stage. The Germans have made extremely effective use of their air supremacy against Poland. They have launched no attacks on British or French cities, however. Nor have German cities been bombed by Allied planes. British air activity has been limited to the distribution of propagandist leaflets and to air raids on German fleet concentrations in the Baltic.

In their vital theater of war, both sides appear to be sparring. The British and French, for their part, may be anxious to avert the charge that it is they who began air warfare on a major scale. In following suit, Germany may be moved by quite different but equally potent considerations.

In the first place, the German high command may feel that, for the time being, the air force can best be employed on the eastern front. And, secondly, the avoidance of any attacks on British and French cities may arise out of diplomatic considerations likely to come out in the open following the fall of Warsaw.

THE DIPLOMATIC FRONT. It is reported from Rome that Mussolini's hopes of a settlement have not been dimmed by the failure of his efforts to prevent the actual outbreak of hostilities. Italy's neutrality is as uncertain as it is full of difficulties, and nothing would probably please the Duce more than to be able to play the role of "honest broker" between Germany and the peace front. But whether he can succeed in doing so at this stage of the game is a gamble with the odds decidedly against it.

It is assumed that, either after the capture of Warsaw or, at the latest, after the destruction of the Polish army, when and if that occurs, Hitler will launch a peace offensive. The Allies will be given the choice of making peace or of continuing the war with Germany able to throw her full weight against them.

It is further rumored that Mussolini will support the Fuehrer's plan which may also have certain other "neutral" nations, such as Russia, behind it. However, the fact that both the French and British governments have denied any intention of making themselves a party to a dictated settlement, makes the outlook for a peace based on a German conquest of Poland dubious, to say the least.

THE WAR AT SEA. Between them Great Britain and France possess an overwhelming preponderance of sea power as against Germany. German submarines have done and can do considerable damage to Allied shipping during this first week of war. But it is doubtful if their ravages will ever reach the point it did during the first World War.

The command of the seas is of greater ultimate than immediate advantage. The blockade of Germany has begun. But for the time being that blockade means little to the Reich. Should Hitler's anticipated peace offensive fail and should the war continue, the effect of British sea power would certainly be felt in the Reich. In other words, if the initial advantages are all with Germany, the long-run advantages are all with Germany's enemies.

100-Degree Heat Sets Records Here

Hospital by Rescue Squad No. 1.

Liza Warfield, 74, colored, of 759 Gresham place northwest, was treated for heat exhaustion at Freedman's Hospital after she collapsed in the 3200 block of Sherman avenue northwest.

Casualty Hospital reported that ambulance surgeons treated three heat victims whose names were not recorded.

2,500 Get Off Early

Heat-stricken Government buildings were emptied of more than 2,500 workers one to two and one-half hours before quitting time. About 500 employes on the top floor of the Munitions Building were sent home at 3 p. m., the Railroad Retirement Board released about 1,000 at the same time, and an equal number of Treasury workers were turned loose between 2 and 2:30 p. m.

Yesterday's heat blast was swept into Washington by searing winds out of the southwest, the Weather Bureau said. The mercury hit 100 at 2:50 P. M., passing by 4 degrees the previous peak temperatures for 1939, recorded June 16 and August 9.

Besides tumbling the year's record, the Bureau reported the mark shattered at least two other records. It broke the previous record for September 8, 97 degrees in 1872, the year the Bureau's records begin.

Followed Cold Night

It became the second highest mark for September in the history of bureau records for Washington. Still unshattered was the mark of 104 on September 7, 1881. Officials pointed out that yesterday's heat blast followed by 48 hours a cold night which sent the mercury down to 58, lowest since July 17.

Hourly temperatures, beginning with the minimum for the day, follow:

1 a. m.	74	11 a. m.	91
2 a. m.	75	noon	94
3 a. m.	76	1 p. m.	97
4 a. m.	76	2 p. m.	98
5 a. m.	77	2:50 p. m.	100
6 a. m.	77	3 p. m.	99
7 a. m.	80	4 p. m.	99
8 a. m.	83	5 p. m.	97
9 a. m.	87	6 p. m.	93
10 a. m.	88

The bureau reported that the humidity ranged from 96 per cent at 1 a. m. to 31 per cent at the maximum temperature. A forecast of fair and cooler weather for Washington today will probably mean temperatures again in the low nineties, officials said.

Bund to Fight For 'Strictest' Arms Embargo

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—National and sectional leaders of the German-American Bund joined in a declaration today that their organization "will fight for a United States neutrality in fact, the calling off of the hate-mongers of the radio, press, etc., and for the strictest enforcement of the arms embargo."

Fritz Kuhn, national leader, and other bund officials, issued a statement asserting the war "is no concern of the United States," except as a reminder of "discredited, lying British atrocity propaganda" and the unpaid British and French war debts.

The Washington Government was called "a frankly pro-British administration" and the holding up of the German liner Bremen in New York Harbor last week by Federal officials was described as a "cheap example" of New Deal neutrality.

Listening In

("Doorn, Netherlands.—The former Kaiser sits beside a radio, with a large map, into which he sticks pins to mark the course of the war."—News item.)

With map and pins sits Kaiser Bill
Beside his radio;
He listens to the flashes shrill
That mark the war tide's flow;
He chuckles as he listens in
As Nazi leaders roar,
And is entitled to a grin—
For he's heard this before.

II

He harks to Hitler as he shouts
The world has done him wrong;
He hears the Nazi leaders spout
This war will not take long;
And as he fiddles with his pins
And notes each boast come through
He can be pardoned if he grins
And says, "I thought THAT, too."

III

"Der Fatherland abhors all war,"
He hears Der Fuehrer say;
"It's always been for peace before
And is for it today!"—
He listens to this sort of bunk
And harkens to the bull,
And thinks, "Ah, that's the same old junk
That once I used to pull!"

IV

"We Germans must have breathing space,
He hears wild Adolf yell;
"We're asking in the sun a place,"
He hears the chorus swell;
He shifts a pin and shakes his head
And nods quite laughingly,
Exclaiming, "That is what was said
Long years ago by ME!"

V

"The German race must dominate,"
He hears the Nazis scream,
And rubs his white and royal pate
As if still in a dream;
"We fear no nation or its guff,"
He hears the air waves throw,
And thinks, "Py golly, all this stuff

VI

"My armies are the best of all,
I'll show those British up,"
He listens to Der Fuehrer bawl
Into his mustache cup;
"I lead you all to victory!"
He hears Der Fuehrer cry—
And thinks, "He sounds a lot like me
When I was young and spry."

VII

He listens as the Nazi shrieks
That they cannot be whipped,
And to the claims a few short weeks
Will see the foes' lines ripped;
"I'll drive the whole world up a tree,"
He hears Der Fuehrer charge,
And says, "I'd think that that was me
If I was still at large."

VIII.

Into his map the pins are put
Again and yet again,
To know not where "Hit's" going, but
To mark where he has been;
At last he hums a sad, sad tune,
And to the woodpile goes,
"I'm apt to have a partner soon,"
Der Kaiser says; "who knows?"

London Halts All Radiophotos To United States

London, Sept. 8 (AP).—Censorship has closed radio facilities for picture transmissions from London to New York, while picture transmissions from London by cable have been sharply restricted due to the rush of news copy to be sent by the same means.

An order from the British Board of Trade today stated no photographs whatever could be imported into Great Britain.

As a result of the censorship imposed in Britain, the vast majority of pictures received in the United States within the last few days have been from Berlin, representing copy which has been passed by the German ministry of propaganda.

Flaming Drama Is Revealed in Capitol Film

'Blackmail' Stars Edward G. Robinson; Barnes Heads Revue

"BLACKMAIL." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of a story by Sabra Nolan and Dorothy Yost, adapted to the screen by David Hertz and William Sistrom, starring Edward G. Robinson, with Ruth Hussey, Gene Lockhart, Bobs Watson, Guinn Williams, John Wray, Arthur Hoyt and Esther Dale. Directed by H. C. Potter. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

The blackest villainy of the black and white world of the cinema is one of the outstanding features of "Blackmail," which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theater. Other qualities of this suspenseful film which make it a blood cousin to all melodramas dependent upon extravagantly violent action are a hero pure as a spring rain, a sturdy little child, to tug at the heart and an imprisonment for a crime not committed.

Edward G. Robinson is the completely sinned against hero of this film, which finds its setting in the oil lands of Oklahoma and the camps of chain gangs in the South. The odds that are stacked against him are utterly unbearable, but with the help of stanch friends and endless patience the innocent man regains his fortune and good name.

The ebony-hearted villain never fails to smile, never for an instant comes to the surface with his treachery, but Gene Lockhart plays him with nasty cunning. "Blackmail" has its beginning in events which came about years before the opening of our present story. The hero is trying to make a new life for himself after breaking away from a chain gang to which he had been consigned for a crime he did not commit. He has made a fine name for himself as an honest fighter of oil fires. He is about to become rich through a venture of his own.

Shadow of the Past

But this wretched villain pops up from the past, having seen the honest face in a newsreel. Threatening to reveal the unsavory episode, he drags money from his victim, tosses him over to the police and grabs the valuable oil well. How the figurative descendant of Edmund Dantes wreaks his revenge in an exciting escape from the chain gang to a fiery meeting with his enemy completes a film that certainly is not "arty," but which as certainly, is on the entertaining side.

Robinson and Lockhart, in this reversal of parts (for the former has more often been the villain and the latter the good boy) are workmanlike, if not too credible. Ruth Hussey plays the faithful wife and Bobs Watson the little boy.

Touches of humor come to the fore when occasion demands, as in the deadly scene at the camp of the chain gang, where all is hopeless misery. Reading the comic strips of some weeks ago, one of the men (the one who can read!) gloats: "I'm sure glad I'm not in Dick Tracy's shoes!" In other words, while there is nothing startlingly novel about "Blackmail," Director H. C. Potter knew exactly what he was about in splicing it together.

Barnes Tops Stage Bill

The Capitol's stage bill is headlined by tap-dancing Johnny Barnes, who made his first step in what has been a successful stage career in one of that large house's "Going Native" revues. In the months which have elapsed the young fellow has achieved a commendable assurance, not only in his expert miming of Bill Robinson, but in his own fanciful tricks.

Runner-up, is that excellent ten minutes by Capt. Tieber's seals. Possibly it is because we can't imagine when a seal is uncomfortable and when he is at ease which makes these wettish looking creatures so fascinating to watch. They applaud themselves, toot a patriotic horn and behave themselves as all well-bred seals should.

The Rhythm Rockets return after a two-month absence. Their military precision, trailing fans and "swing" dance to the "Faust" waltz music reveal them as the same Rhythm Rockets. Sara Ann McCabe wings her top notes in medleys of Kern and Porter and Joe Besser waddles eccentrically about the stage. Specialty dances are furnished by Rita and Rubens.

"The Ash Can Fleet," a biographical short subject, and an overture of Victor Herbert melodies complete a bill that will not permit much sleep to the fugitive from the city streets.

RICHARD L. COE.

Columbia

Sometimes the worth of a picture can be gauged by the chatter of the outgoing audience. One girl's reaction to the second-week run of "Four Feathers," which opened at Loew's Columbia Theater yesterday, was that the hero, for a cowardly guy, reformed in an awfully big hurry. Another woman liked the way he "handled them A-rabs" and a man thought it the finest Technicolor film he had ever seen.

There seems slight doubt that almost everyone likes it. There will be those who will charge it is highly jingoistic, with its die-for-dear-old-England theme, and others who will find its method of telling a story ramblingly disconnected. Perhaps they are all right. At any rate, you get your money's worth. And you'd better go early; the house is jammed.

Alexander Korda productions are usually noted for a number of things. In this play the portrayal of Ralph Richardson would seem to be the outstanding feature. John Clements is the fellow who gets the four feathers, caustic British manner of saying "yah-yah, you're a coward." And all because the boy resigned from his regiment on the eve of its shipping off to the Sudan to aid Lord Kitchener in quelling the Fuzzy-wuzzies and dervishes.

By—impossible—but plausible while you are watching them—feats of valor, the boy makes the four feathers a joke and not an insult. True love conquers once more. He gets the girl also. C. Aubrey Smith turns in another of his delightful "muggy" performances as a hale old military man who thinks everyone should have at least five lives to give for his country.

There is an interesting feature as a short. A filling station attendant shoots the rapids in the Colorado River and gains glory of some kind. The audience applauded. In the newsreel are by now familiar shots of the evacuation of children from Paris and London. The audience wept.

John Garfield and Society on Trial In 'Dust Be My Destiny,' at Earle

Priscilla Lans Is Costar in Drama Of the Wanderers; Pleasant Stage Revue

"DUST BE MY DESTINY." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Jerome Odlum, adapted to the screen by Robert Rossen, co-starring Priscilla Lane and John Garfield, with Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Billy Halop, Bobby Jordan, Charley Grapewin, Henry Armetta, Stanley Ridges, John Litel, Moroni Olsen, Victor Killian, Fertha Boros, Arthur Aylesworth, William Davidson and George Irving. Directed by Lewis Seiler. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

Were the method of its accomplishment as worthy as the purpose it seeks to serve, "Dust Be My Destiny," the new screen attraction at the Earle Theater, would be an impressive picture.

BELL

This Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Jerome Odlum enters a strong plea on the side of society's willingness to recognize inherent virtue even in those accused of capital crimes. Its elements of strength, however, manifest themselves so late in the action that they are largely nullified by all of the implausibilities, "hokum" and tawdry melodrama that have gone before.

The central figure in this spotty recital of a social and economic problem—not to say one of criminality—is an innocent youth who has been so persistently banged around by circumstances, harried by hunger and hounded by the police that he becomes a bitter enemy of all socialized living who goes "bumming" his way around the country as one of the most rebellious and defiant of the bindlestiffs. Sentenced to a 90-day stretch on a work farm, he participates, as the party of the second part, in the first of the film's flagrant inconsistencies. He and the stepdaughter of the farm's drunken and weak-hearted foreman fall precipitately and inexplicably in love, after having been the most cordial and belligerent of enemies. From that point on they become wanderers of the rods and roads together in the belief that Charlie, the foreman, has been killed in a brawl over his treatment of his stepdaughter, Mabel.

Melodrama Run Riot

The ensuing developments are pretty hard to take until the final trial scene is reached, after Mabel has turned her husband in to the law. They have been married in a public stage wedding, hired and fired, involved in the apprehension of a band of bank robbers and murderers, a jailbreak of their own and altogether led a migratory and miserable life until a defense attorney's plea to the jury for compassionate understanding proves to them that human beings are human beings, after all.

John Garfield is cast as the social revolutionist with a chip on his shoulder. It is the sort of role by which he is rapidly becoming trade-marked and is played with characteristic sullenness and close-clipped speech. Priscilla Lane is the Mabel and plays her part earnestly through all of its dubious deviations from anything that might be construed as authentic in its reflection of normal young womanhood.

The supporting cast includes the names of many players who strive with diligence and devotion to breathe some fluttering breath of conviction into their roles. Foremost among these are Alan Hale, as a strictly cinematic newspaper publisher; Henry Armetta, as a soft-hearted cafe proprietor; Charley Grapewin, a railroad freight brakeman, with a clairvoyant sense of character; Billy Halop and Bobby Jordan, of the "Dead End" kids, as youthful vagrants, and Stanley Ridges as the work-farm sot who "has two sides to his nature"—both bad. Frank McHugh appears in nothing more than a "bit" and John Litel and Moroni Olsen are mercilessly pitted against each other as rival trial attorneys. The rest matters even less.

Mayer and Evans Score Hit

Harry Anger's "Laugh Parade" stage revue for the current week provides a genial interval of diversified entertainment. Fid Gordon, a comedy, trick violinist, emerges from the "Concert In the Park" opening to do some bizarre fiddling and gives way to Ruth and Billy Ambrose in a group of ballroom and "jitterbug" dances. The Neiss Troupe of four trampoline artists supply a closing act that has plenty of "bounce."

The smash hit of the bill is scored by Ray Mayer and Edith Evans in a piano-comedy-song turn that stood out from here to there yesterday afternoon. Known to screen as well as stage audiences, these two are sure-fire on any bill and proved it again yesterday after a long absense from Washington.

The Roxyettes cavort in a variety of rhythmic routines and supply the revue with more than one of its most felicitous fillips.

A comic speedboat short subject and an issue of the Paramount News, devoted entirely to the evacuation of women and children from London on September 1, supplement a feature of such fine potentialities that it gives the impression of being its own worst enemy.

Gary Plans New Home in Desert

Gary Cooper is seriously considering homesteading in Beau Geste Valley in the heart of the California desert.

Cooper admittedly fell under the spell of the desert this spring, when he spent five weeks filming "Beau Geste" in the very middle of the dunes, 18 miles west of Yuma, Ariz.

The dunes, the star believes, would make an ideal winter retreat, although the heat reaches unbearable heights in mid-summer and sandstorms prevail in the early spring.

"I liked the desert. I liked Yuma, and the people there treated me royally," Cooper said. "I can't imagine a finer spot for a winter home."

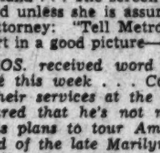
In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 8.—It's little things that count and cause delays. The deal between Goldwyn and Shumlin over "The Little Foxes" is not the price nor is it near that $250,000 everybody's been talking about. But the hitch is that Sam wants to be able to sell the story in case anything happens to him, or he can't get the right people for it and writer Lillian Hellman insists that nobody else but Sam must make it. This, I believe, is a new one, and the first time to my knowledge it's come up. And a grand tribute to Sam from his ex-employe Lillian Hellman.



HOPPER

I asked Sam what he was going to do with Zorina. He's loaned her to Abbott for the Rogers and Hart musical, and on which he has an option. After her New York run, he'll make it into a picture. After all, the musicals he did with Eddie Cantor were among the greatest box office successes ever known. And in "Palmy Days" eight years ago, he practically originated Billy Rose's Aquacade.

Do you remember those swimming scenes—I do! And did you know that "Hurricane" was the biggest success he ever made? It brought in over $4,000,000. And "Wuthering Heights" has already done over a million in Europe. So you can imagine what the loss of the foreign market means to Hollywood. Merle Oberon isn't expected back until February—that was their agreement.

No scene has ever been more dramatic than that played by Ernst Lubitsch, when news came that the Athena was sunk, he was at Joan Bennett's dinner table recounting his joy that his baby was on its way home. Walter Wanger picked up the news in the next room and called him aside. And that same scene must have been going on in a thousand homes. And for those criticizing Mrs. Labitsch, I've discovered she's a British subject and couldn't get a passport for herself. But imagine the plight of Maureen O'Sullivan. She's over there with both her baby and husband in this country. And Kay Francis' fiance Baron Barnescoe, after taking out his first papers here, had to make a trip to Germany. Now, I understand, he can't get out of the country. Poor Igor Gorin is the hardest hit of all. His home is ten miles behind the Polish front, with three brothers at the front.

And before going hysterical over the war, a famous wit who was at the front during the last one, says: "We now have a chance to live up to what all Europe called us after the last one—Uncle Shylock."

Eighteen-year-old Ruth Terry had an embarrasing moment on "Send Another Coffin" set when she wore a strapless evening gown. She had a duplicate made, of course, because she had a nasty struggle with a gangster. After that scene, she put on the stand-in tussle gown, but they'd forgotten to put stays in, which held the gown up—yes, the worst happened.

In the same picture, there's a sequence demanding a peacock, which was rented months ago. But when required to make his debut, Tay Garnett discovered it's moulting time and he'd lost his tail. So, instead of cutting the peacock out, they're getting our little feathered friend a false tail. Wonder if Ruth will carry it as a fan to preview?

You're lucky if invited to swim at the Garden of Allah. Charles Laughton spends all his waking hours there, giving imitations of a river steamboat and a whale.

Spence Tracy was having fun pulling Bob Taylor's leg at luncheon when he quipped: "You know, Bob, even with your youth and beauty I feel sorry for you. You're the ideal age for gun-fodder, and will be in line to be called first. Now I have nothing to worry about. And Bob retorted: "And to think it took a war to make you admit your age."

Nat Wolfe was at the Troc when a phone call came from Edna Best in New York giving Nat "Yes" to his proposal of marriage. He drove straight to airport and took the first plane east.

'Wizard of Oz' Begins Second Palace Week

Technicolor Spectacle Continues to Charm With Its Fantasy

It's a witching place, this Land of Oz. You go up in a cyclone and over the rainbow, past the country of the Munchkins and down the yellow brick road to the Emerald City. And there you'll find that king of hocus-pocus, The Wizard. But if you don't want to sail to Oz in a twister, it might be simpler just to go to the Palace, where "The Wizard of Oz" began its second week yesterday.

"Oz" is unlike anything you've ever seen on the screen in its humor, gayety and fantasy. Not that you won't be able to compare it to those other tours de force in Technicolor, "Snow White" and "The Mikado." It has the bubbling, childlike spirit of the first and many of its sparkling lines have a tang worthy of Gilbert and Sullivan. And Judy Garland in that artfully simple Adrain-confected gingham apron will remind you of the Tenniel illustrations of "Alice in Wonderland." But "Oz" is "Oz"—essentially the same fantasia of the Scarecrow, the Tin Woodman and the Cowardly Lion that delighted the country early in the century.

Is Overwhelming Spectacle

Director Victor Fleming has piled so much into the picture that it's practically overwhelming. From the moment Judy is whisked up into the cycloae you go with her to a never-never land of spells and charms and monkeyshines; of enchanted slippers, flying demons, the good Witch of the North, who floats about in a bubble; the bad Witch of the South, who appears and disappears in tremendous puffs of flame and black smoke; of enchanted fields of sleep-bringing poppies and dark and fearful woods, of trees that come to life, and in very bad tempers at that. Lastly, you come to the Emerald City with its very quaint gatekeeper, that amazing "horse of a different color" and the awesome Wizard.

Judy Garland does the best acting of her young career in "Oz," also her brown eyes and red-brown hair were just made for Technicolor. As for the trio of Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr and Jack Haley as the Scarecrow, Woodman and Cowardly Lion, it's impossible to imagine finer performances than theirs.

Flawlessly Cast

That goes for the rest of the cast, too, including Frank Morgan, Margaret Hamilton, Billie Burke and Charles Grapewin, right on down to the tiniest Munchkin of the Lollypop Guild.

But two of the biggest stars of "Oz" do not appear. We mean Jack Dawn, who contrived the astounding make-ups; Adrian, who designed the costumes.

"Oz" is a picture for the whole family. You'll feel guilty if you see it and don't take Junior. You might take your slogan from one of the picture's songs, "We're Off to See the Wizard."

The newsreel is just what you think it is. We wish it weren't.

MARY HARRIS.

Metropolitan

With a fortnight's run at the Earle to its credit as one of the most enthusiastically received motion picture releases of the season, "The Old Maid" yesterday renewed its downtown popularity as chief feature of the new week's bill at the Metropolitan Theater.

Adapted from the novel by Edith Wharton and the stage dramatization by Zoe Akins, "The Old Maid" presents a story of bitterness and frustration in which a mother is called upon to renounce her own daughter and pose as an acrid distant relative, while a vindictive cousin slowly wins the love of the daughter of a man she once had loved and lost. Less skillfully played than it is by Bette Davis, in the title role; Miriam Hopkins and Jane Bryan, as the daughter, this drama of clashing personalities and psychological impasse would be distasteful to many casual spectators. It is interpreted with such fidelity to character and intent, however, that it must be accepted by any audience as one of the cinema's outstanding achievements.

In addition to the talented actresses cast in the pivotal roles, a fine supporting cast contributes its share of able performances. Donald Crisp, George Brent, Louise Fazenda, Jerome Cowan and a long list of others aid in making "The Old Maid" memorable. It is, furthermore, faultlessly staged and directed with more than ordinary intelligence and discretion.

The usual short-reel subjects augment a bill that should be a "must" on the calendar of any discriminating picture-goer.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 8 (INS).—Irene Dunne has never felt that the girl reporter role in "His Girl Friday," alias "The Front Page," was right for her. Contrary to reports, she likes the story but could not see herself as a wise-cracking scribe. So Harry Cohn has put Jean Arthur into the femme lead opposite Cary Grant. The part is right down Jean's alley, so to speak, and everyone is happy including Irene. Columbia saves Dunne's big salary and gives Jean, who is committed to them, anyway, a worthy substitute for "Arizona," indefinitely postponed.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The only fly in the ointment I can see is breaking up the threesome who were so good in "The Awful Truth," Irene, Cary Grant and Ralph Bellamy. But even this is probably all for the best on account of it's being almost impossible to repeat a success. Jean and Cary were good, too, in "Only Angels Have Wings," also directed by Howard Hawks.

Hollywood is trying to keep its head above a sea of "war rumors" that has the town on edge. I do not know whether all of them have reached you through the grapevine route—but in case you have heard the false alarms let me assure you that there is very little truth in most of this gossip. For example, the Hays office wants it understood that it has not asked Charlie Chaplin to call off "The Dictators" because it might be considered propaganda film. "The Hays office is in no way interferring with production plans because of the war in Europe," explained Joe Breen, head of the Hollywood office. "We are leaving it to the judgement of the men at the head of this industry naturally not to incite war feelings—but to ban a comedy such as Chaplin's would be the height of overstepping censorship. It is not true that M.-G.-M. is changing the title of Garbo's picture because 'Ninotchka' sounds too Russian. The studio says that the only thing they've changed is to cut out a superfluous 'S' in the spelling. Nor is it true that Warners have been asked to call off "Underground," their sequel to "Confessions of A Nazi Spy." If that picture is postponed it will not be because it has been banned but because the actual outbreak of the war may make it appear dated."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: George Raft trained in today and Virginia Peine wasn't at the station; George Jessel flew in from New York today just to have luncheon with Norma Talmadge. But it's no reconciliation. He returns tomorrow. The Ice Follies, bigger and better than ever this year, brought out many stars. Jeanette MacDonald and Gene Raymond sat next to me and Jeanette told me she is getting ready to go into "New Moon" next week with Nelson Eddy. Virginia Field was in a ringside seat with Richard Greene and next to them were Townsend Netcher, Cary Grant, Phyllis Brooks and the Dick Forans. The Hal Roaches brought Mary Livingstone, Jack Benny, Gracie Allen and George Burns, Loretta Young and Jimmy Stewart got an overwhelming hand both at the Ice Follies and later when they went night clubbing together; Edna Best and Nat Wolff were a dancing twosome.

Harry Crocker took Louise Stanley both to the Ice Follies and later out dancing. Sitting not far from them was Addison Randall, Louise's ex, apparently taking up with Audrey Henderson where he left off a few years ago when he was engaged to her; Evelyn Chandler is the best figure skater since Sonja Henie and she does not try to imitate Sonja, which couldn't be done.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Some Parties to Dispel Gloom for Diplomats

South American Embassies and Legations Expected to Be Principal Scenes of Merriment in War Period

While most diplomats here feel so depressed about the European situation that talk of giving parties seems somewhat like attending a large ball the night after your mother has died, still, life must go on, and, as this country is not at war, the current gloom is expected to be enlivened from time to time by entertaining. It is quite likely that the South American embassies will hold the social spotlight this winter, with perhaps some of the European diplomats representing neutral countries joining in from time to time to make for some gayety among members of the foreign corps stationed in the Capital.

Now that the Minister of Thailand and Mme. Rajamaitri have announced that they will not give this year their annual fall reception, usually the first big party of the season, it is the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Cabero who will start things going. They are preparing to issue invitations for a large reception on the afternoon of Monday, September 18, in celebration of their country's Independence Day. This will be their first big social function since coming to the Capital last spring. The envoy and his attractive wife have been summering in nearby Sherwood Forest, Md., where they leased a cottage.

All has been comparatively quiet along the social front of the Japanese Embassy since the hostilities against China started, but this winter it is reported that the handsome stone building on Massachusetts avenue will again be the scene of some parties. The Japanese Envoy and Mme. Horinouchi, just back from White Sulphus Springs, are understood to be planning several receptions.

Gen. Trujillo May Return Here

Perhaps there'll be some more entertaining in honor of Gen. Trujillo, Dominican strong man, if and when he returns to Washington. He paid the Capital a visit early in the summer and was widely feted during his stay. The general sailed on the Normandie for Europe after his visit here, and had had his yacht sent over, hoping to cruise extensively for several weeks. The war put an end to that, and, as the Dominican army officer could not get bookings on a liner home, he is now crossing the Atlantic on his yacht. While nothing is yet definite about his schedule, it is expected that he will come to Washington again before returning to South America.

Meanwhile, news of those whose plans were completely disrupted by the European war continues to trickle back to the Capital. Polish Embassy friends of Michal Budny were relieved to receive a letter from him reporting that he is in England, where he will remain for some time. Mr. Budny, former second secretary here, was en route aboard the Pilsudski to Warsaw, where he had been assigned to the foreign office, when war broke out. The Pilsudski then took refuge in some neutral port, where she is remaining probably until the end of the war, like the other big Polish liner, the Batory, which is moored in the Hudson River.

The harrassed Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, who has been beating a path between his office and the State Department since hostilities began, is going to New York this week-end on business.

Patricia Morris Home From Europe

Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris are quite happy these days as their daughter, Miss Patricia Morris, has just joined them from Europe. She spent most of the summer there, bicycling and visiting youth hotels. Miss Morris landed in New York on Thursday on the S. S. Veendam, coming directly from Rotterdam. She expects to be here until September 20, when she will return to Vassar for her junior year. Going abroad about June 12, Miss Morris visited friends in England and then went on to France, Belgium and Holland.

The many Washington friends of Mrs. Fitzmaurice Day, wife of the former military attache of the British Embassy, will be interested to hear that she is doing her bit to help England during the war. She has taken a house outside London, and is busy welcoming refugees from London who have been allotted to her for boarding.

An American, Mrs. Day is the sister of Carroll Morgan, of Chevy Chase. She prefers living in England, even in wartime, while her husband likes this country so well that he makes his home here.

Ruth Pearson Engaged to Le Roy Eakin, Jr.

Mrs. Raymond A. Pearson, of Hyattsville, Md., announces the engagement of her daughter, Ruth, to Le Roy Eakin, jr., of this city.

The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Raymond A. Pearson, former president of the University of Maryland. She attended the Friends School here and later was graduated from Smith College.

Mr. Eakin also was graduated from the Friends School and from Duke University. He now is in business in Washington.

The wedding will take place in October.

Mrs. Smith Hempstone And Daughter Return

Mrs. Smith Hempstone and her daughter, Miss Beth Thompson, returned yesterday to their residence at 1730 New Hampshire avenue after a vacation at Atlantic City.

The wedding of Miss Thompson to Garfield Swift will take place next Saturday at St. Thomas Church and will be followed by a reception at the home of Theodore W. Noyes, grandfather of the bride-to-be.

Miss June Rossbach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max J. H. Rossbach, of White Plains, N. Miss Rossbach has chosen Miss Mary Struthers, of Rye, N. Y., as her maid of honor, and bridesmaids will be the Misses Edith Altschul and Elaine Oakley, of Greenwich; Marian Sulzberger, of White Plains, and Susan Bontecou, of Milbrook, N. Y.

Richard Anthony Moore, of Brooklyn, will be best man. Ushers will include Alfred M. Bingham, of New York; Mitchell Bingham, of Salem, and Dr. Charles Bingham, brothers of the prospective bridegroom; J. Howard Rossbach and Richard M. Rossbach, brothers of the bride-to-be; Douglas Auchincloss and John R. Hersey, of New York; Richard J. Barr, of Joliet, Ill., and Louis Walker, of St. Louis, Mo.

Attache's Wife Stays in Reich

"The course of events have changed things," to quote Admiral Witthoeft Emden, Naval Attache of the German Embassy, in reference to his wife's scheduled arrival in this country.

Originally Frau Witthoeft Emden—who married the admiral just a year ago—was scheduled to land in New York yesterday from Germany. Now, however, she will remain in her homeland where she went early this summer.

Whether "the course of events" will keep Frau von Boetticher, wife of the military attache, in Germany too is not known for no news of her was forthcoming at the embassy yesterday. Frau von Boetticher also left early in the season to summer in her homeland.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

PROMINENT VIRGINIANS abroad, whose friends and family here have been worried about their whereabouts, have finally gotten word through as to their plans, much to everybody's relief.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney has cabled her mother, Mrs. Dobson Altemus of Philadelphia, that she and her traveling companion, Mrs. George Grant Mason of Washington, are safe and well in Stockholm, Sweden, and will return to America as soon as they can get passage.

Mr. and Mrs. Newell J. Ward, jr., of Middleburg, whose honeymoon was interrupted by the war, will sail today on an American boat for New York. Mrs. Ward is the former Miss Bettina Belmont, daughter of Mrs. Arthur White of Middleburg. The Wards had passage home on an Italian boat, which was held up after war was declared. They left immediately for Paris, where they have been awaiting transportation.

MRS. PRESCOTT HUIDEKOPER, of Millwood, Va., has heard from her daughter, Miss Page Huidekoper, who is secretary to Ambassador Joseph Kennedy in London. She reports that she is "well and happy and will stay in England until sent home."

Mrs. Huidekoper's other daughter, Mrs. Cornelius Rathborne, and Mr. Rathborne will return from Europe as soon as they can get passage. The couple made headlines early this summer when they were caught in mid-air for several hours in one of the World's Fair parachutes. They went to Scotland last month to visit Mr. and Mrs. James Mills, of Long Island, and to do some grouse shooting on the estate which Mrs. Mill's mother, Mrs. Chichester du Pont, leased for the summer.

Mrs. Huidekoper and another daughter, Miss Roslyn Huidekoper, will go to Long Island this week to visit the Rathborne children.

THE FAIRFAX Horse and Pony Show, which begins this morning at 11, and lasts all day, will be attended by throngs, as some of the best horses on the circuit have been entered. Many picnic luncheons will be given on the grounds, with Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Barrett, of Fairfax, among the hosts.

E. M. Palmer is president of the show and Robert D. Graham is secretary and treasurer. W. T. Carrico, steward, and A. Smith Bowman, committee member, are doing everything possible to make the event a success. Gen. Guy V. Henry, of Washington, and Lodge Bowles, of Boyce, Va., will judge all classes.

MR. AND MRS. Richard Wallach, jr., of Warrenton, who were married in New York on Tuesday, returned to their home in Warrenton on Wednesday night and soon after were serenaded by their many friends. Mr. Wallach will be an usher this afternoon at the wedding of Miss Frances Glover and Arthur Carrington.

Miss Fanny Carter Keith of Warrenton, and her fiance, Francis P. Day, of Plainfield, N. J., who will be married at St. James' Church in Warrenton on Saturday, Sept. 23, will go to Washington today for a luncheon to be held in their honor by Miss Keith's cousin, Mrs. Louis E. Jeffries, jr. Later they will attend the Carrington-Glover wedding.

Mr. AND MRS. Moncure Nelson Lyon entertained at their home, Black Oak Ridge, last night with a supper for the bridal party and out-of-town guests here for the wedding this morning of their daughter, Miss Constance Bentley Lyon, and Dr. Ferdinand Edme Chatard 4th. The ceremony will take place at 11:30 at St. Francis de Sales Catholic Church, and will be followed by a breakfast at the Lyon home.

MISS ELEANOR CARTER, who has been visiting her aunts, the Misses Carter, at Meadow Grove, near Marshall, for several weeks, left yesterday by motor for her home in St. Louis. She was accompanied by Miss Elizabeth ("Bobbie") Gaddis, of Piedmont Farm, whom she will visit until the middle of the month.

Miss Gaddis will be a bridesmaid at the wedding next Saturday in Alton, Ill., of Miss Cynthia Jane Watkins, daughter of Mrs. Griffin Watkins, of Alton, to Miss Gaddis' stepbrother, Platt Okie. John Okie, of Virginia, brother of the future bridegroom, will be best man. Other Virginians motoring to Alton for the ceremony are Mr. and Mrs. Houston Gaddis, mother and step-father of Mr. Okie; another brother, Fred W. Okie, jr., and his sister, Miss Louise Okie, of Washington.

MISS ELIZABETH BEVERLEY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Beverley, has been entertaining a house-party this week at her home, Moutain Valley, near Berryville. The ten girls who have been at Carysbrook Camp, near Christiansburg, Pa., with Miss Beverley this summer are having a fine time going to swimming parties, on hay rides and to dances. They include the Misses Alice Scott, Alice Taylor, Margaret Towers, Closey Faulkner, Lou Streett and "Tootie" Johnson, all of Richmond; and Jean ("Missy") Randolph, and Virginia Harris, of Berryville.

Mrs. W. P. MacCracken Returns to Home Here

Mrs. William P. MacCracken has joined Mr. MacCracken at their home here after a stay at Finger Lakes in New York, where Mr. MacCracken's family had a home for many years. Mrs. MacCracken is now thinking of a fishing trip to Canada, but at present does not know whether she will be able to go away.

Earlier in the summer the MacCrackens took an extensive trip to the West Coast, visiting Sun Valley, Crater Lake, and many other points of interest en route. Mr. MacCracken attended the annual convention of the American Bar Association in San Francisco.

Father Fetes Miss Glover, Bride-Elect

Gives Dinner at Shoreham After Wedding Rehearsal

Warren Irving Glover entertained at cocktails and dinner on the Shoreham Terrace last night in honor of his daughter, Miss Frances Glover, and Arthur M. Charrington, jr., whose marriage will take place this afternoon at the All Souls' Memorial Church. The dinner followed the wedding rehearsal.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. William Schmick, of Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. John Yznoga, Mrs. Elizabeth Glover, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Glover, of Sanford, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. William Nelson Wilbur, of Warrenton; Robert Randolph and Harrison Colket, of Ardmore, Pa.; Lieut. and Mrs. Charles Lanman, Lieut. and Mrs. Robert C. Leonard, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Charrington, sr., of Warrenton, parents of the bridegroom.

Many motored up from Warrenton for the party last night. Among guests from the hunt country were Mrs. E. Astley Cooper, grandmother of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pool, Mr. and Mrs. William Doeller, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin King, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Haserick, Mr. and Mrs. David Batchelder, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Duer, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Jenkins, Mrs. Victor Froment, Mrs. Anthony Kennedy, Mrs. Carroll Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Randolph, Miss Jane Wilbur, Miss Elizabeth Wilbur, Miss Mary Seldon Kennedy, Mrs. Willard DeForest Morton and Hugh Spilman.

Austins Guests At Newport

Senator and Mrs. Warren R. Austin will be guests of honor at a dinner tonight to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fitz Simons at their place in Newport, R. I., where the Austins are guests for the week-end. The Fitz Simonses will entertain at a cocktail party Sunday afternoon.

Former Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, and Mrs. Moses, will join the party Monday and will remain all week with Mr. and Mrs. Fitz Simons.

Senator and Mrs. Austin have been at their home in Burlington, Vt., on Lake Champlain since the adjournment of Congress. Except for an occasional speech the Senator has been busy at his desk there.

Coffees Return To Capital After Visit in Europe

After a mad dash through the warring countries of Europe, Representative and Mrs. Harry B. Coffee have returned to Washington and are again in their apartment at the Shoreham. They went abroad in midsummer to attend the Interparliamentary Congress at Oslo, Norway.

As Representative and Mrs. Coffee left Danzig for Berlin, they learned that the borders were closing behind them and that they were on the last train which left for the south. They were in Paris during one of the blackouts and from there went to Le Havre, where they caught the S. S. Manhattan, which arrived in New York on Thursday.

Although they had originally intended to return on the Manhattan, the ship sailed a week earlier than scheduled, giving Representative Coffee and his wife, who were somewhere in northern Europe, just an hour to end their visit, pack, and catch a train which would get them to Le Havre by sailing time.

After a brief stay in Washington, Representative and Mrs. Coffee will go to their home in Chadron, Nebr.

Mrs. Chapin Plans To Return Monday

Mrs. Frederick Chapin will return from her summer home in Black Point, Conn., to her apartment here on Monday.

Meanwhile her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Selden Chapin, is in the throes of moving—having taken a new house in Georgetown on Twenty-second street. She has but recently returned from Seal Harbor, Me., where she spent the summer.

Cabinet Members Too Busy For Social Whirl These Days

Even Secretaries Remain at Their Desks; Morgenthau Takes Time to Fly to Meet His Family in N. Y.; Ickes Visits His Baby Son

On the question of Cabinet members' plans for the coming week-end, the statement "at his desk," followed by a series of dittos down the complete list of secretaries would just about cover the situation. There are one or two exceptions, and some of the families have not settled down yet for the long winter stretch in Washington.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull are both back for the season, and going nowhere for the week-end. Secretary Hull is at his desk not only all day but often far into the night due to "the situation."

The Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, jr., stole a few moments from his desk yesterday to dash up to New York and meet his family, Mrs. Morgenthau, son Robert and daughter Joan, who arrived on the S. S. Bergensfjord from Bergen, Norway. The eldest son, Henry 3rd, returned with his father from Norway last week on the Coast Guard cutter, which was sent to bring the secretary during the crisis. The family will go immediately to their farm, Fishkill, in Duchess County, to remain for a couple of weeks at least.

Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring is "at his desk," but Mrs. Woodring and the three children, Marcus, Melissa and Cooper Coolidge Woodring, are still in Fitchburg, Mass., at the home of Mrs. Woodring's parents, Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge. Mrs. Woodring does not expect to bring the children to Washington until about the middle of October, but will dash into town herself for brief visits sometime in this month.

Mr. Farley In New York

The Postmaster General, James A. Farley, accompanied by his two daughters, Betty and Ann, arrived in New York on Thursday aboard the S. S. Manhattan. The Postmaster came to Washington immediately and attended a Cabinet meeting that afternoon, then to New York for the week-end and will be back at his desk in Washington early next week. Daughter Betty will enter Wellesley College this fall, son Jimmie will return to the New York Military Academy at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson and the other daughter Anne, will continue her schooling in New York City.

The Acting Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, another ditto on the list of "staying-at-desk" people, had hoped to go with Mrs. Edison to the family home in Orange, N. J., for the week-end, but because of the "emergency" he and Mrs. Edison are remaining at their apartment at the Hay-Adams House.

It is doubtful whether any crisis would have changed the actions of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes this week-end. Every moment that is not spent dealing with affairs of state, is taken up with dashing over to Baltimore to Johns Hopkins Hospital to peek at newly arrived son Harold Mercer Ewen Ickes. The son's middle name is in honor of the Secretary's mother, whose maiden name was McEwen.

Jean Wallace Enters College

While Secretary Harry A. Wallace is dealing with the Agricultural situation, Mrs. Wallace is on the way to New London, Conn., to enter daughter Jean in Connecticut College. Mrs. Wallace will return to Washington for the season about the middle of the month.

The Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, who has been undergoing treatment at the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., for sometime, will remain there for a week or ten days longer. His small daughter, Diana, is still at their summer home in Mechanicsville, Md.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins is, as usual, at her desk, week-end or week day.

Miss Schramm Is Betrothed

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schramm, of Syracuse, N. Y., formerly of Washington, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothea Ord Schramm, to Ralph Creson Jones, of this city, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Jones, of Portland, Oreg. The wedding will take place in Hadley Chapel, St. Paul's Church, Syracuse, on Saturday, September 23, at 3 o'clock.

Miss Schramm is the granddaughter of Mrs. James Cresap Ord, of this city, and the late Maj. James Cresap Ord, U. S. A. She is a graduate of Syracuse University, class of 1838, and belonged to the Pi Beta Phi sorority. Since her graduation she has been a member of the staff of the Mibank Fund in New York.

Mr. Jones is a graduate of Reed College, Oregon, and studied for his master's degree at the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs. He is now connected with the United States Housing Authority.

Mrs. Abram Simon has returned to her apartment at the Shoreham after spending the summer in Maine and Atlantic City.

Mrs. James Greenberg, of New York, is spending several days with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin K. Leon.

Mrs. Donahoe Back From Geneva Visit

Mrs. Jefferson Davis Donahoe, known professionally as Elizabeth Stanley Wilcox, has returned to Washington from a trip abroad. With cancellation of a sailing, she was fortunate to obtain last-minute passage home on the liner Pennland.

Mrs. Donahoe went first to Ireland, where she toured the Free State. Later she took a motor trip through England and then went to Geneva to visit Mr. and Mrs. John Carter Vincent. Mr. Carter left Washington last spring, accompanied by his wife, to serve as consul at Geneva. Mrs. Donahoe reports they have a lovely old French house, which, though in town, has spacious, beautiful grounds.

Shorter Skirts Bring Flood of Questions on Beautifying Legs

THE DESIGNERS are selling us short on skirts again this fall, and the latest fashion is a double swing skirt which just covers the knees. It is a very mean trick. Why don't they try putting all the men in kilts?

Such brief skirts may be all right for the sweet young things and for the girls who are divinely tall and have perfect legs. But the 65 per cent of women who are under 5 feet 4 look shorter in short skirts. Besides, various beauty judges seem to agree that less than 2 per cent of all women have really lovely legs!

No wonder, now that the skirt trend is up, there is such a flood of questions about legs . . . How can spindly legs be filled out, taking on an ounce of weight? What about bunchy calf muscles—can they be smoothed out?

The answers to all such questions are exercise, massage and more exercise. Whether they are on a fat girl or a skinny one, thin and spindly legs are the penalty of underdeveloped calf muscles. And the best way to correct that is to take toe and and tap dancing until the calf muscles are properly filled out. Look at Ginger Rogers, Eleanor Powell and tiny Dixie Dunbar!

Mountain climbing, bicycling and rope-skipping are all fine for perfecting the legs. In case you don't live near a mountain and regard bicycles as skittish and unpredictable, you can get the same kind of stretching and contracting exercise with the aid of your kitchen stepladder.

Place the ladder in a doorway, so that you can partially support yourself with one hand. Then stand with the right foot half on and half off the lowest step, and with the weight on this foot. Rise on the toes—away up! Hold it, then lower the heels of the foot—still the right one—below the edge of the step and hold. Repeat ten times with the weight on the right foot, then transfer to the left and repeat for the same number of times. Gradually work up to 50 counts with each foot. This is a marvelous stretching and contracting exercise.

The Kidskin Coat Goes High Hat

Kidskin at one time knew no better fashion usage than as a trusty everyday coat. Now it has grown up into a thing of beauty. Witness this pearly gray kidskin with its rich blendings of smokier tones. A talented local stylist created this trim-waisted kidskin with great comfortable sleeves, smooth buttoned bodice and little turn-down collar. The piece de resistance of the design comes in the full boxy skirt topped by a waistband, made of gray suede and belted in the same

Call to Arms

PRESIDENT—Ladies, this special meeting has been called to do something about the European war. Has anyone any suggestions?

MRS. FLAGG—Madame President, I think there are a lot more important things closer at home that we ought to do something about. There's the corset situation, our more-mirrors-in-elevators campaign, our October benefit bridge party——

MRS. CLOSE—Yes! We ought to stay home and mind our own business!

MRS. FLAGG—And I understand a lot of the members haven't paid their dues.

CHORUS—I've paid mine!

MRS. TOOTLE—Madame President, may I say that I think it is our first duty at this time to keep fit. Now, this summer I had a very interesting experience with a Swedish gymnast. I took off 43 pounds in six weeks——

MRS. FLYTIE—Did he let you eat any sweets?

MRS. FLINT—I rise to a point of order!

PRESIDENT—Ladies! Please keep to the subject and please address the chair before you talk.

MRS. McADDLE—Madame President!

PRESIDENT—Mrs. McAddle.

MRS. McADDLE—I want to report that I didn't get my yearbook.

MRS. NITTER—Oh, say, Madame President, they misspelled my name in the yearbook. They had me down as "Nutter." They're always getting the "Nitters" and the "Nutters" mixed up.

MRS. FLYTIE—They had me down as Mrs. J. M. Flytie when it ought to have been J. Mortimer.

PRESIDENT—Ladies, please! We are trying to decide what to do about the war.

MRS. TOOTLE—I think we should organize a gymnasium squad at once. Now this Swedish gymnast—he was a Dr. Smorgasbord—he thinks fat is man's greatest enemy.

MRS. FLINT—I rise to a point of order!

PRESIDENT—Has anyone a motion about the war?

MRS. SPELLMASTER—Madame President, as a woman, as a wife, as a mother, as a grandmother, may I suggest that we write letters to the wives of all the war leaders, just appeal as one woman to another?

MRS. McADDLE—But Hitler hasn't any wife.

MRS. SPELLMASTER—Well, we could at least appeal to his better nature.

DR. NANNIE B. HOPPER—I should like to have it put in the record that the men are entirely to blame for this whole war. It would never have happened if the women had had any say. I move we pass a resolution to that effect.

MRS. SPELLMASTER—I think that would be a great mistake. We do not want to antagonize the men at this time. I think we should use a great deal of tact—especially in dealing with Mr. Hitler.

MRS. TOOTLE—I agree. Now, this Dr. Smorgasbord, he has a very interesting theory along that line. He thinks a woman can wield her most effective influence on men by developing the body beautiful. Now, just look at my hips.

DR. HOPPER—I object! Why should we always have to be pleasing the men? Look at their stomachs!

PRESIDENT—Ladies, please!

MRS. FLAGG—Madame President, I move that we stay out of Europe. You can't do anything with those people.

MRS. CLOSE—No. Why should we bother with a lot of foreigners?

MRS. YEAMAN—I second the motion.

PRESIDENT—There's already a motion before the house.

MRS. YEAMAN—I second that one, then.

MRS. McADDLE—Who are we voting for—the Germans or the Poles?

MRS. FLINT—Question!

MRS. SPELLMASTER—Madame President, I am definitely opposed to antagonizing the men.

MRS. TOOTIE—Yes! What we need is more rhythm in life. Now I took off 43 pounds in six weeks.

MRS. FLYTIE—Did he make you do the scissors exercise?

MRS. TOOTLE—No, all I did was the turtle flap—6,000 times a day. Just like this——

CHORUS—I can't see!

MRS. FLYTIE—Madame President, I move we table all the motions and have Mrs. Tootle go to the platform so we can all see her do the turtle flap.

CHORUS—Second the motion!

Once Attentive Young Man Now Seems Indifferent; Girl Asks How to Behave Toward Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am nearly 20 and am usually taken to be older than I am. I have gone with boys since I was 15. Last summer a young man of 27 who teaches in the same Sunday school department with me began taking me home from teachers' meetings. Then it progressed to dates after Sunday evening services. His sister and I have become good friends and she, with her beau, has been with us quite a bit.

I have had a few dates with him that were arranged ahead of time, but most of them were casually decided upon after church, teachers' meetings and other affairs, in the presence of our families and other young people . . . A few weeks ago, however, he didn't stay after church to see me, and the reason his sister gave sounded like an excuse. . . .

For the last two or three weeks, he has been friendly to me when we meet, and sometimes goes out of his way to hang around and talk to me in particular, but when Sunday night comes and we are in young peoples' meetings, etc., he goes to the other extreme to avoid speaking to me. He has been away on vacation for two weeks and I have not heard from him. His sister seems at a loss to know what to say to me, either in his presence or out of it.

So far as I know, he is not engaged and isn't going with any one girl and I have tried to think what I could have done that could have turned him away, but I am up against a stone wall. I think I have progressed beyond the "puppy love" stage, as I have survived several of Cupid's seiges, and this is really different. We like the same things, believe the same things and see things the same way. I always feel perfectly at ease with him and he seems at ease with me. He has a strong physical attraction for me, and apparently I have for him, but that is not the main issue. We have never spoken of love, but I believed for a while that he loved me. Now, I don't know.

Please tell me what I can do. Or do you think it best just to do nothing about it, and turn to someone else? Somehow, we seem to belong together, and I feel as if a vital part of me is gone . . . Also, I feel that an awkward situation will arise in the fall, when teachers' meetings are resumed, unless we have some sort of understanding. All the teachers know that we have more or less gone together for several months, and if he doesn't take me home or pay me special attention, there are going to be a number of embarrassing looks and remarks to and about us.

If things haven't straightened out by then, would it be best to arrange another way of getting to and from the meetings? And should I decline his sister's invitations, if any, or accept them and try to be nonchalant? Please help me, as I am almost ill from worrying about this. I do miss him so much.

R. R. W.

Don't Parade Chagrin Before the World

DEAR R. R. W.: Worried advance planning will only complicate the situation. Meet the needs of trying occasions (if any) as they arise. Conduct yourself with poise and tact. Use gracious manners. Put the young man and his sister completely at ease, so far as it is within your power to do so.

If tension and teasing comments ensue as a result of the young man's change of heart, it will be an admission of bungling stupidity on your part. It will be because you are embarrassing some and amusing others by wearing your aching heart on your sleeve. This would be a tasteless performance, indicating lack of gallantry and savoir faire.

If a girl finds that she cannot hold a given admirer's attention, she is foolish indeed to parade either her failure or her chagrin before the world; and even more foolish to put the young man on the defensive, as she would be doing in causing him to suffer a sense of guilt. The common sense—which is to say, the self protective and socially considerate—behavior in such situations is that which implies that the girl's interest in the man has been as casual, throughout the association, as his interest in her now seems to be.

You say the young man "goes to extremes," to avoid speaking to you after Sunday evening services. If this is a plain statement of fact, it must be that your conduct provokes such extremes. It must be that you angle so anxiously for his attention that he is forced to go out of his way to escape. It should be your purpose—now that you have reason to believe that his romantic interest is waning—to relieve him of all necessity for taking to his heels. You can best do this by amiably ignoring him.

When the fall meetings are resumed, your attitude toward him should be the same which you would employ toward any old friend whose comings and goings are of no special significance to you. When meetings break up, drift casually toward the exit with the manifest intention of getting home on your own power—or by whatever method may have been previously arranged. Don't hang back with the anguished hope—written all over your face—that he may come to the rescue. On the other hand, don't try to beat him to the door, and neither fall backward over chairs keeping out of his way.

If his sister says, "Coming with us?" or, "Can we give you a lift?" you might ask, "Where are you going?" or, "Is it convenient?" and work the thing out according to the dictates of your intelligence and intuitive sense of the fitness of things, at the moment. If you have an alternative way of getting home, say so and take that way. If you haven't, it might be more graceful and non-committal to accept her invitation.

It is a mistake to believe—as, apparently, you do believe—that your social interchange with the girl is inextricably bound up with your romance with her brother. It shouldn't be; unless, of course, you cultivated her only because she is his sister; or unless she was gracious to you only because her brother desired it. Your association with her, if properly self sustaining, should be treated as a relationship apart; a comradeship valued for its own sake. Thus, if she shows a disposition to be as friendly as ever, by all means respond in kind—without, however, exploiting her as a medium of entree to her brother's company. To reject her friendship only because her brother is no longer attentive would be inexcusably churlish.

I imagine the young man is genuinely fond of you, without wishing to become involved in any binding "understanding." It is not unlikely that his family has warned him of the possibility of your taking his attentions too seriously, so that he is trying, by indirection, to break off the relationship before mutually embarrassing commitments are made. Your youth (he is nearly ten years your senior); your naivete and intensity; and the nature of your co-operative work (plus the warning I imagine he has received from his kin), all lead him to believe, no doubt, that the association were best kept casual. In very self respect, it behooves you to meet him more than half way in that undertaking.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—New York, the clearing house of names and so and so, has been exceptionally busy of late. For instance, a local night spot which calls itself the "Coq Rouge," or what I used to call at home the Bantam Rhode Island Red Rooster, claims (by way of its press agent) that these people visited the jernt in one evening—Marlene Dietrich, Tony Martin and Alice Faye (husband and wife, as of today), Madge Evans, Adolphe Menjou and Verree Teasdale (spouse and spouse, as of tomorrow). Well, if this is true, so are we all. All of which goes to prove, you can't whip a publicity man who has run amok.

The greatest movie fans in this town, and I do not bar Mr. Damon Runyon, are Capt. Joe Patterson, publisher of our tabloid, The Daily News, and his lovely daughter, Alicia. Cap'n Joe will go to the nearest movie at any hour of the day. Yesterday, on Fifty-seventh street, I saw the two of them, pa and daughter, coming out of a small picture theater in the shank of the afternoon.

THE CAPTAIN, by the way, is now married to the former Mary King, of those publications. My spouse Hall, by the way, remembers when Mary King, then assistant Sunday editor of the Chicago Tribune, was the most beautiful girl in the newspaper business. He should know, because he has known or seen all the prettiest of our craft in the past 20 years. He fell in love with two or three—he knew Imogene Stanley, the prettiest newspaper woman of the twenties, who was sent to dance with the then Prince of Wales in Canada, fell in love with him and refused to write about him for her paper. But he still says, in his dotage, that Mary King, now Mrs. Joe Patterson, was the most beautiful newspaperwoman in the history of the business. Let him have his way.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, the greatest woman of our era, from some points of view, has stayed in town all summer, buried under her emeralds. She looks lovely—saw her at La Conga a few nights ago.

Stockings . . and Fall Fashions!
Many new fashions conspire to make stockings more than ever an integral part of the whole ensemble. They can no longer be considered simply as a practical necessity. They must be seen in their true fashion light—in relation to the silhouettes and colors of the season.
For instance, the ankle-length dresses shown by Molyneux and the bloused hems introduced by Schiaparelli bring ankles out into the open for evening and demand a more careful choice of stockings. You who have been wearing 3-threads with formal clothes because "they don't show anyway" will now want a 2-thread as sheer and lovely as Gold Stripe No. 200 at $1.35; 3 pairs, $3.90.
Truly, no fashion stands alone. Each affects another. And Jelleff's realizes this and promotes ready-to-wear, accessories, and hosiery in their proper relationship. For fashion and value you may always depend upon Jelleff's.

Coal Makes Saar War's Richest Prize

Great Industrial Region at Stake in First Western Battle

The Saar, scene of the first great western battle in Europe's second general war, is "a prize for any warring nation," the National Geographic Society declared yesterday in a special war-geography bulletin.

Not so large as Rhode Island, the bulletin continued, "the Saar is but a little patch of Europe."

Rich Coal Deposits There

"Valuable coal deposits underlie it," the statement added. "Its factories annually turn out vast quantities of steel, iron, glass, chemicals and pottery."

The Maginot and Siegfried Lines, guarding the frontier between France and Germany, it was reported in another bulletin, are "walls of steel and concrete."

"More than 800,000 people normally residing in the Saar make this region one of Europe's most thickly populated areas with more than 1,000 inhabitants to the square mile," the society said.

Comparing the two lines of fortifications, the special bulletin pointed out "the German line is years behind the Maginot line," which was planned nearly 15 years ago. The Siegfried line, on the other hand was started only in 1936 after German re-occupation of the demilitarized Rhineland.

Parallel Lines of Steel

"Along the German-Franco front, the Maginot Line and West Wall (Siegfried Line) parallel the Rhine for more than 100 miles," it added.

"Up and down the river stretch and also farther north, where the fortifications turn sharply west to follow the land border," the bulletin said, "the first line defenses are backed up by a chain of powerful casemates (armed and supposedly bomb-proof chambers), linked by underground galleries in certain exposed cases.

"In the subterranean 'barracks' of the French fortifications hundreds of thousands of men may live for several months. Adapted to the terrain of the country, these buried chambers and galleries contain power stations, control posts, storerooms, elevators, narrow gauge railways, hospitals, and living quarters equipped with bunks food supplies, radios, kitchens, hot water and ventilation apparatus—and even amusement facilities. Movable armored doors and interior firing chambers provide additional protection for the defense of underground fortresses in sections, in case of penetration by the enemy."

been declared," vessels having "either immediately or ultimately" an enemy destination won't be permitted to proceed.

The government announced that "Everything will be done at contraband control bases to examine vessels as rapidly as possible, particularly those which call voluntarily," and that in case of neutral vessels, "delay will be reduced to a minimum if they will co-operate by having their papers drawn up in the most convenient form."

Friction With U. S. Seen

The system arranged provides also that vessels calling in ordinary course of trade at British ports other than those designated as contraband control bases will be required to give customs full particulars on their cargoes, whether they are to be landed or are remaining aboard.

Provision is made for unloading such vessels in case there is a suspicion that contraband is being carried. Cargoes will be either "released, detained, or seized," and the vessel, "unless she has also rendered herself liable to seizure," will be released. Contraband cases will be taken into prize courts.

Thus it is clear that the scene is being laid for difficulties between the British and American governments such as those which caused serious tension in years before the United States entered the World War. It is yet to be seen whether revisions of American maritime policy since then will serve to minimize the difficulties.

The German submarine campaign of 1917 to which the British referred in their announcement is that which served finally to get the United States into the World War. In April alone of that year the Allies lost, largely through submarine attacks, nearly 1,000,000 tons of shipping. At one time the British food supply, largely imported, was reduced to enough for only six weeks and there seemed to be danger the country would be starved into submission.

Certain of Beating Subs

But by the close of 1917 the submarines were beaten through various means, most of which are now being utilized again by the British naval forces. While pointing out that certain losses by submarine attacks are to be expected at the outset, British authorities express confidence that through measures they now are taking this weapon will be defeated.

Rationing of food is likely to be applied at the outset to meat, butter, bacon, sugar and flour. For months past, the British government has been building up reserve stores of wheat, whale oil, sugar and other commodities.

Early introduction of a system whereby the essential commodities required to sustain life will be doled out to housewives is intended more as a precautionary measure, to avoid repetition of Britain's experience in the last war.

This time Britain intends to pull in its belt at the start of hostilities and eat more sparingly. At the same time the British navy has spread a dragnet for submarines over many seas, a convoy system for British freighters has swung into operation and agricultural production at home has been speeded up.

Additional measures, announced tonight, to protect food resources include removal of certain bulk stocks from vulnerable areas. Large quantities of meat, butter and tea were spread out a few days ago to storehouses in provincial areas.

The impending allotment of food, Morrison predicted, would be a "very good ration." He said there were only two commodities, bacon and butter, "where it may be found in some cases that the normal consumption of a family is greater than the ration allowance."

give indications she had no idea of going to war at present, but she also continued her war preparations.

[Informed circles in Rome believe that Italy has opened a diplomatic campaign to weld Turkey, Hungary and the Balkan states (Yugoslavia, Greece, Bulgaria and Rumania) into a neutral bloc under Italian leadership, according to a special dispatch to The Post.

[Emmanuele Grazzi, Italian Minister to Greece, saw Premier Metaxas, of Greece, in Anthens yesterday. It is believed that Greece will be the principal object of Italian attention. Its strategic position, as well as the presence of Italian troops in Albania, to its north, make it obviously the best objective for Italy's opening moves.

Turkey Difficult Problem

[Next in importance is Turkey, which admittedly offers a more difficult problem because of the solidity of the link it has forced with Great Britain. However, despite such connections with other powers, it is believed that the desire for neutrality predisposes any state, like Turkey, to seek the mutual support of other nations similarly situated.—Editor's note.]

Additional sailings of Italian passenger ships and resumption of train service to Germany was announced.

Daily newspapers have been limited to four pages, several periodicals have been ordered suspended, the size of others reduced. The government announced the action was due to efforts to conserve cellulose, which is used in making munitions as well as paper.

Prepare to Greet Franco

Cancellation of the inauguration of the Bersaglieri barracks in Rome, scheduled for tomorrow by Il Duce, was announced tonight.

Preparations were continuing, it was learned, for the scheduled visit of Gen. Franco of Spain to Italy this month.

The Vatican announced postponement of an audience Franco was to have had with the Pope, but there has been no announcement by the government that his trip to Rome would be called off.

Cuban Is Jailed On Radio Charge

Havana, Cuba, Sept. 8 (U.P.)—Police today arrested Pintre Bremer, a Cuban of German extraction, on a charge of violating President Bru's neutrality decree by broadcasting pro-Nazi propaganda from an unlicensed radio station here.

Police said they had been searching for the station for several months. They added that though Bremer admitted pro-Nazi sentiments, he denied broadcasting propaganda. The station's equipment was confiscated.

Caution Urged In Radio War Broadcasts

N. A. B. Counsels 500 Stations to Avoid Arousing Emotions

The National Association of Broadcasters yesterday urged radio stations to exercise both caution and restraint in the method and manner in which war news is handled.

Pointing out that "We can do nothing more than advise," Edward M. Kirby, director of public relations of the N. A. B., said his organization was "playing down dramatic and emotional presentation of news."

On the subject of "radio neutrality," the N. A. B. sent out to its 500 member stations the following advice:

"Though it is felt every broadcaster has endeavored to broadcast factual news, free from bias or editorial opinion, even before the code was adopted last July, headquarters would like to point out that the method and manner in which news is handled during the present situation is being as carefully scrutinized as is the content of the news broadcast itself.

"While it should not be necessary for any newscaster or announcer to change his style of delivery, it should be pointed out that all news broadcasts, especially news flashes interrupting another program already on the air, should be handled with the greatest degree of restraint."

In pointing out the seriousness and complexity of the problem of radio neutrality, N. A. B. headquarters, in its weekly publication, "Reports," quoted the following two paragraphs from a column by Dorothy Thompson published on Wednesday in The Washington Post:

"It would seem essential that . . . we should also have a policy adopted regarding propaganda, and particularly regarding propaganda on the air.

"The spoken word is probably far more inflammatory than the written word. The human voice is a more potent conveyor of emotion than is the printed page; it is less likely to appeal to reason; it is more capable of being misunderstood; from time immemorial it has been used to sway and control masses, and this possibility has been incalculably augmented by the radio and the power of reaching millions."

N. A. B. headquarters said it is aware of the delicate problem of station management and supervision raised by the war period. A fuller discussion of the matter will be made at the Chicago convention next week.

in the air or heard a shell strike the ship. Only one flash was seen.

It was clearly established, he declared, that the torpedo struck the vessel on the port side "slightly abaft midships," destroying the bulkhead between the fire room and the engine room, shattering the oil tank and destroying the stairway from the third class and tourist dining rooms to the upper deck.

Pasengers in these dining rooms who ate their dinner late that evening were trapped and drowned.

Cudahy, on the other hand, said that the testimony of officers and a number of American passengers was that the ship was first struck amidships and then by a projectile fired through the air.

The second explosion, he said, "hit with terrific force." This caused speculation as to whether the "second explosion" was not the torpedo itself.

Poles Say All Died At Westerplatte

London, Sept. 8 (U.P.)—A Polish radio report tonight said that all the men of the Polish "suicide battalion," estimated here at between 70 and 200, who held Westerplatte Fortress in Danzig Harbor, had been killed in a six-day German bombardment.

The Polish radio denied a German announcement that the garrison had surrendered.

Scientists Say They're 'Go-Getters'

May Be Yachtsmen And Merchants, Those Here Aver; Frown Only on Golf, Cards

By Christine Sadler

Far from being a laboratory recluse, the 1939 scientist is more often than not a "go-getter" with enough salesmanship to talk governments into letting him use submarines, navy cruisers, or anything else they have in stock.

Or that is the way it appeared yesterday at the meeting of International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics, which has brought to Washington several hundred of science's topnotchers.

Reports on work done by members during the past three years showed that they have left few spots on the earth uncovered and that getting an expedition under way is no mean business venture.

Deny Absent-Mindedness

"We have to be part sailor, part merchant, and wholly diplomatic these days. As in other lines, a scientific idea is little good unless you can sell it," one of the delegates declared.

Denying that their group contained more absent-mindedness than could be found "among businessmen," another delegate pointed to "side lines" enjoyed by their members as an indication that a good scientist need not be all science.

Dr. E. O. Hurlburt, of the Naval Research Laboratory, and Dr. Harlan T. Stetson, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for instance, are known internationally as yachtsmen as well as scientists. Dr. Frank Newman, of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, is labeled by his companions a "first rate magician," while Dr. Richard M. Field, president of the American Geophysical Union, is an authority on mid-Victorian literature and the "kerosene lamps that go with it."

No Golf Nor Bridge

Almost every scientist is a photographer, and not an amateur, either. He uses the camera in his work and has developed automatic photography down to a fine point.

At golf and bridge, however, most scientists draw the line. An impromptu survey yesterday showed that outdoor life is so much a part of the regular scientific routine these days golf is not needed—and bridge of little interest.

"We can't find out what we want to know about the earth without getting about over it. And when we're out in boats we have more absorbing things to do than play deck tennis," one declared.

One Item Little Used

Another expressed the belief that while the modern scientist has learned much about co-operation, he is just beginning "to scratch the surface" when it comes to getting one of his greatest potential contributions across to others. That is the scientific way of thinking—logic and truth without emotion—he declared.

Salute the Colors at American Legion Ceremony

Legion Has Mission, Says J. M. Johnson

It Must Preach Battleships, Guns To Defend U. S. Avers Assistant to Hopkins

The American Legion has "a mission to preach battleships, guns and ammunition to keep America defended," Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson declared last night.

"We've never been defeated in war and we never will be, but we can defend this country with less loss of life and less expense if we are prepared," he asserted at installation ceremonies in the Department of Commerce auditorium for the Department of Commerce Post of the Legion.

Johnson said funds for expanding national defense preparations were forthcoming "a few months ago after 20 years of pleading and imploring by the Legion."

Praises Industrial Planning

Emphasizing the organization also has campaigned for universal service, he remarked, "I hope it will never be necessary, but when war comes, it will come quickly, and we'll need trained soldiers at once."

He praised the program for speeding industrial mobilization "under the leadership of a Legion comrade," Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson.

Boys Provide Music

Guests included E. W. Libbey, chief clerk, Department of Commerce; Watson B. Miller, national director of the rehabilitation committee of the Legion; N. H. Enkle, director, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and Dr. Timothy F. Murphy, of the Bureau of the Census.

Joseph Malloy, past District department commander, and Haywood Saunders, senior District vice commander, represented the Legion's District department.

Music was provided by the Boys Drum and Bugle Corps of the District Department, Fort Stevens Post, No. 32, Drum and Bugle Corps and orchestras of the Navy Band.

Burial Today for Dr. Goodwin, Inspirer of Williamsburg Work

$17,000,000 Spent to Realize His Dream Of Restoration

By the Associated Press

Williamsburg, Va., Sept. 8.—Dr. William Archer Rutherford Goodwin, 70, who inspired John D. Rockefeller, jr., to undertake the restoration of Colonial Williamsburg at a cost of many millions, died late last night with the realization of his dreams almost complete.

Funeral services will be conducted in Bruton Parish Church, where he was rector until a year ago, at 3 p. m. Saturday by Bishop A. C. Thompson, retired, of Portsmouth, and the Rev. Francis Craighill, rector of Bruton Parish. Burial will be in a vault, placed in the historic church during its restoration.

Dr. Goodwin's "dream" of an eighteenth century Williamsburg, the colonial capital of Virginia, dated from his call to the pulpit of old Bruton Parish Church in 1902. He served for six years and then went to St. Paul's in Rochester, N. Y. Fifteen years later he came back to serve as director of public relations in the restoration. He again became rector of Bruton Church in 1926.

The restoration work was begun in 1928 and is still under way. Over $17,000,000 has been spent, the work including the rebuilding of the old capitol, the palace of the royal governors and other famous buildings of the old city.

He saw the complete restoration of the church with funds he raised by private subscription and had hoped to see the finish of the work on the George Wythe house. Just a week ago he completed the final revision of a book on the restoration, much of the work being done from his sick bed.

W. and M. Head Mourns Death

Richmond, Va., Sept. 8. (AP).—John Stewart Bryan, president of the College of William and Mary and publisher of the Richmond News Leader, said today the college recorded "its profound sorrow" at the death of Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, former director of Bruton Parish Church, Williamsburg and for a number of years associated with the college as "professor, friend and supporter."

Gaithersburg Shows Earth's Shape Changes

I. U. G. G. Scientists Inspect Data at Md. Latitude Station

Mother Earth is constantly losing her shape and if it were not for "exercise" often would look like a sagging grapefruit, scientists attending the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics said yesterday.

Her exercise consists of one movement—rotation. When she bulges or gets heavier on one side because of an earthquake or winter ice layers, she just keeps spinning until she gets back her equilibrium.

Because she refuses to be thrown off balance, the earth's axis is constantly shifting and the North Pole consequently moves as much as 60 feet a year.

Dr. William Bowie, acting general secretary of the convention; Dr. F. A. Vening-Meinesz, of the Netherlands, and Capt. N. H. Heck, of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, in commenting on these movements, said that, in addition to weight worries, the earth is constantly being "pulled about" by the sun and the moon.

Instead of being a hard, round mass of unyielding substance, the earth actually is elastic, they declared. Since the continents are not "built on solid rock" but have bases of heavy mud, they are influenced by the pull of the moon and earth tides almost as are the oceans, the scholars insisted.

Not all delegates to the union meetings, now under way at George Washington University, agreed with them. Some of the geologists were particularly skeptical—but to prove their cases all the scientists on the "continents do shift" side persuaded the non-believers to go with them yesterday afternoon to Gaithersburg, Md.

At Gaithersburg the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey operates an international latitude station, one of five established around the earth 40 years ago on the latitudes of 39 and 8. Records at the station show that Gaithersburg is sometimes in one place and sometimes in another due to the earth's wobbling.

Observers at the international stations "survey themselves" by taking measurements on the same stars each night. They note the exact point in the Arctic where the North Pole is at any given minute.

Doubtful Judge Dismisses Charges Against 2 Deputies

Intoxication charges against two United States deputy marshals were dismissed by Police Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday with the remark that "there is some doubt in my mind."

The defendants, John B. Hollohan, 38, and Gerald F. Costello, 34, were arrested by Policemen G. B. Sunderland and J. H. Titus, Third Precinct, August 30 after they were found "in a clinch" with a taxicab driver at Eighteenth and Q streets northwest.

Both officers testified that the marshals were "intoxicated, unsteady on their feet and rude." Both were cut and bruised, it was said.

Assault charges also were placed against the marshals on the night of their arrest, but they were nolle prosed when cab driver Maury Disney, 145 Twelfth street southeast, failed to appear at the District Attorney's office.

FairfaxGroup's Plea Fails to Save Rail Line

Service to Be Halted Tonight but Commuters Haven't 'Given Up' Yet

A last-minute appeal by delegates of the Fairfax Commuters League failed to convince the State Corporation Commission yesterday that the auto railers of the Arlington & Fairfax Motor Co. should continue operations after midnight tonight.

The delegates were selected Thursday night at a mass meeting in Arlington County. They went to Richmond yesterday to plea in person before the commission that economies could make the 24-mile line pay.

Judge Lester Hooker, however, said that the company's receipts were 14 cents per mile, while its costs were 18 cents per mile not counting overhead and bonded debt.

Norman Cobb, of Fairfax County, a member of the delegation, said last night that the commuters "have not given up." They will meet Monday with Franklin K. Lane, owner of the line.

The commuters claim that the discontinuance of the line will double transportation costs and force persons employed in Washington to pay an additional $80 a year.

Besides Cobb, the delegation included Herbert Williams, of the Fairfax School Board, and W. A. Sherman, of Vienna, Va.

Doctors Warn That Mole Can Become Cancer

The beauty parlor may be a danger parlor if the operator is careless when she encounters a mole on milady's anatomy, cancer specialists warned here yesterday at a meeting of the American Association For Study of Neoplastic Diseases.

Devoting the entire morning session at the Hotel Mayflower to discussion of melanoma—moles or mole-like growths on the skin which may lead to cancer—the specialists stressed the importance of preventive vigilance.

One way to court trouble is to pluck the hairs which spring from some moles, said Dr. Roscoe W. Teahan, of Philadelphia, who interrupted the addresses delivered on melanoma. It is frequently difficult to determine whether a melanotic lesion is malignant or not, he said.

Dr. Alice E. Palmer, of Detroit, recommended that, where surgery is resorted to, a large portion of surrounding healthy tissue should be cut out along with the cancerous mole to guard against any diseased cells being left behind.

Others participating in the discussion were Dr. Janvier W. Lindsay and Capt. A. DeCoudsey, of Washington; Dr. Julian L. Rawls, of Norfolk, and Dr. Murray M. Copeland, of Baltimore.

Archibald's Eye Cut Again; Title Go Postponed

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

It's no consolation to American League club owners with eyes turned toward 1940 to view the league's vital statistics at this writing. What they see, if they are looking is, the discomforting spectacle of the Yankees threatening to win the pennant by the widest margin in modern league history.

POVICH

When they slapped down the Red Sox yesterday for the third consecutive time, the Yankees expanded their league-leading margin to 16½ games, and with the season's end still three weeks distance they will most certainly surpass their 1936 record when they led the league by 19½ games at the finish.

It is obvious that the pennant race is over, despite the fact that the Yankees have not yet clinched the flag mathematically. No team has ever slumped in the last month of the season to the extent that the Yankees must slump if they are to lose the lead. A revealing handful of figures are handy, incidentally. The Yankees have 23 games to play. They need to win only 7 of them to clinch the pennant, even if the Red Sox by some miracle should stage a 24-game winning streak and capture all of their remaining games of the season.

But somehow, despite the fact that the Yankees have dominated the 1939 race to an even greater extent than they imposed their will on the race last year, they do not appear to be the same invincible menace to the welfare of the league generally. The Red Sox may finish a poor second this year, but they proved that the Yankees are not exactly invulnerable.

Joe Cronin Did League One Good Turn

The fact is that the Red Sox have proved that any good team with pitching can beat the Yankees. The Red Sox, however, didn't qualify. They were a good team without pitching. Joe Cronin had one of the worst collections of hurlers that ever graced a club that was supposed to be a hot contender, and he was actually licked before he started.

But Cronin did the league a service by staying close to the Yankees until beyond mid-season. And at one point he cut the Yanks' lead to 4½ games. It is conceivable that it would have been a dog-fight to the finish if the Red Sox had some pitching to balance the scales. There were times when the Yankees appeared everything but invincible.

Cronin's club has, in fact, licked the Yankees 10 times in 18 games this season. But it lost ground because its pitchers were unable to stand up against the other clubs in the league. And when a sixth-place team like the Nats is able to win seven games from the Yankees against only ten defeats, that fact is another argument for heart-taking among club owners.

The Yankees have been something of a lucky club this season, too. In a year when Lefty Gomez encountered considerable difficulty in winning, in a season when Frankie Crosetti struck an all-time low at bat and they were forced to tolerate a .240-hitting first baseman as a replacement for Lou Gehrig, the Yankees have been a fortunate sort of club.

DiMaggio Is Having a Grand Time

They have been fortunate in the sense that Joe DiMaggio is enjoying his finest season with the bat and hitting over .400. But their greatest stroke of good fortune, has been in the case of young Charley Keller. There was nothing awesome about that Yankee outfield aside from DiMaggio at the start of the season. Tommy Henrich and George Selkirk were not exactly potent fellows. And Jake Powell never scared any pitcher. And then young Keller began to flower.

Despite DiMaggio's amazing slugging and sensational performances from Ruffing and their rookie pitchers, it might have been a rough road for the Yankees if Keller had not come along to fill an outfield role with much eclat. Keller has been consistently pounding the ball for .350 with more than a generous sprinkling of extra-base knocks, and he is a better defensive outfielder than either Selkirk or Henrich.

It's pretty apparent by this time that the chief reason why the Yankees are such a stand-out in the league is that they have been reveling in disgracefully weak opposition. Enough has been written of the Red Sox pitching. It has profaned a great ball club otherwise. Around the league, otherwise, there isn't a team with a ghost of a chance of challenging the Yankees seriously unless there are wholesale face-liftings.

Currently the Chicago White Sox are a surprise third-place team, only a game and a half out of second place, but they lack a big league catcher, pitching and hitting power in the outfield. The fourth-place Cleveland Indians have clever pitching, but an uncertain infield, and one of the worst outfields in the league. The Detroit Tigers have Tommy Bridges, Rudy York, Hank Greenberg, Barney McCosky, an ageing Charley Gehringer and little else.

The Yankees could have been licked this season, astute baseball men believe. They think the pennant-winning Tigers of 1934-35 might have done the job, and those Tigers were no superclub. That's the point they make: Neither are the Yankees, despite their huge lead. They've been pushing over a league full of push-overs.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 8.—"My ambition in life," says Ted Williams, Boston's already legendary rookie, as he peeled off his shirt in the visiting players' locker-room, "is to walk down the street someday and have 'em say, when I pass, 'there goes one heluva hitter.'

CONSIDINE

"Fielding? I don't pay that much mind. Though maybe I'd better pretty soon because I'm lousey on ground balls. I'm too tall to be a good fielder. Hitting is my dish. Always could hit that ball," the long, lean 20-year-old kid generously admitted. "And if I don't break a leg, I'll still be smacking 'em 15 years from now.

"But I'm not out after that batting championship, particaly," the curly-headed, brown-faced kid said. "I'd like to cop that slugging mark . . . you know, long hits, runs knocked in, total bases and so on."

The way he's going now he'll achieve at least a couple of those ambitions this first year of his big league life, even though he got off to a bad start. He leads both leagues in runs batted in.

Would Move Right Wall

In one year, Williams has hit three times as many balls into the distant rightfield stands at Fenway Park in Boston than the rest of the league's hitters combined. With the count three balls and no strikes on him one day in Detroit he hit the next pitch completely over the double-deck rightfield grandstand, the longest hit there since Babe Ruth's heydey. He has battered planks out of the fences of every other ballyard in the league, except, oddly enough, Yankee Stadium, where he has the softest rightfield fence of all to shoot at. "All I can hit is grounders in New York," he told us mournfully, as he donned a tired-looking sweat shirt.

Williams likes the idea of moving the rightfield wall at Boston in a little. "I don't want much, 20, 25 feet would do me fine. I've knocked some balls a mile out into right this year, only to see those fielders back up and get 'em easy. The kid would have 30-some home runs right now, with those seats pulled in a little." Williams likes to call himself the kid.

Having come, seen and, to a great extent conquered, Williams doesn't find big league baseball as tough as he thought he would find it. "But once you get up here, it's different," he said. "They're good up here, but there's not so terrible much difference between this and the Association or the Coast League."

Never Saw Babe Ruth

One reason that Williams is generously going to leave the batting title to DiMaggio is that he, the kid, isn't very fast from home to first. "You gotta have a lot of speed to win that batting title; gotta be able to beat out deep grounders to the infield. I've only had three infield hits this season. Y'see, when I finish my swing I'm back on my heels, and I just can't get that start toward first. I'll stick to slugging. I'm getting better at it all the time. And that ain't cockiness talking. I know I am. Some people say I've got too much confidence, but I figure confidence'll never hurt me, so long as I don't get careless."

Williams' great regret is that he never saw Babe Ruth. The kid's faintly contemptuous air toward the caliber of big league ball players, in general, doesn't include Babe. The mention of the great man's name brings the look of a boyish hero worshiper to Williams' eyes. Williams is sure of himself, but not even he can believe it when Joe Cronin says that, given a convenient park, Williams would break Ruth's home run record. The kid has been said to possess Ruth's power, and swing like either Babe Herman or Bill Terry. We asked him who he hit like.

"I hit like Ted Williams," the kid said, with quiet pride.

Walters Wins 23d Victory For Reds, 5-2

Pirates Play Game Under Protest After Violent Argument In Fifth Inning

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 8.—Bucky Walters held Pittsburgh to five hits today and lofted an eighth-inning home run which broke a tie and shoved Cincinnati to a 5-to-2 victory, evening the four-game series here at two each.

It was Walters' twenty-third triumph of the season and was hurled with two days' rest. It marked the twenty-sixth complete game he has worked. He also was the tenth pitcher Manager Bill McKechnie had called upon in the past three days.

The Pirates played the game under protest after a violent argument in the fifth inning. With Lee Handley on second base and George Susce on first, Max Butcher rolled to Linus Frey. Frey tagged out Susce but threw wild past McCormick when the Pirate catcher bumped him, Handley scoring.

Umpire Charley Moran at first called Handley back to third, then decided to call Butcher out for interference retiring the side. One pop bottle was tossed from the stands at the umpire.

Walters' homer was his first of the season. Lee Gamble's single in the ninth inning sending two mates home clinched the game and ended a four-game winning streak for big Max Butcher, who gave up six passes and 11 hits but left 13 Reds stranded on bases.

Rookie Maurice Van Robays kept up his heavy hitting with two safeties, one a single Harry Craft misjudged which sent across a Pirate run.

Third Baseman Bill Brubaker, of the Pirates, crashed into the railing of a box chasing a foul and had to retire. Four stitches were required to close a cut.

Cards Pound Cubs, Keep Pace With Reds

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Enos Slaughter and Don Gutteridge batted the St. Louis Cards to a 10-to-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs today, enabling the winners to stay within four and a half games of the league-leading Cincinnati Reds.

Gutteridge sent four runs home on two triples and Slaughter drove in one run and scored thrice himself on a double and three singles. Bill McGee was jerked in the fifth when he was leading 5 to 1, after he had yielded two singles to Rip Russell and Bob Mattick and walked two batters, forcing in a run. Clyde Shoun finished the game and received credit for the victory.

Ambitious Brooklyn Club Wins, 11-2, 3-1; Rain Halts Nightcap

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 8.—The ambitious Dodgers shoved the idle New York Giants out of fourth place in the National League today with a double victory over the Philadelphia Phillies, 11 to 2, and 3 to 1.

The second game was halted by rain after five innings with the Dodgers outhit, 8 to 3. However, Bill (losing pitcher) Mulcahy made up this deficit with six bases on balls. Two of these in the first and another in the third were followed by triples by Jim Ripple, the veteran outfielder waived to Brooklyn yesterday.

Eagles Sign Kaufman As Grid Assistant

Former G. W. Quarterback to Assist Head Coach George Menke; Joey Also To Act as Playgrounds Director

Joey Kaufman, slight quarterback who ranks second only to Tuffy Leemans in George Washington University's football hall of fame, began what he hopes will be a successful career in the coaching ranks yesterday when he affixed his signature to a contract at American University.

Kaufman will act as assistant football coach under Head Coach George Menke, it was announced by American U. officials. For the time being, at least, his duties will occupy only part of his time, the rest being spent as a playgrounds director, which has been his job throughout the summer.

First Appointment

Addition of Kaufman to the staff is the first made by Staff Cassell, recently appointed athletic director at American. After the signing yesterday, Cassell indicated that Kaufman's efforts would go far toward lifting the Eagles into the local grid picture.

Kaufman is one of the few District players ever to earn All-American mention. The honor fell to him in 1936. He was also given a unanimous All-District berth that year, following a season of brilliant ball-lugging. After graduation from G. W., Kaufman went ahead to take his B. S. degree in 1938. Since then he has combined study for his masters with playground duties.

Sparked New York Eleven

Before his college activities, Kaufman sparked the Roosevelt High eleven, of New York City, to several championships and won for himself an All-City quarterback job in 1931. He was also a baseball and track star during both high school and college.

Kaufman's new role will not be assumed until September 18, when the first call for Eagle gridders will be issued. The late start is due to the shortness of American's schedule. The first game is not until October 14 with Randolph-Macon.

Of the five games on the card, three will take place on the home field—the Randolph-Macon clash, that with Johns Hopkins on October 21, and the homecoming battle with Blue Ridge College on November 11. The schedule will be wound up with games at Swarthmore (Pa.) College on November 18 and Juniata College, of Huntingdon, Pa., on November 25.

Yankee-Bosox Protested Game Ordered Replayed; 3 Fined

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 8.—Announcing an immediate protest, President Ed Barrow of the Yankees disclosed today that Will Harridge, American League president, in dismissing a forfeit at Boston Sunday had fined three New York players $100 each.

Harridge's decision, over-ruling Umpire Cal Hubbard, was made known in Boston today. The umpire had awarded the second game of a doubleheader to the Yankees 9-0 because fans littered the field with bottles and straw hats, delaying the game into the 6:30 p. m. Sunday curfew.

Both teams had been jockeying—the Yankees to rush completion of the eighth so two runs they scored would count and the Red Sox attempting to delay their turn at bat so the score would revert to a 5-5 tie at the end of the seventh.

Harridge fined Babe Dahlgren for swinging on an intentional pitchout and Joe Gordon and George Selkirk for running into deliberate outs.

Barrow said he had no objection to that part of the ruling which required the game to be replayed September 26.

Feller Wins 20th of Year

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 8.—Bob Feller became the second American League hurler to win 20 games this season when he turned in a five-hitter to give the Cleveland Indians a 12-to-1 triumph over the St. Louis Browns today.

Behind a 13-hit assault laid down by his mates, the young righthander was given an early lead and he coasted to victory.

Ben Chapman, with a triple, double and single, and Oscar Grimes, with two doubles and a single, led the Indian attack on Bob Harris. Jake Wade and Jack Kramer, Harris was charged with the defeat.

Red Ruffing, who won his twenty-first game today, is the other hurler to turn in a score of victories this season.

Griffs Win Streak Halted by Pippen; Wright Hits 2 Doubles

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 8.—Washington's winning streak expired today at the hands of the Philadelphia Athletics who drove Joe Krakauskas from the mound in three innings, and nursed their lead to a triumphant 5-4 finish. Fifteen hundred fans saw the A's thus avert a sweep of the three game series by the Nats.

Outhitting the Athletics 13-8, the Nats muffed several scoring opportunities and failed to move a run across the plate after the fifth inning, when Henry Pippen settled down to a steady performance.

Krakauskas surrendered all of the A's five runs in the three innings he pitched, allowing five hits and walking three. Thereafter Alex Alexandra pitched shutout ball in a four inning relief role, allowing only two hits, and Rookie Louis Thuman held the A's to one hit in two innings.

Nats Take Lead

In the first inning the Nats took a 1-0 lead after Welaj opened the game with a single to center, West walked with one out and the bases were filled when Lodigiani dropped Wrights' fly in short center for an error. Travis scored Welaj with a sacrifice fly to Moses. The A's went to the front 3-1 in the second inning, quickly filling the bases on Krakauskas before anyone was out. Siebert beat a grounder to Vernon, Chapman walked, and Newsome bunted safely along the third base line. Lodigiani scored two runners with a single to center, and Pippens' sacrifice fly to Welaj scored the third run of the inning.

Singles by West and Bloodworth were wasted by the Nats in the third inning, and then the A's came up with two more runs. Tipton walked with one out, and Hayes lined a triple to deep center to score him. Siebert grounded to Vernon and Hayes scored, when Vernons' throw to the plate was wild.

The Nats muffed a scoring chance in the fourth when pinch hitter Alex Pitko grounded into a double play after Ferrell had led off with a single, but in the fifth they staged a three-run uprising.

In the seventh the Nats had the tying run on second base with one out.

Canadian Challenge Trophy to Jack Cooper

Toronto, Sept. 8 (AP).—Jack (Pop) Cooper, of Kansas City, Mo., won the Canadian National Exhibition Challenge Trophy for .225 cubic-inch powerboats along the exhibition waterfront tonight.

Cooper piloted his Tops III to wins in three five-mile heats, duplicating his feat of yesterday. Robert Jaite, of Jaite, Ohio, 19-year-old veteran, was second in two heats tonight and Dave Forman, Buffalo, N. Y., was second in the first heat.

Jeffra's Featherweight Title Hopes Blasted; Fight Rescheduled For Sept. 25 or Oct. 2

The Joey Archibald-Harry Jeffra fight for the world's featherweight championship was knocked into the middle of the last week in September by rapid development's on Washington's fistic front yesterday.

Archibald's damaged eye, hurt again in training yesterday, caused a postponement which was given the reluctant blessing of the District Boxing Commission following a session with Commission doctors who examined the champion's wound.

Originally scheduled for Monday night at Griffith Stadium, the fight has been tentatively rescheduled for September 25 or 26. Another possibility is that it will be held on October 2.

Al Weil, Archibald's manager, precipitated a stormy scene at Turner's Arena yesterday when he cut short Archibald's public workout in the presence of 200 fans, and brusquely announced:

"Monday's fight is off. I won't let Archibald go into the ring with an eye like that."

Cut Reopened

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn was furious at Weil's declaration. He heatedly accused Archibald's manager of being "afraid of Jeffra and running out of the fight."

Weil stormed back at Ahearn: "Don't tell me how to manage my fighter," he shouted. "We're not afraid of Jeffra or anybody else. No promoter is going to tell me my boy has to fight. I'm his manager and I've got to protect him. Archibald can't fight Monday with that kind of an eye, and he's not going to. Title's don't come easy, we found that out."

Crestfallen at the turn of events were Maj. Ernest L. Brown, District Boxing Commission Chairman, and Heinie Miller, Commission Secretary. They had planned Monday's night show as a feature of the National Boxing Association annual convention here. Both men were at the arena when Weil suddenly pulled Archibald out of the ring and made his announcement.

Doctor Examines Eye

The Commission doctor, William F. Greany, was called to the arena by Commission officials and examined Archibald, substantiating Weil's opinion that the champion would be taking a foolish chance if he entered the ring on Monday to defend his title. Three stitches were taken in the wound.

"I find an inch-long cut that extends deep into the tissues of the upper left eyelid," said Dr. Greany. "It requires stitching immediately, and given a week or ten days it may heal sufficiently to permit Archibald to fight. But a fight for him on Monday is out of the question."

Thus substantiated, Weil was appeased. "I told you so, he said triumphantly. This isn't any run-out. Archibald will fight Jeffra just as soon as the commission doctor thinks he's ready. He'll fight in a week or 10 days or two weeks. Any time they want to re-schedule the show, we'll be here."

Well, manager of Lightweight Champion Lew Ambers, as well as Archibald, agreed to return to Washington with his fighter to resume training a week before the fight is re-scheduled. "Archibald will stay in Washington to appear as an honor guest as the N. B. A. banquet on Tuesday evening," he said," and he ought to be ready for Jeffra within two weeks."

Ahearn in Panic

Matchmaker Ahearn was on the verge of panic when the full realization that his pet promotion was to be postponed, was apparent. He blamed Weil for risking the injury to Archibald.

"I told Weill not to let Archibald box any more in training after

See BOXING, Page 18, Column 6.

Jeffra to Fight On 'Sub' Program

A substitute program with Harry Jeffra as one of the principals in the main bout was hurriedly arranged for Monday night by Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday following postponement of the Joey Archibald-Jeffra fight for the world featherweight championship.

The preliminary card arranged for the scheduled Archibald-Jeffra battle on Monday will remain intact for the substitute show, said Ahearn.

"Jeffra agreed to fight the best man available," said Ahearn. "I have four prospective opponents for him and one will be signed within a few hours. Jeffra will go in the ring against either Pablo Dano, who recently licked Al Mancini; Al Reed, the New York featherweight, or Spider Armstrong or Baby Yack, Canadian contenders.

Regular prices will prevail for Monday's show, instead of the $5.50 tops of the Jeffra-Archibald program. General admission prices will be $1.10.

Oliveri Defeats Murphy to Retain Public Links Crown

Poor Putting Marks Final; Score 2 Up

Maryland U. Hope Misses Two-Footer That Would Have Squared the Match

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

With an 11-over-par exhibition for the 36-hole finals, Andy Oliveri won his second straight city Public Links championship yesterday at East Potomac, beating Julian Murphy, the 19-year-old Maryland University student, and suprise finalist, 2 up.

Oliveri gained a second leg on the S. G. Leoffler trophy, and from the way he has outdistanced the remainder of the publinks tournament players for the past two years, he looks like a cinch to retire the $150 cup next year. Claude Rippy retired the previous cup in 1937 with his third consecutive championship.

Match Was Squared

Murphy hung to Oliveri all day, but he couldn't supply the winning punch after he squared the match on the final nine holes. His mallet-head putter betrayed him twice in the last four holes, missing putts of 3 feet and under, but he wasn't alone as Andy had several chances to build a comfortable lead but his putter wouldn't respond.

They were both guilty of spotty golf in the morning, Oliveri turning one up at the ninth with a 39. He increased the lead to three holes, the widest margin of the match, but Murphy cut it to two at intermission.

After halving the first three holes of the afternoon round, Murphy birdied three of the next four holes, one by chipping in from off the edge of a temporary green, and squared the match. Andy went one up on the eighth, a par three hole that he won with a four when Murphy three-putted, and he held that advantage entering the final nine.

Murphy, the unorthodox swinging youngster, whose powerful arms and wrists gave him the advantage off the tee on virtually every hole, won the twenty-eighth when Andy three-putted, lost the next when Oliveri holed a chip shot, but got even again on the thirtieth when Andy three-putted again.

Oliveri Goes to Front

They halved the next two, and Oliveri took the advantage on the short fifteenth with a regulation par while his opponent was short of the green and failed to get down. They both missed drives and second shots on the thirty-fourth, and halved it in bogey 5s, and Murphy missed a 2-footer to square the match on the thirty-fifth, after a great iron shot out of the rough.

One up and one to play, Oliveri hit behind his approach on the thirty-sixth and was way short in two, while Murphy was barely on the green. Andy ran the ball up within a foot of the pin, and won the hole when Murphy went for a birdie and then missed in his par attempt.

Tommy Doerer, jr., East Potomac manager, presented the trophy to Oliveri in the absence of S. G. Leoffler. Murphy has another opportunity to win one of the medals when he will play off with Jack Sinclair, Frank Clark and C. J. Boucher for the Rock Creek medal on Tuesday.

Gabby Stays As Cub Pilot, Says Wrigley

Chicago, Sept. 2 (AP).—Owner Phil Wrigley said today Gabby Hartnett would be manager of the Chicago Cubs again net season "as far as I know now."

HARTNETT

Wrigley broke his silence regarding the Cubs in answer to recurring rumors that he was dickering with Frank Frisch, former St. Louis manager and now a radio announcer in Boston, as the 1940 Cub pilot.

He said he had never talked with Frisch concerning the post.

"As far as I know at this time," he said, "Hartnett will manage the Cubs next season. I havn't talked with Gabby about 1940 and probably won't until late this year. Before I can say positively that Hartnett will remain I will have to learn from him whether he wants to continue here."

Meyer, Veteran 500-Mile Racer, To Quit Track

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, Sept. 8.—Louis Meyer, of Huntington Park, Calif., only driver ever to win the 500-mile Memorial Day automobile race here three times, will quit racing for a master mechanic's job, a business associate said here today.

Robert M. Bowes, of Indianapolis, said Meyer had signed a contract with the Ford Motor Co. to recondition Ford engines in his own plant near Los Angeles.

Meyer's victories in the speed classic were in 1928, with an average of 99.432 miles an hour; in 1933, at 104.162 miles an hour, and in 1936, at 109.069 miles an hour.

Bowes indicated Meyer's factory would hire some 200 mechanics and turn out 1,800 to 3,000 reconditioning jobs a month.

It will work on motors from Long Beach, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Portland, Seattle and Spokane Ford branches.

Pair of C. U. Linemen Hurt In Practice

Carrig, White May Be Out 10 Days With Shoulder Injuries

Catholics University's football team got its first taste of the injury jinx today when it was learned that Joe Carrig, regular end, and Johnny White, reserve center, will be out of action for at least ten days because of shoulder injuries.

Carrig wrenched a muscle in his left shoulder and White bruised a bone in his right shoulder. Both injuries occurred in the mild contact drill the Cardinals staged yesterday. The injuries come at a time when Head Coach Authur J. "Dutch" Bergman has been whipping the squad into condition. It will take Carrig and White an extra ten days to catch up with the squad.

Bergman planned to hold his first real scrimmage today. Coach Eddie LaFond's newly-arrived crew of freshmen will serve as cannon fodder. Most of yesterday's session was devoted to forward passing. An innovation introduced by Bergman is schooling his men in interceptions. Dutch had his backs and ends drilling all afternoon on how to handle a ball and get away quickly in case of an interception.

With the exception of Carrig and White, the line is coming along rapidly. Fod Cotton, line coach, has been taking the added burden of coaching the ends but will be relieved of this duty next week when Wayne Millner, new end mentor, returns with the Washington Redskins.

There is a bare possibility that neither White nor Carrig will see action in the opening game against South Carolina on September 29. Bergman has been devoting the morning drills to blackboard work and expects to have a flock of new plays to spring on the Gamecocks in the opening game.

G. U. Builds Grid '11' Minus Mellendeck

Jack Hagerty, head football coach at Georgetown University, yesterday announced that he was preparing to get along without the services of Joe Mellendeck, triple threat halfback sensation of 1938, this season.

Simultaneously Hagerty disclosed that he is centering his attention on Lou Ghecas, a junior and 176-pound letter winner, and Jack Spencer, also a letter man and 183-pound junior, as potential successors of Mellendeck.

Mellendeck, inactive in athletics since late last season, has not participated in any of the workouts as yet and it is generally believed he will forego football. The veteran has submitted his knee for an X-ray examination, however, and not until a final report on the pictures is received will any official decision be made.

"We are prepared to go along without Mellendeck," Hagerty declared yesterday. "In the event he reports it will be a pleasant surprise to all of us."

The general consensus at the Hilltop is that Mellendeck, a Baltimore boy, fears a recurrence of his knee injury that might injure his future in professional baseball, a career he is planning following his graduation from Georgetown.

Due to yesterday's extreme heat Hagerty was forced to curtail his practices, both in the morning and afternoon. As a result of the heat Joe Daniels, 196-pound tackle, reported a loss of 15 pounds and Frank Meglen, 193-pound fullback, a deficit of 16 pounds after the second workout.

Georgetown's full representation of 35 candidates were in line yesterday, Mellendeck alone being an absentee.

Tigers in Action

Bob Smith Reports For Terp Workout

By the Associated Press

Bob Smith, 195-pound regular center, rounded out the University of Maryland's football squad of 39 yesterday, as the Terps held their first rough workout of the season.

Sixteen lettermen, ten others from last year's squad and 13 sophomores compose Coach Frank Dobson's aggregation which he said it the best balanced group the university has had in recent years.

Mrs. Martin Wins At Washington Club

Mrs. Wilda Martin won yesterday's selected hole tournament with 20 for four holes and 88 for the round over the Washington Golf and Country Club course. Mrs. Douglas Tschiffeley was second with 22 and 96.

Mrs. J. A. Marr Wins

Beating out 20 entries, Mrs. J. A. Marr won the low gross prize of the Columbia Country Club Ladies Day tournament yesterday with a score of 90. Mrs. N. B. Frost's 93, with a handicap of 13 subtracted, was good for the net award. Low putts, 30, were registered by Mrs. W. B. Gedeng, and Mrs. G. E. Stratemeyer had the most fives on her card.

Betty Meckley Upset, 1 Up, In M.-D. Golf

Mrs. Schluderberg, Virginia Guilfoil Gain White Sulphur Finals

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 8.—Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, the Baltimore City champion, continued her upset role in the seventh annual Mason-Dixon championships here today by defeating Mrs. Betty P. Meckley, Washington, 1 up on the nineteenth hole of a semifinal match.

The other encounter, 1937 champion and co-medalist, Virginia Guilfoil, of Syracuse, upset the defending champion, Dorothy Traung, 3 and 2, after leading all the way. They will meet for the title tomorrow.

Sinks 20-Footer

Mrs. Schluderberg dropped a 20-foot putt on the nineteenth hole for a four and a win, while Mrs. Meckley's birdie putt failed. They were all even through the ninth hole, both well off their previous scoring for the week.

They halved two more holes on the back nine, making six in a row, before Mrs. Meckley won the twelfth via a 20-foot putt, but she was trapped and lost the thirteenth to be even again. A stymie gave Mrs. Schluderberg the lead on the fourteenth, and after halving the fifteenth in bogeys, the Baltimoreans went two up on the sixteenth when her opponent was in trouble.

A great pitch shot gave Mrs. Meckley a win on the seventeenth, and she evened the match on the eighteenth with a five on the par 3, after playing out of the shrubs, while Mrs. Schluderberg took six out of a trap. The latter then won the nineteenth.

Bee Little vs. Mrs. Cooper

Defeated 16 of championship semi-final brought Bee Little, Owensboro, Ky., and Mrs. H. J. Cooper, Manor, to finals with respective wins over Phyllis Bennett, Groose Point Farms, Mich., 6 and 4, and fellow Washingtonian, Mrs. R. L. Rose, four and three.

In the second flight final Mrs. H. A. Knox, Congressional, bowed to young Mrs. Edwin Tasker, Toledo, two and one, in an exciting final. In consolation, same flight, Washingtonian Mrs. G. Goetzman downed Mrs. Miller, same city.

Third flight finals saw Washingtonian Mrs. W. H. Warren fall before the superior play of Mrs. Louis Rosen, 4 and 3.

Yankees Beat Bosox, but Lead Is Unchanged

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 8.—Charley (Red) Ruffing took his twenty-first victory of the season today as the Yankees took a 4-to-1 rain-shortened seven-inning game from the Boston Red Sox to complete a sweep of their series.

The action of President William Harridge of the American League, in canceling a forfeit given New York over Boston Sunday offset the victory and left the champions' margin unchanged at 16½ games.

Ruffing scattered six hits with good effect and the only run scored against him was a homer by Jim Tabor in the seventh inning shortly before a severe rain and wind storm ended the game.

Frank Crosetti hit a homer for New York in the first inning to get the Yankees away to a fast start. His hit was followed by two walks and the first of two doubles by George Selkirk for another run.

His performance spoiled by the five bases on balls he gave, Dennis Galehouse nevertheless permitted only seven hits and blanked Joe DiMaggio, among others. Emerson Dickman took over at the start of the seventh, but rain came before he started pitching.

Va. U. Grid Star Lost for Season

Danville, Va., Sept. 8 (AP).—University of Virginia's football hopes were dealt a sharp reversal today with announcement that Luke Gosney, letterman end, would be lost for the entire season through a fracture of the collar bone.

Gosney sustained the injury in the final game of the baseball season while playing with Waverley, Va., in a semipro league.

Gosney returned to Danville last night after undergoing treatment in Richmond and said he had been ordered to take no strenuous exercise for "at least three weeks."

Wood Trailing Grant As Storm Ends Play

Hail and Rain Halt Forest Hills Program; Mako Eliminated in Straight-Set Upset; Quist and Riggs Easy Victors

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 8.—Rain and hail struck Forest Hills late today, halting play in the National tennis championships and leaving 16 uncompleted matches in the first and second rounds to be settled tomorrow.

Those two veteran antagonists, Bryan Grant, jr., and Sidney Wood, jr., were locked in another of their struggles in the stadium, with Grant getting the better of it, when the skies turned loose with both barrels.

The first wave of attack brought hailstones the size of pool balls rattling off the concrete bowl, and then it turned into rain. After 30 minutes the officials yelled "Uncle." The players long since had tossed in the towel.

The postponement set play back a full day, except that Bobby Riggs, the nation's featured star, will appear in a special third-round match tomorrow against Larry Dee, of San Francisco.

When the storm hit the Grant-Wood match, Bitsy had won a set, 6—3, and was leading Wood in the second at 12-11, with some 4,000 fans enjoying brilliant tennis.

Edward Alloo, an unheralded entry from Berkeley, Calif., provided the biggest noise previous to the storm by eliminating Gene Mako, who was a finalist here last year against Don Budge, by scores of 6—4, 6—2, 6—0.

Adrian Quist, the Australian ace, started reaching for the championship with a 6—0, 6—2, 6—1 victory over William Gillespie, of Atlanta, and Riggs loafed to an opening win over Felicisimo Ampon, a Filipino flyweight, 2—6, 6—4, 6—4, 10—8.

The other men stars came through about as scheduled. Though Jack Crawford, of Australia, was given a scare before he rallied from two sets down to beat Julius Heldman, the Hollywood hotspot, 5—7, 2—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—1.

Jack Bromwich, of Australia, had not started his match with Frank Shields when play stopped. Joe Hunt, still on leave from Annapolis, rosed out his young Davis Cup doubles partner, Jack Kramer, 6—2, 3—6, 5—7, 6—4, 6—3.

Joseph R. Hunt, Annapolis, Md., defeated Jack Kramer, Beverley Gardens, Calif., 6—2, 3—6, 5—7, 6—4, 6—3.

Helen Jacobs, second seeded American girl, limbered up slightly in defeating Mrs. John J. Schiefelin, of New York, 6—0, 6—0, and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan started with a 6—2, 6—0 win over Mariette Arguimbeau, of Glenbrook, Conn.

Tru-Blu Wins Again in U. S. Softball Play

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Tru-Blu softball team, of Washington, D. C., registered its second 1-0 victory of the national softball tournament here tonight, beating Rochester, N. Y., when Ralph Wellens singled Jacobson home in the fifth inning.

The second close triumph, following a 1-0 beating of the Chicopee, Mass., representative in the opening round after eight innings, installed Tru-Blu as one of the prime favorites in remaining games.

Abe Rosenfield, left-handed mound artist, who combines speed and control, worked both of Tru-Blu's winning efforts and was touched for only four hits during 15 innings. In the opener he issued three hits and in the nightcap only one, and the single base on balls he allowed in the second game was his only one of the day.

Victory over its first-round opponent was taken the hard way by the smooth-fielding Brewers. Despite a two-hit performance by Chicopee's Gudek, Tru-Blu managed to hold its rivals scoreless until it worked up enough steam to score the winning run. Tucker Woodward, one-legged first sacker, started the eighth with a triple and his runner tallied a moment later on Wasserman's single.

Denny Shute Paces Field At Glens Falls

Denny's 66, Six Under Par, Holds One-Stroke Lead Over Eddie Burke

By the Associated Press

Glens Falls, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Denny Shute's brilliant 66, six under par, paced the field today as the Nation's best shotmakers went after $4,000 in prize money in the eleventh annual Glens Falls open golf tournament.

Leading a field that produced 14 sub-par rounds despite adverse weather conditions, Shute put together a pair of 33s to hold a one-stroke lead over Eddie Burke, of Hamden, Conn., at the end of the first 18 of the 72-hole medal play. Tony Manero, winner last year, was in third spot, another stroke back.

Seven Birdies

Perfect control of his irons enabled Shute to knock in seven birdies. He slipped over par only once, on the 410-yard sixth,

16 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1939 ****

Archibald's Eye Cut Again; Title Go Postponed

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

It's no consolation to American League club owners with eyes turned toward 1940 to view the league's vital statistics at this writing. What they see, if they are looking is, the discomforting spectacle of the Yankees threatening to win the pennant by the widest margin in modern league history.

POVICH

When they slapped down the Red Sox yesterday for the third consecutive time, the Yankees expanded their league-leading margin to 16½ games, and with the season's end still three weeks distance they will most certainly surpass their 1936 record when they led the league by 19½ games at the finish.

It is obvious that the pennant race is over, despite the fact that the Yankees have not yet clinched the flag mathematically. No team has ever slumped in the last month of the season to the extent that the Yankees must slump if they are to lose the lead. A revealing handful of figures are handy, incidentally. The Yankees have 23 games to play. They need to win only 7 of them to clinch the pennant, even if the Red Sox by some miracle should stage a 24-game winning streak and capture all of their remaining games of the season.

But somehow, despite the fact that the Yankees have dominated the 1939 race to an even greater extent than they imposed their will on the race last year, they do not appear to be the same invincible menace to the welfare of the league generally. The Red Sox may finish a poor second this year, but they proved that the Yankees are not exactly invulnerable.

Joe Cronin Did League One Good Turn

The fact is that the Red Sox have proved that any good team with pitching can beat the Yankees. The Red Sox, however, didn't qualify. They were a good team without pitching. Joe Cronin had one of the worst collections of hurlers that ever graced a club that was supposed to be a hot contender, and he was actually licked before he started.

But Cronin did the league a service by staying close to the Yankees until beyond mid-season. And at one point he cut the Yanks' lead to 4½ games. It is conceivable that it would have been a dog-fight to the finish if the Red Sox had some pitching to balance the scales. There were times when the Yankees appeared everything but invincible.

Cronin's club has, in fact, licked the Yankees 10 times in 18 games this season. But it lost ground because its pitchers were unable to stand up against the other clubs in the league. And when a sixth-place team like the Nats is able to win seven games from the Yankees against only ten defeats, that fact is another argument for heart-taking among club owners.

The Yankees have been something of a lucky club this season, too. In a year when Lefty Gomez encountered considerable difficulty in winning, in a season when Frankie Crosetti struck an all-time low at bat and they were forced to tolerate a .240-hitting first baseman as a replacement for Lou Gehrig, the Yankees have been a fortunate sort of club.

DiMaggio Is Having a Grand Time

They have been fortunate in the sense that Joe DiMaggio is enjoying his finest season with the bat and hitting over .400. But their greatest stroke of good fortune, has been in the case of young Charley Keller. There was nothing awesome about that Yankee outfield aside from DiMaggio at the start of the season. Tommy Henrich and George Selkirk were not exactly potent fellows. And Jake Powell never scared any pitcher. And then young Keller began to flower.

Despite DiMaggio's amazing slugging and sensational performances from Ruffing and their rookie pitchers, it might have been a rough road for the Yankees if Keller had not come along to fill an outfield role with much eclat. Keller has been consistently pounding the ball for .350 with more than a generous sprinkling of extra-base knocks, and he is a better defensive outfielder than either Selkirk or Henrich.

It's pretty apparent by this time that the chief reason why the Yankees are such a stand-out in the league is that they have been reveling in disgracefully weak opposition. Enough has been written of the Red Sox pitching. It has profaned a great ball club otherwise. Around the league, otherwise, there isn't a team with a ghost of a chance of challenging the Yankees seriously unless there are wholesale face-liftings.

Currently the Chicago White Sox are a surprise third-place team, only a game and a half out of second place, but they lack a big league catcher, pitching and hitting power in the outfield. The fourth-place Cleveland Indians have clever pitching, but an uncertain infield, and one of the worst outfields in the league. The Detroit Tigers have Tommy Bridges, Rudy York, Hank Greenberg, Barney McCosky, an ageing Charley Gehringer and little else.

The Yankees could have been licked this season, astute baseball men believe. They think the pennant-winning Tigers of 1934-35 might have done the job, and those Tigers were no superclub. That's the point they make: Neither are the Yankees, despite their huge lead. They've been pushing over a league full of push-overs.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 8.—"My ambition in life," says Ted Williams, Boston's already legendary rookie, as he peeled off his shirt in the visiting players' locker-room, "is to walk down the street someday and have 'em say, when I pass, 'there goes one heluva hitter.'

CONSIDINE

"Fielding? I don't pay that much mind. Though maybe I'd better pretty soon because I'm lousey on ground balls. I'm too tall to be a good fielder. Hitting is my dish. Always could hit that ball," the long, lean 20-year-old kid generously admitted. "And if I don't break a leg, I'll still be smacking 'em 15 years from now.

"But I'm not out after that batting championship, particaly," the curly-headed, brown-faced kid said. "I'd like to cop that slugging mark . . . you know, long hits, runs knocked in, total bases and so on."

The way he's going now he'll achieve at least a couple of those ambitions this first year of his big league life, even though he got off to a bad start. He leads both leagues in runs batted in.

Would Move Right Wall

In one year, Williams has hit three times as many balls into the distant rightfield stands at Fenway Park in Boston than the rest of the league's hitters combined. With the count three balls and no strikes on him one day in Detroit he hit the next pitch completely over the double-deck rightfield grandstand, the longest hit there since Babe Ruth's heydey. He has battered planks out of the fences of every other ballyard in the league, except, oddly enough, Yankee Stadium, where he has the softest rightfield fence of all to shoot at. "All I can hit is grounders in New York," he told us mournfully, as he donned a tired-looking sweat shirt.

Williams likes the idea of moving the rightfield wall at Boston in a little. "I don't want much, 20. 25 feet would do me fine. I've knocked some balls a mile out into right this year, only to see those fielders back up and get 'em easy. The kid would have 30-some home runs right now, with those seats pulled in a little." Williams likes to call himself the kid.

Having come, seen and, to a great extent conquered, Williams doesn't find big league baseball as tough as he thought he would find it. "But once you get up here, it's different," he said. "They're good up here, but there's not so terrible much difference between this and the Association or the Coast League."

Never Saw Babe Ruth

One reason that Williams is generously going to leave the batting title to DiMaggio is that he, the kid, isn't very fast from home to first. "You gotta have a lot of speed to win that batting title; gotta be able to beat out deep grounders to the infield. I've only had three infield hits this season. Y'see, when I finish my swing I'm back on my heels, and I just can't get that start toward first. I'll stick to slugging. I'm getting better at it all the time. And that ain't cockiness talking. I know I am. Some people say I've got too much confidence, but I figure confidence'll never hurt me, so long as I don't get careless."

Williams' great regret is that he never saw Babe Ruth. The kid's faintly contemptuous air toward the caliber of big league ball players, in general, doesn't include Babe. The mention of the great man's name brings the look of a boyish hero worshiper to Williams' eyes. Williams is sure of himself, but not even he can believe it when Joe Cronin says that, given a convenient park, Williams would break Ruth's home run record. The kid has been said to possess Ruth's power, and swing like either Babe Herman or Bill Terry. We asked him who he hit like.

"I hit like Ted Williams," the kid said, with quiet pride.

Walters Wins 23d Victory For Reds, 5-2

Pirates Play Game Under Protest After Violent Argument In Fifth Inning

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 8.—Bucky Walters held Pittsburgh to five hits today and lofted an eighth-inning home run which broke a tie and shoved Cincinnati to a 5-to-2 victory, evening the four-game series here at two each.

It was Walters' twenty-third triumph of the season and was hurled with two days' rest. It marked the twenty-sixth complete game he has worked. He also was the tenth pitcher Manager Bill McKechnie had called upon in the past three days.

The Pirates played the game under protest after a violent argument in the fifth inning. With Lee Handley on second base and George Susce on first, Max Butcher rolled to Linus Frey. Frey tagged out Susce but threw wild past McCormick when the Pirate catcher bumped him, Handley scoring.

Umpire Charley Moran at first called Handley back to third, then decided to call Butcher out for interference retiring the side. One pop bottle was tossed from the stands at the umpire.

Walters' homer was his first of the season. Lee Gamble's single in the ninth inning sending two mates home clinched the game and ended a four-game winning streak for big Max Butcher, who gave up six passes and 11 hits but left 13 Reds stranded on bases.

Rookie Maurice Van Robays kept up his heavy hitting with two safeties, one a single Harry Craft misjudged which sent across a Pirate run.

Third Baseman Bill Brubaker, of the Pirates, crashed into the railing of a box chasing a foul and had to retire. Four stitches were required to close a cut.

Cards Pound Cubs, Keep Pace With Reds

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Enos Slaughter and Don Gutteridge batted the St. Louis Cards to a 10-to-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs today, enabling the winners to stay within four and a half games of the league-leading Cincinnati Reds.

Gutteridge sent four runs home on two triples and Slaughter drove in one run and scored thrice himself on a double and three singles. Bill McGee was jerked in the fifth when he was leading 5 to 1, after he had yielded two singles to Rip Russell and Bob Mattick and walked two batters, forcing in a run. Clyde Shoun finished the game and received credit for the victory.

Ambitious Brooklyn Club Wins, 11-2, 3-1; Rain Halts Nightcap

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 8.—The ambitious Dodgers shoved the idle New York Giants out of fourth place in the National League today with a double victory over the Philadelphia Phillies, 11 to 2, and 3 to 1.

The second game was halted by rain after five innings with the Dodgers outhit, 8 to 3. However, Bill (losing pitcher) Mulcahy made up this deficit with six bases on balls. Two of these in the first and another in the third were followed by triples by Jim Ripple, the veteran outfielder waived to Brooklyn yesterday.

Eagles Sign Kaufman As Grid Assistant

Former G. W. Quarterback to Assist Head Coach George Menke; Joey Also To Act as Playgrounds Director

Joey Kaufman, slight quarterback who ranks second only to Tuffy Leemans in George Washington University's football hall of fame, began what he hopes will be a successful career in the coaching ranks yesterday when he affixed his signature to a contract at American University.

Kaufman will act as assistant football coach under Head Coach George Menke, it was announced by American U. officials. For the time being, at least, his duties will occupy only part of his time, the rest being spent as a playgrounds director, which has been his job throughout the summer.

First Appointment

Addition of Kaufman to the staff is the first made by Staff Cassell, recently appointed athletic director at American. After the signing yesterday, Cassell indicated that Kaufman's efforts would go far toward lifting the Eagles into the local grid picture.

Kaufman is one of the few District players ever to earn All-American mention. The honor fell to him in 1936. He was also given a unanimous All-District berth that year, following a season of brilliant ball-lugging. After graduation from G. W., Kaufman went ahead to take his B. S. degree in 1938. Since then he has combined study for his masters with playground duties.

Sparked New York Eleven

Before his college activities, Kaufman sparked the Roosevelt High eleven, of New York City, to several championships and won for himself an All-City quarterback job in 1931. He was also a baseball and track star during both high school and college.

Kaufman's new role will not be assumed until September 18, when the first call for Eagle gridders will be issued. The late start is due to the shortness of American's schedule. The first game is not until October 14 with Randolph-Macon.

Of the five games on the card, three will take place on the home field—the Randolph-Macon clash, that with Johns Hopkins on October 21, and the homecoming battle with Blue Ridge College on November 11. The schedule will be wound up with games at Swarthmore (Pa.) College on November 18 and Juniata College, of Huntingdon, Pa., on November 25.

Feller Wins 20th of Year

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 8.—Bob Feller became the second American League hurler to win 20 games this season when he turned in a five-hitter to give the Cleveland Indians a 12-to-1 triumph over the St. Louis Browns today.

Behind a 13-hit assault laid down by his mates, the young righthander was given an early lead and he coasted to victory.

Ben Chapman, with a triple, double and single, and Oscar Grimes, with two doubles and a single, led the Indian attack on Bob Harris. Jake Wade and Jack Kramer, Harris was charged with the defeat.

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 8.—Announcing an immediate protest, President Ed Barrow of the Yankees disclosed today that Will Harridge, American League president, in dismissing a forfeit at Boston Sunday had fined three New York players $100 each.

Harridge's decision, over-ruling Umpire Cal Hubbard, was made known in Boston today. The umpire had awarded the second game of a doubleheader to the Yankees 9-0 because fans littered the field with bottles and straw hats, delaying the game into the 6:30 p. m. Sunday curfew.

Both teams had been jockeying—the Yankees to rush completion of the eighth so two runs they scored would count and the Red Sox attempting to delay their turn at bat so the score would revert to a 5-5 tie at the end of the seventh.

A's Chase Krakky; Nats Beaten, 5 to 4

Griffs Win Streak Halted by Pippen; Wright Hits 2 Doubles

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 8.—Washington's winning streak expired today at the hands of the Philadelphia Athletics who drove Joe Krakauskas from the mound in three innings, and nursed their lead to a triumphant 5-4 finish. Fifteen hundred fans saw the A's thus avert a sweep of the three game series by the Nats.

Outhitting the Athletics 13-8, the Nats muffed several scoring opportunities and failed to move a run across the plate after the fifth inning, when Henry Pippen settled down to a steady performance.

Krakuaskas surrendered all of the A's five runs in the three innings he pitched, allowing five hits and walking three. Thereafter Alex Alexandra pitched shutout ball in a four inning relief role, allowing only two hits, and Rookie Louis Thuman held the A's to one hit in two innings.

Nats Take Lead

In the first inning the Nats took a 1-0 lead after Welaj opened the game with a single to center, West walked with one out and the bases were filled when Lodigiani dropped Wrights' fly in short center for an error. Travis scored Welaj with a sacrifice fly to Moses. The A's went to the front 3-1 in the second inning, quickly filling the bases on Krakauskas before anyone was out. Siebert beat a grounder to Vernon, Chapman walked, and Newsome bunted safely along the third base line. Lodigiani scored two runners with a single to center, and Pippens' sacrifice fly to Welaj scored the third run of the inning.

Singles by West and Bloodworth were wasted by the Nats in the third inning, and then the A's came up with two more runs. Tipton walked with one out, and Hayes lined a triple to deep center to score him. Siebert grounded to Vernon and Hayes scored, when Vernons' throw to the plate was wild.

The Nats muffed a scoring chance in the fourth when pinch hitter Alex Pitko grounded into a double play after Ferrell had led off with a single, but in the fifth they staged a three-run uprising.

Optic Hurt In Drill With Spar-Mate

Jeffra's Featherweight Title Hopes Blasted; Fight Rescheduled For Sept. 25 or Oct. 2

The Joey Archibald-Harry Jeffra fight for the world's featherweight championship was knocked into the middle of the last week in September by rapid development's on Washington's fistic front yesterday.

Archibald's damaged eye, hurt again in training yesterday, caused a postponement which was given the reluctant blessing of the District Boxing Commission following a session with Commission doctors who examined the champion's wound.

Originally scheduled for Monday night at Griffith Stadium, the fight has been tentatively rescheduled for September 25 or 26. Another possibility is that it will be held on October 2.

Al Weil, Archibald's manager, precipitated a stormy scene at Turner's Arena yesterday when he cut short Archibald's public workout in the presence of 200 fans, and brusquely announced:

Cut Reopened

Weil stormed back at Ahearn. "Don't tell me how to manage my fighter," he shouted. "We're not afraid of Jeffra or anybody else. No promoter is going to tell me my boy has to fight. I'm his manager and I've got to protect him. Archibald can't fight Monday with that kind of an eye, and he's not going to. Title's don't come easy, we found that out."

Crestfallen at the turn of events were Maj. Ernest L. Brown, District Boxing Commission Chairman, and Heinie Miller, Commission Secretary. They had planned Monday's night show as a feature of the National Boxing Association annual convention here. Both men were at the arena when Weil suddenly pulled Archibald out of the ring and made his announcement.

Doctor Examines Eye

The Commission doctor, William F. Greany, was called to the arena by Commission officials and examined Archibald, substantiating Weil's opinion that the champion would be taking a foolish chance if he entered the ring on Monday to defend his title. Three stitches were taken in the wound.

"I find an inch-long cut that extends deep into the tissues of the upper left eyelid," said Dr. Greany. "It requires stitching immediately, and given a week or ten days it may heal sufficiently to permit Archibald to fight. But a fight for him on Monday is out of the question."

Thus substantiated, Weil was appeased. "I told you so, he said triumphantly. This isn't any run-out. Archibald will fight Jeffra just as soon as the commission doctor thinks he's ready. He'll fight in a week or 10 days or two weeks. Any time they want to re-schedule the show, we'll be here."

Weil, manager of Lightweight Champion Lew Ambers, as well as Archibald, agreed to return to Washington with his fighter to resume training a week before the fight is re-scheduled. "Archibald will stay in Washington to appear as an honor guest as the N. B. A. banquet on Tuesday evening," he said," and he ought to be ready for Jeffra within two weeks."

Ahearn in Panic

Matchmaker Ahearn was on the verge of panic when the full realization that his pet promotion was to be postponed, was apparent. He blamed Weil for risking the injury to Archibald.

"I told Weill not to let Archibald box any more in training after

Jeffra to Fight On 'Sub' Program

A substitute program with Harry Jeffra as one of the principals in the main bout was hurriedly arranged for Monday night by Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday following postponement of the Joey Archibald-Jeffra fight for the world featherweight championship.

The preliminary card arranged for the scheduled Archibald-Jeffra battle on Monday will remain intact for the substitute show, said Ahearn.

"Jeffra agreed to fight the best man available," said Ahearn. "I have four prospective opponents for him and one will be signed within a few hours. Jeffra will go in the ring against either Pablo Dano, who recently licked Al Mancini; Al Reed, the New York featherweight, or Spider Armstrong or Baby Yack, Canadian contenders.

Regular prices will prevail for Monday's show, instead of the $3.50 tops of the Jeffra-Archibald program. General admission prices will be $1.10.

Oliveri Defeats Murphy to Retain Public Links Crown

Poor Putting Marks Final; Score 2 Up

Maryland U. Hope Misses Two-Footer That Would Have Squared the Match

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

With an 11-over-par exhibition for the 36-hole finals, Andy Oliveri won his second straight city Public Links championship yesterday at East Potomac, beating Julian Murphy, the 19-year-old Maryland University student, and suprise finalist, 2 up.

Oliveri gained a second leg on the S. G. Leoffler trophy, and from the way he has outdistanced the remainder of the publinks tournament players for the past two years, he looks like a cinch to retire the $150 cup next year. Claude Rippy retired the previous cup in 1937 with his third consecutive championship.

Match Was Squared

Murphy hung to Oliveri all day, but he couldn't supply the winning punch after he squared the match on the final nine holes. His mallet-head putter betrayed him twice in the last four holes, missing putts of 3 feet and under, but he wasn't alone as Andy had several chances to build a comfortable lead but his putter wouldn't respond.

They were both guilty of spotty golf in the morning, Oliveri turning one up at the ninth with a 39. He increased the lead to three holes, the widest margin of the match, but Murphy cut it to two at intermission.

After halving the first three holes of the afternoon round, Murphy birdied three of the next four holes, one by chipping in from off the edge of a temporary green, and squared the match. Andy went one up on the eighth, a par three hole that he won with a four when Murphy three-putted, and he held that advantage entering the final nine.

Murphy, the unorthodox swinging youngster, whose powerful arms and wrists gave him the advantage off the tee on virtually every hole, won the twenty-eighth when Andy three-putted, lost the next when Oliveri holed a chip shot, but got even again on the thirtieth when Andy three-putted again.

Oliveri Goes to Front

They halved the next two, and Oliveri took the advantage on the short fifteenth with a regulation par while his opponent was short of the green and failed to get down. They both missed drives and second shots on the thirty-fourth, and halved it in bogey 5s, and Murphy missed a 2-footer to square the match on the thirty-fifth, after a great iron shot out of the rough.

One up and one to play, Oliveri hit behind his approach on the thirty-sixth and was way short in two, while Murphy was barely on the green. Andy ran the ball up within a foot of the pin, and won the hole when Murphy went for a birdie and then missed in his par attempt.

Tommy Doerer, jr., East Potomac manager, presented the trophy to Oliveri in the absence of S. G. Leoffler. Murphy has another opportunity to win one of the medals when he will play off with Jack Sinclair, Frank Clark and C. J. Boucher for the Rock Creek medal on Tuesday.

Meyer, Veteran 500-Mile Racer, To Quit Track

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, Sept. 8.—Louis Meyer, of Huntington Park, Calif., only driver ever to win the 500-mile Memorial Day automobile race here three times, will quit racing for a master mechanic's job, a business associate said here today.

Robert M. Bowes, of Indianapolis, said Meyer had signed a contract with the Ford Motor Co. to recondition Ford engines in his own plant near Los Angeles.

Meyer's victories in the speed classic were in 1928, with an average of 99.432 miles an hour; in 1933, at 104.162 miles an hour, and in 1936, at 109.069 miles an hour.

Bowes indicated Meyer's factory would hire some 200 mechanics and turn out 1,800 to 3,000 reconditioning jobs a month.

It will work on motors from Long Beach, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Portland, Seattle and Spokane Ford branches.

Gabby Stays As Cub Pilot, Says Wrigley

Chicago, Sept. 2 (AP).—Owner Phil Wrigley said today Gabby Hartnett would be manager of the Chicago Cubs again net season "as far as I know now."

HARTNETT

Wrigley broke his silence regarding the Cubs in answer to recurring rumors that he was dickering with Frank Frisch, former St. Louis manager and now a radio announcer in Boston, as the 1940 Cub pilot.

He said he had never talked with Frisch concerning the post.

"As far as I know at this time," he said, "Hartnett will manage the Cubs next season. I havn't talked with Gabby about 1940 and probably won't until late this year. Before I can say positively that Hartnett will remain I will have to learn from him whether he wants to continue here."

G. U. Builds Grid '11' Minus Mellendeck

Jack Hagerty, head football coach at Georgetown University, yesterday announced that he was preparing to get along without the services of Joe Mellendeck, triple threat halfback sensation of 1938, this season.

Simultaneously Hagerty disclosed that he is centering his attention on Lou Ghecas, a junior and 176-pound letter winner, and Jack Spencer, also a letter man and 183-pound junior, as potential successors of Mellendeck.

Mellendeck, inactive in athletics since late last season, has not participated in any of the workouts as yet and it is generally believed he will forego football. The veteran has submitted his knee for an X-ray examination, however, and not until a final report on the pictures is received will any official decision be made.

"We are prepared to go along without Mellendeck," Hagerty declared yesterday. "In the event he reports it will be a pleasant surprise to all of us."

The general consensus at the Hilltop is that Mellendeck, a Baltimore boy, fears a recurrence of his knee injury that might injure his future in professional baseball, a career he is planning following his graduation from Georgetown.

Due to yesterday's extreme heat Hagerty was forced to curtail his practices, both in the morning and afternoon. As a result of the heat Joe Daniels, 196-pound tackle, reported a loss of 15 pounds and Frank Meglen, 193-pound fullback, a deficit of 16 pounds after the second workout.

Georgetown's full representation of 35 candidates were in line yesterday, Mellendeck alone being an absentee.

Carrig, White May Be Out 10 Days With Shoulder Injuries

Catholics University's football team got its first taste of the injury jinx today when it was learned that Joe Carrig, regular end, and Johnny White, reserve center, will be out of action for at least ten days because of shoulder injuries.

Carrig wrenched a muscle in his left shoulder and White bruised a bone in his right shoulder. Both injuries occurred in the mild contact drill the Cardinals staged yesterday. The injuries come at a time when Head Coach Authur J. "Dutch" Bergman has been whipping the squad into condition. It will take Carrig and White an extra ten days to catch up with the squad.

Bergman planned to hold his first real scrimmage today. Coach Eddie LaFond's newly-arrived crew of freshmen will serve as cannon fodder. Most of yesterday's session was devoted to forward passing. An innovation introduced by Bergman is schooling his men in interceptions. Dutch had his backs and ends drilling all afternoon on how to handle a ball and get away quickly in case of an interception.

With the exception of Carrig and White, the line is coming along rapidly. Fod Cotton, line coach, has been taking the added burden of coaching the ends but will be relieved of this duty next week when Wayne Millner, new end mentor, returns with the Washington Redskins.

There is a bare possibility that neither White nor Carrig will see action in the opening game against South Carolina on September 29. Bergman has been devoting the morning drills to blackboard work and expects to have a flock of new plays to spring on the Gamecocks in the opening game.

Bob Smith Reports For Terp Workout

By the Associated Press

Bob Smith, 195-pound regular center, rounded out the University of Maryland's football squad of 39 yesterday, as the Terps held their first rough workout of the season.

Sixteen lettermen, ten others from last year's squad and 13 sophomores compose Coach Frank Dobson's aggregation which he said it the best balanced group the university has had in recent years.

Mrs. Martin Wins At Washington Club

Mrs. Wilda Martin won yesterday's selected hole tournament with 20 for four holes and 88 for the round over the Washington Golf and Country Club course. Mrs. Douglas Tschiffeley was second with 22 and 96.

Mrs. J. A. Marr Wins

Beating out 20 entries, Mrs. J. A. Marr won the low gross prize of the Columbia Country Club Ladies Day tournament yesterday with a score of 90. Mrs. N. B. Frost's 93, with a handicap of 13 subtracted, was good for the net award. Low putts, 30, were registered by Mrs. W. B. Gedeng, and Mrs. G. E. Stratemeyer had the most fives on her card.

Betty Meckley Upset, 1 Up, In M.-D. Golf

Mrs. Schluderberg, Virginia Guilfoil Gain White Sulphur Finals

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 8.—Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, the Baltimore City champion, continued her upset role in the seventh annual Mason-Dixon championships here today by defeating Mrs. Betty P. Meckley, Washington, 1 up on the nineteenth hole of a semifinal match.

The other encounter, 1937 champion and co-medalist, Virginia Guilfoil, of Syracuse, upset the defending champion, Dorothy Traung, 3 and 2, after leading all the way. They will meet for the title tomorrow.

Sinks 20-Footer

Mrs. Schluderberg dropped a 20-foot putt on the nineteenth hole for a four and a win, while Mrs. Meckley's birdie putt failed. They were all even through the ninth hole, both well off their previous scoring for the week.

They halved two more holes on the back nine, making six in a row, before Mrs. Meckley won the twelfth via a 20-foot putt, but she was trapped and lost the thirteenth to be even again. A stymie gave Mrs. Schluderberg the lead on the fourteenth, and after halving the fifteenth in bogeys, the Baltimoreans went two up on the sixteenth when her opponent was in trouble.

A great pitch shot gave Mrs. Meckley a win on the seventeenth, and she evened the match on the eighteenth with a five on the par 3, after playing out of the shrubs, while Mrs. Schluderberg took six out of a trap. The latter then won the nineteenth.

Bee Little vs. Mrs. Cooper

Defeated 16 of championship semi-final brought Bee Little, Owensboro, Ky., and Mrs. H. J. Cooper, Manor, to finals with respective wins over Phyllis Bennett, Groose Point Farms, Mich., 6 and 4, and fellow Washingtonian, Mrs. R. L. Rose, four and three.

In the second flight final Mrs. H. A. Knox, Congressional, bowed to young Mrs. Edwin Tasker, Toledo, two and one, in an exciting final. In consolation, same flight, Washingtonian Mrs. G. Goetzman downed Mrs. Miller, same city.

Third flight finals saw Washingtonian Mrs. W. H. Warren fall before the superior play of Mrs. Louis Rosen, 4 and 3.

Yankees Beat Bosox, but Lead Is Unchanged

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 8.—Charley (Red) Ruffing took his twenty-first victory of the season today as the Yankees took a 4-to-1 rain-shortened seven-inning game from the Boston Red Sox to complete a sweep of their series.

The action of President William Harridge of the American League, in canceling a forfeit given New York over Boston Sunday offset the victory and left the champions' margin unchanged at 16½ games.

Ruffing scattered six hits with good effect and the only run scored against him was a homer by Jim Tabor in the seventh inning shortly before a severe rain and wind storm ended the game.

Frank Crosetti hit a homer for New York in the first inning to get the Yankees away to a fast start. His hit was followed by two walks and the first of two doubles by George Selkirk for another run.

His performance spoiled by the five bases on balls he gave, Dennis Galehouse nevertheless permitted only seven hits and blanked Joe DiMaggio, among others. Emerson Dickman took over at the start of the seventh, but rain came before he started pitching.

Va. U. Grid Star Lost for Season

Danville, Va., Sept. 8 (AP).—University of Virginia's football hopes were dealt a sharp reversal today with announcement that Luke Gosney, letterman end, would be lost for the entire season through a fracture of the collar bone.

Gosney sustained the injury in the final game of the baseball season while playing with Waverley, Va., in a semipro league.

Gosney returned to Danville last night after undergoing treatment in Richmond and said he had been ordered to take no strenuous exercise for "at least three weeks."

Wood Trailing Grant As Storm Ends Play

Hail and Rain Halt Forest Hills Program; Mako Eliminated in Straight-Set Upset; Quist and Riggs Easy Victors

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 8.—Rain and hail struck Forest Hills late today, halting play in the National tennis championships and leaving 16 uncompleted matches in the first and second rounds to be settled tomorrow.

Those two veteran antagonists, Bryan Grant, jr., and Sidney Wood, jr., were locked in another of their struggles in the stadium, with Grant getting the better of it, when the skies turned loose with both barrels.

The first wave of attack brought hailstones the size of pool balls rattling off the concrete bowl, and then it turned into rain. After 30 minutes the officials yelled "Uncle." The players long since had tossed in the towel.

The postponement set play back a full day, except that Bobby Riggs, the nation's featured star, will appear in a special third-round match tomorrow against Larry Dee, of San Francisco.

When the storm hit the Grant-Wood match, Bitsy had won a set, 6—3, and was leading Wood in the second at 12-11, with some 4,000 fans enjoying brilliant tennis.

Edward Alloo, an unheralded entry from Berkeley, Calif., provided the biggest noise previous to the storm by eliminating Gene Mako, who was a finalist here last year against Don Budge, by scores of 6—4, 6—2, 6—0.

Adrian Quist, the Australian ace, started reaching for the championship with a 6—0, 6—2, 6—1 victory over William Gillespie, of Atlanta, and Riggs loafed to an opening win over Felicisimo Ampon, a Filipino flyweight, 2—6, 6—4, 6—4, 10—8.

The other men stars came through about as scheduled. Though Jack Crawford, of Australia, was given a scare before he rallied from two sets down to beat Julius Heldmam, the Hollywood hotspot, 5—7, 2—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—1.

Jack Bromwich, of Australia, had not started his match with Frank Shields when play stopped. Joe Hunt, still on leave from Annapolis, rosed out his young Davis Cup doubles partner, Jack Kramer, 6—2, 3—6, 5—7, 6—4, 6—3.

Joseph R. Hunt, Annapolis, Md., defeated Jack Kramer, Beverley Gardens, Calif., 6—2, 3—6, 5—7, 6—4, 6—3.

Helen Jacobs, second seeded American girl, limbered up slightly in defeating Mrs. John J. Schiefelin, of New York, 6—0, 6—0, and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan started with a 6—2, 6—0 win over Mariette Arguimbeau, of Glenbrook, Conn.

Tru-Blu Wins Again in U. S. Softball Play

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Tru-Blu softball team, of Washington, D. C., registered its second 1-0 victory of the national softball tournament here tonight, beating Rochester, N. Y., when Ralph Wellens singled Jacobson home in the fifth inning.

The second close triumph, following a 1-0 beating of the Chicopee, Mass., representative in the opening round after eight innings, installed Tru-Blu as one of the prime favorites in remaining games.

Abe Rosenfield, left-handed mound artist, who combines speed and control, worked both of Tru-Blu's winning efforts and was touched for only four hits during 15 innings. In the opener he issued three hits and in the nightcap only one, and the single base on balls he allowed in the second game was his only one of the day.

Victory over its first-round opponent was taken the hard way by the smooth-fielding Brewers. Despite a two-hit performance by Chicopee's Gudek, Tru-Blu managed to hold its rivals scoreless until it worked up enough steam to score the winning run. Tucker Woodward, one-legged first sacker, started the eighth with a triple and his runner tallied a moment later on Wasserman's single.

Yankees Beat Bosox, but Lead Is Unchanged

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 8.—Charley (Red) Ruffing took his twenty-first victory of the season today as the Yankees took a 4-to-1 rain-shortened seven-inning game from the Boston Red Sox to complete a sweep of their series.

The action of President William Harridge of the American League, in canceling a forfeit given New York over Boston Sunday offset the victory and left the champions' margin unchanged at 16½ games.

Ruffing scattered six hits with good effect and the only run scored against him was a homer by Jim Tabor in the seventh inning shortly before a severe rain and wind storm ended the game.

Frank Crosetti hit a homer for New York in the first inning to get the Yankees away to a fast start. His hit was followed by two walks and the first of two doubles by George Selkirk for another run.

His performance spoiled by the five bases on balls he gave, Dennis Galehouse nevertheless permitted only seven hits and blanked Joe DiMaggio, among others. Emerson Dickman took over at the start of the seventh, but rain came before he started pitching.

Denny Shute Paces Field At Glens Falls

By the Associated Press

Glens Falls, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Denny Shute's brilliant 66, six under par, paced the field today as the Nation's best shotmakers went after $4,000 in prize money in the eleventh annual Glens Falls open golf tournament.

Leading a field that produced 14 sub-par rounds despite adverse weather conditions, Shute put together a pair of 33s to hold a one-stroke lead over Eddie Burke, of Hamden, Conn., at the end of the first 18 of the 72-hole medal play. Tony Manero, winner last year, was in third spot, another stroke back.

Seven Birdies

Perfect control of his irons enabled Shute to knock in seven birdies. He slipped over par only once, on the 410-yard sixth, where a hooked tee shot put him far into the rough. A bad second shot on the first hole also helped keep him from equalling the course record of 65, held by Gene Sarazen.

Playing over a course slowed by early morning rains, the 134-man field displayed snatches of brilliant golf. Burke also got seven birdies in scoring a 32, 35—67 and Manero broke regulation figures on both nines with a 35, 33—68.

Long-hitting Jimmy Thompson, of Shawnee, Pa., put together a 35, 34 for 69 and a tie for fourth place with Felix Serafin, of Clarks Summit

Two Aces Pays $253.50 Mutuel in Winning at Timonium

4-Year-Old Closes With Mighty Rush

Jockey Vesseli Rides Year's Longest Shot; Apprentice Hamer Is Tossed by Favorite

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Timonium, Md., Sept. 8.—Those who held one $2 ticket on Two Aces collected $253.50 after the 4-year-old gelding shocked the talent to win today's sixth race. The mutuel, largest individual pay-off of the Maryland half-mile season and one of the best of the year in this country, went to the chosen few backers of the son of Westwick and Tricky.

Under a fine ride by Jockey Tony Vesseli, Two Aces came from behind the tiring leaders to win easily by four lengths. Fernbrake was second and Flag Etta was third in the field of six going over the 6½-furlong course. Having shown stretch speed on occasions, the majority of customers did not believe Two Aces could put on his stretch drive at the short distance.

Racing luck, however, favored Two Aces in getting to the front, but Vesseli had to bring good jockeyship into play to keep him there. Soon after the race began, Apprentice Jockey Hamer tumbled off the favorite, Polly Fair. The filly ran loose in the field. Fredalva, another well-played horse, was pulled up after Polly Fair was eliminated.

Two Aces Last

In the remaining field of four, Two Acres was a prominent last to the far turn, where he began to gain momentum. Lead Please, setting the pace to this point, began to tire badly and it appeared that Fernbrake would take the decision. However, Two Aces rushed around his opponents and took command. In the final stages he was bothered by the loose Polly Fair, but Jockey Vesseli succeeded in keeping his longshot mount going.

Due to the compact field, Two Aces paid only $39.30 to place and $9.70 to show.

Liberty Flight Scores Easily

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 8.—The 6 furlongs of the Jamestown Purse were easy for W. F. Mannagh's Liberty Flight on a sloppy track at Narragansett Park today. The 5-year-old Son of Liberty Limited scored by two and a half lengths over Louis B. Mayer's Sweet Patrice at odds of 4 to 5.

Two lengths back of Sweet Patrice was T. F. Morgan's The Fighter, which had a half length on the Medway Stable's Proph. The small field was completed by C. S. Howard's Grey Nurse and I. J. Collins' Dale K. in that order.

Sweet Patrice broke first and led down the back stretch with Liberty Flight almost at her side. Through the turn, Liberty Flight gained steadily and pulled away from Sweet Patrice. The Fighter saved third from Proph, which closed with a terrific rush as Dale K. stopped badly. The time through the slop was 1:13 1-5.. Liberty Flight paid $3.60, $2.90 and $2.20. Sweet Patrice paid $5.30 and $2.80 and The Fighter $2.30.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TARADIDDLE, $10.20, $4.70, $3.40; SCHLEY AL, $3.10, $2.40; DAWNSLIT, $2.80.

TARADIDDLE, avoiding a bad jam going to the first turn, moved into a short lead, was kept under pressure while setting the pace and held on determinedly to stall off SCHLEY AL. The latter forced a steady pace after avoiding trouble, made strong bids and continued willingly to the end. DAWNSLIT, crowded back going to the first turn, lost a lot of ground early, then finished gamely on the inside. MAGIC ROCK went in the first flight and raced well.

SECOND RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 2:30. Off 2:32½. Winner, Mrs. M. N. Bond's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUD'S KING, $5.90, $3.00, $2.60; IVY X, $3.80, $3.20; REMOLEE, $4.40.

BUD'S KING, hustled through a narrow opening at the first turn to assume command, moved clear after going a half mile and had speed in reserve. IVY X, very slow to get into racing stride, was placed to severe punishment, then finished with a belated rush in the late stages. REMOLEE was close up with the winner for the first half mile, then weakened gradually. ASTER PRINCESS was hurried along all the way, lost ground on the curves and weakened after entering contention.

FIFTH RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:03½. Winner, Miss M. Manya's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NOBLE SCOT, $3.00, $2.30, $2.30; PRETTY PAL, $2.60, $2.60; BOO'S LETTER, $8.70.

NOBLE SCOT outran his field to the first turn, was kept under strong urging to shake off WEDDING RING, responded to a stout drive and barely lasted long enough to stall off PRETTY PAL. The latter was game in rooming down the stretch contention, swung to the outside when engaging the winner, bore out at the stretch turn and hung right at the close. BOO'S LETTER was hard ridden and finished gamely. NEEDMORE showed considerable improvement, but was not good enough.

SIXTH RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:30. Off 4:32½. Winner, J. Cydelor's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TWO ACES, $253.50, $39.30, $9.70; FERNBRAKE, $3.50, $3.10; FLAGETTA, $7.10.

TWO ACES, badly outrun for 5 furlongs, swung to the outside when in full stride, caught the tiring leaders rapidly nearing the final turn, came strongly to displace FERNBRAKE, then drew out while being smothered by a riderless horse. FERNBRAKE was rushed hard to keep in the first flight, was tired out by getting to the front and failed to stay with the winner. FLAGETTA was ridden stoutly all the way. LEAD PLEASE set a fast pace for 5 furlongs, then quit badly.

SEVENTH RACE—About 1⅛ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:00. Off 5:01½. Winner, Mrs. M. Crahford's blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARY'S BOY, $12.90, $4.40, $3.20; HEART PLAY, $3.00, $2.50; AUFOIN, $5.30.

MARY'S BOY, sluggish in the early running and racing wide, continued on the outside to improve his position, responded to punishment when reaching the leaders, overhauled HEART PLAY and drew out in the last sixteenth. HEART PLAY, rated off the early pace, worn down LOCOMOTIVE, but was no match for the winner. AUFOIN improved his position gamely, but was unable to menace the first two. BEACON QUEEN was ridden vigorously and had no excuses.

EIGHTH RACE—About 1⅛ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:31. Off 5:33. Winner, Mrs. V. P. Noyes' br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TWILIGHT STAR, $5.00, $3.70, $2.80; LAST REVUE, $6.70, $3.50; BOSOPI, $2.60.

TWILIGHT STAR, showing greatly improved form, was whipped into the lead early, was steadied in front while saving ground and responded to punishment to withstand LAST REVUE. The latter was permitted to go wide on the turns, made strong efforts, but lost too much ground and hung in the closing test. BOSOPI, a railer most of the trip, closed stoutly in the last half mile. NATIONAL moved up stoutly nearing the final turn, then weakened.

Meade Rides 200th Winner Of This Year

Leading Jockey Gets Home With Hasty Wire At Odds of 30 to 1

By the Associated Press

Aqueduct, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Don Meade, who was placed back in the good graces of the turf world on the opening day of the Florida racing season last December, today rode his 200th winner of 1939 as he continued along a brilliant comeback trail that has carried him to the top of the national jockey standing.

The short but husky veteran, who was ruled off the turf for approximately two and a half years prior to the lifting of his long suspension, celebrated by guiding the 30-to-1 shot Hasty Wire, from John Simonetti's stable, to a two lengths triumph in the 6½-furlong second race, for $1,400 platers. Meade is far in front of his closest competitor for the American title. After this score, Don had a margin of 28 victories over last year's leader, Johnny Longden.

Meade has been riding in great form all year—apparently a better rider now than he ever was. The Plankington, S. Dak., star has a huge following and is considered by many the "best horse" on the New York tracks.

Hasty Wire's victory was tinged with luck. Brierton, which finished second, carried out the third horse, James N., from the entrance to the stretch all the way home, and was disqualified from the place. James N. was moved into second position and Outboard received the show.

Brierton had the most early speed but Meade moved up with the surprising Hasty Wire after a sluggish first quarter mile. Taking a narrow lead, Hasty Wire gradually drew away while saving ground. Brierton and James N. might have beaten the winner had they not lost so much ground.

Solemn Hour, Reilly Tells A. I. B. Class

War Clouds Future, D. C. Banker Says At Graduation

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Adequate leadership in the financial world is found only among those individuals who, fortified with a proper educational background, can make important decisions wisely and quickly. This was the message of John A. Reilly, president of Second National Bank, in his address last night to graduates of the courses of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, in commencement exercises at the Willard Hotel.

Speaking to more than 200 members of the chapter, its classes, faculty and representatives of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, Mr. Reilly told junior banking men and women that their institute would assist them in obtaining the capacity to think for, and by themselves; that their pursuit of higher education would kindle their imagination and through it develop their powers of reasoning.

Discussing "The Banking World of Tomorrow," the speaker said, "The banking fraternity in recent years has traveled a road quite unknown to its leaders of a generation ago. The vastness of the field of banking and the increasing complexity of its problems is a challenge to all in our profession to equip themselves for the future. The American Institute of Banking is filling a real need in this program."

'Solemn Hour' in History

Regarding the international situation, Mr Reilly said, "I cannot help but feel that you, of the oncoming generation in banking, young, eager and ambitious, are wondering at this solemn hour in the history of the world just what the future may hold for you. Nazism, fascism, socialism and communism have swept the various corners of Europe until today the great nations of the Old World must settle their differences with bullets, bombs and human blood. We must tolerate only one 'ism' in our fair land and that is 'Americanism.'"

Francis E. Robey, president of the chapter, presided, and in his opening address praised the students for their scholastic efforts and accomplishments and stressed the value of training in banking through the medium of the educational courses of the institute. He stated the institute had enrolled more than 40,000 students last year and urged continuation of study in the classes of banking, economics, law and accounting.

Ord Preston, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association and president of Union Trust Co., brought greetings from the association, expressed its appreciation of the work of the chapter, and assured co-operation of his association. Raymond B. Dickey, dean of the chapter's faculty, was another speaker. Chapter President Robey presented pre-standard certificates to graduates connected with the following institutions:

Cotton Dives After Setting Season's Tops

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 8.—In the most abrupt reversal in years, cotton futures tobogganed from gains of more than $3 a bale to outside losses of 65 cents a bale today.

The spin downward came directly on the heels of a United States Government crop report revising upward by nearly 1,000,000 bales the crop estimate.

Trade interests got behind the market early, again the result of record sales of gray goods in Worth street. A morning scramble for contracts found practically none available and prices leaped. All months established new highs for the season.

Following the noon recession, however, quotations were marked down severely and sellers hammered away at the list the remainder of the session.

Two Movie Firms Report Drop in Net Earnings

New York, Sept. 6 (U.P.)—Columbia Pictures Corporation and subsidiaries reported today net profit for the 53 weeks ended July 1—including operations of foreign subsidiaries for the 12 months ended May 27—of $2,047, or three cents a share on the $2.75 preferred stock. This compares with net profit for the 52 weeks ended June 25, 1938, of $183,393, or $2.44 a preferred share.

Pathe Film Corporation, and subsidiaries, holding company for 35 per cent of the shares of du Pont Film Manufacturing Corporation, for the six months ended June 30 reported net profit of $35,310, after charges, compared with net profit of $51,679 in the like 1938 period.

Du Pont Film Manufacturing Corporation, the report added, had a net profit of $826,000 in the first 1939 half, compared with $639,000 in the like 1938 period, and the portion of these earnings accruing to Pathe in the first half this year were $289,000, against $223,000 a year earlier.

Europe Doubles Gold Shipments In Pre-War Week

The Commerce Department said $106,911,037 of the metal was imported in the week ended September 1, compared with $65,711,084 the preceding week.

Tin Plate Price Firm

Profit Taking Greases Skids For All Grains

Wheat Off Nearly 4 Cents, Corn 2¼, Oats 2⅛, Rye 3⅛

Chicago, Sept. 8 (U.P.).—Wheat prices slumped almost 4 cents a bushel today, carrying other grain values sharply downward as the market suffered its worst relapse since the war boom days began a week ago.

A general rush to convert price gains ranging from 9 cents in oats to as much as 20 cents in wheat during the past week into neat trading profits upset the market. Heavy selling was in evidence in every pit, and although commercial buyers took advantage of the price tumble, the general market had a heavy tone. Trading was on a smaller scale than has been the case recently.

Wheat never sold above the yesterday's close. After dipping more than two cents at the opening, prices displayed some rallying strength but slumped into new low ground after midsession. The close was at or near these lows, with final prices 2¼ to 3¾ lower than yesterday; September 85⅛@85⅛, December 85@85¼.

Corn lost ½ to 2¼ cents; September 59½, December 58⅜@58½; oats 1½@2⅛; rye 2¾@3⅛, and lard 23 to 30 cents.

Selling found some cause for action in a private estimate of a 452,000,000 bushels wheat crop in the three Canadian prairie provinces. This estimate indicated harvesting is revealing much better yields than had been expected. Attention also was centered on Washington report that the government agency temporarily has discontinued payment of subsidies on wheat exports. Milling demand was much less than yesterday, while increased margin requirements restricted public trading.

Little export business in United States wheat has been confirmed since the start of the war, but shipping interests reported freight space has been booked. Some Canadian wheat was sold and the Canadian wheat board was offering grain while elevators were hedging at Winnipeg.

Comparative steadiness of corn, particularly in September contracts, which were as much as ¾ cent higher at one stage, reflected the continuation of the country holding policy. No. 1 yellow corn was priced as high as 63 cents in the spot market, which is 6 cents over the loan rate at the farm. Spot prices were 1 to 2 cents higher. Receipts were only 62 cars and 60,000 bushels were booked to arrive.

Profit takers also were active in oats and rye while lard slumped sharply in sympathy with grains and a break in hog prices.

Renewed Upsurge in Securities Nipped By Last-Hour Selling; Bonds Rise But Cotton and Wheat Slump

New York, Sept. 8.—Breaks in wheat and cotton contrasted with further broad advances in share prices and additional ground recovered by bonds today as markets completed the fifth session under war influences. Reports of Nazi occupation of Warsaw reaching board rooms in the last hour nipped off a rise which would have been comparable with the explosive gains of Tuesday. Shares had been ahead 1 to 10 points when traders heard that the Polish capital had fallen, selling promptly became general but was cushioned by a continuance of the flow of buying orders from speculative-minded people in the hinterland. In the bond section, speculative rails and industrial liens steamed upward to the accompaniment of heavy purchases with banks said to be aggressive buyers of governments.

Foreign exchange dealings found French francs weak and the dollar inclined to move up in terms of other European currencies but to decline a little against Canadian dollars. Restrictions on the other side have caused speculative selling to dry up.

Speculation Dampened

Rumors and reports that foreign governments would act to fix commodity prices as well as indications from Washington that undue markups in cost-of-living items will not be tolerated, put a damper on speculation in commodities. The chief influence in cotton and wheat, however, lay in crop reports. Cotton was spinning along at gains of $1 to $3 a bale at noon when the Government report came out, indicating 1,000,000 bales more than anyone had expected. There was prompt reversal of the price trend with a close under Thursday's last levels.

Today's stock dealings emerged from the stage in which so-called "war babies" had set the pace, after two days in which long consolidated gains and adjusted positions, large scale demand for heavy industrials and selected issues calculated to benefit from war with or without American participation, came to the front. Steels were leaders. Bethlehem almost touching 87, closing at 85½ for a net rise of 5. Steel common almost broke through 70 as the day's most active issue but ended at 68¾, a net improvement of 4⅜. Crucible common and preferred, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Jones & Laughlin preferred and others in the group added 2 or more points.

Canada Stocks Dip

While copper shares of domestic companies were well ahead on the day, Canadian mining stocks dipped on reports of government price controls or pegging due to war. International Nickel, for example, closed off nearly 4 points.

General Motors was the busiest member of the automotives.

On the other hand, American issues such as Anaconda and Kennecott firmed large fractions and smelting descriptions were even stronger. In the motor section, General Motors was the busiest member with turnover of 64,000 shares, about 20,000 less than Steel common at the head of the list. In between were Republic Steel and New York Central with 70,000 and 67,000 shares, respectively.

International Mercantile Marine was given a whirl on prospects of a redoubling of shipping activity in this country; it closed at 11½, up 4. Other active stocks moving up 2 or more points included Allied Chemical, American Smelting, Chrysler, Delaware & Hudson, Du Pont, Pennsylvania Railroad and International Harvester. The aircrafts, bought on reports of new British war orders the previous day, kept on going higher despite denials from London. Eastman Kodak sold 4½ lower on nominal dealings.

The composite for the 100 key stocks at the high for the day and move was at 107.28 and the close was 106.58 for the index, a net rise of 0.97 point. The high for the year, of 109.10, was recorded January 4 Volume on the big board of 3,511,700 shares was substantially above Thursday's turnover.

United States Treasury securities were left to themselves today by the Federal Reserve banks, and they came through their first war-time test of an unsupported market without much change. Small gains and losses were recorded in formal trading that was considerably above normal volume, but only a fraction of the heavy dealings of last Tuesday and Wednesday. Trading in all bonds amounted to $18,982,000, and United States Government issues accounted for $6,492,000 of the total.

Traders and larger institutional holders still watched warily the performances of the leading investment issues of the world. Some relief was felt, however, when the Federal intermediate credit bank issue of $30,000,000 debentures found a ready market at a yield figure of only ½ per cent. Some new private buying came into the market for direct and Treasury-guaranteed obligations, so that variations at the end ranged from gains of ⅜ point in the short issues, to losses of equal scope in long bonds.

Business in Treasury bonds moved mainly in the counter market, where tradition placed most of it until names of sellers were requested on larger blocks early in the week by the only buyer of those sessions, the Federal Reserve. With names no longer demanded, holders lost their apprehensions and resumed their ordinary activities.

Polish Issues Off

Foreign dollar bonds advanced, with few exceptions. Polish issues continued to recede, and German bonds were irregular. The scare about Scandinavian, Belgian and other neutral European issues appeared to be over, however, and some good buying took place. Canadian bonds were quiet as the Ottawa Parliament debated entry into the conflict, but Australians advanced breezily. Japanese and Italian bonds remained quiet and irregular. Many of the Latin-Americans showed large gains, owing to the impression that the economies will be benefited by war commodity orders.

Highly rated corporate bonds of the investment category regained some of the losses registered early in the week, when the shake-out of Treasury bonds lowered all investments issues. Telephone bonds and best power and light issues advanced 1 to 2 points. Leading railroad and industrial issues likewise rallied.

Speculative railroad bonds were marked smartly higher. The better regarded medium-priced issues moved up 1 to 7 points, and gains also were registered in borderline and default rails. Holding company bonds and share-privilege issues surged upward again, owing to gains in related equities. Local tractions were strong, as the New York City issues to which they are linked did better. Other special groups also were firm.

Retail Trade In Week Rises 6 to 11 Pct.

New York, Sept. 8 (U.P.).—Retail trade for the country as a whole last week was estimated at 6 to 11 per cent larger than in the corresponding period last year, said the Dun & Bradstreet weekly review today.

"Customers in retail stores," the review asserted, "apparently found the outbreak of hostilities no reason to defer purchases of fall articles. Trading was broad, as is normal at this season of the year, and sales in most cities were substantially heavier than in the same week of 1938.

"Taking a cue from the orderly turnover of store goods, retailers refused to be stampeded into speculative purchases.

"Wholesale markets in some instances had their most active week in years. Many were already ripe for heavy buying. The declaration of war having coincided with the opening of the fall season and with a moderate-to-light inventory position, the immediate reaction in many leading lines was a rush to cover requirements for several months ahead.

"Textiles were particularly active, as price increases failed to stem a heavy buying wave. Where lines were not withdrawn, wool goods staples sold in quantity at substantial price advances. Dry goods orders covering needs for the remainder of the season were executed at slightly higher prices."

Store Sales Up

The Federal Reserve Board estimated today that department store sales in the week ended September 2 were 3 per cent larger than in the corresponding week last year.

In the preceding week, sales also were 3 per cent above last year, but for the 4 weeks ended September 2 sales averaged 4 per cent more than a year ago.

Comparisons of the week ended September 2, with the corresponding week last year by Federal Reserve districts: increases by per cent, New York 7, Philadelphia 5, Cleveland 5, Richmond 8, Atlanta 16, St. Louis 15, and San Francisco 6 per cent; decreases, Chicago 5, Minneapolis 7, Kansas City 1, and Dallas 1 per cent.

Sugar Output Speeded by Refineries

Raw Stocks Reported Plentiful; Shortage Due to Hoarding

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 8.—Sugar refineries at New York City and in key cities throughout the Nation were running at top speed today to replenish grocery store stocks badly depleted by housewives' hoarding in fear of a war shortage.

American Sugar Refining Co. said its New York refineries had been placed on a 24-hour basis and would operate all day Sunday to fill the sudden void in refined stocks. Plants at Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Chalmette, La., have also been put on a top-capacity operating basis.

Other sugar refiners also reported capacity operations.

Officials said supplies of raw sugar were plentiful—the only shortage was in refined sugar, and that now is being corrected by faster refining operations.

Many grocery stores with sugar supplies still on hand were said to be selling the staple today at prices of 6 to 8 cents or more a pound throughout the country, and around 6 cents in the New York Metropolitan area. Prior to the outbreak of war in Europe, stores here sold sugar at a little under 5 cents a pound.

3-Point Rifle Edge Taken By Doughboys

Last 2 Shots Decide Leader as Service Event Reaches Finals

By the Associated Press

Camp Perry, Ohio, Sept. 8.—Ten U. S. doughboys battled their way into a three-point lead over the Cavalry today at the end of four stages of the five-stage National Service Rifle championship with a score of 1,850 of a possible 2,000.

The Infantrymen, defending the laurels they wrested from the Marines a year ago, took the lead on the last two shots of the 600-yard stage, the Cavalrymen losing three points on the two shots to finish the day with 1,847. The final stage, at 1,000 yards, will be fired tomorrow, winding up the 1939 national matches which have extended over the last three weeks.

Other scores: U. S. Engineers, 1,832; Marines, 1,831; Ohio National Guard 1,810; Coast Guard, 1,801; California National Guard, 7,801; Marine Reserves, 1,798; Connecticut National Guard, 1,796; American Legion, 1,792.

Members of the leading infantry squad were Lieut. L. J. Throckmorton, of Fort Benning, Ga.; Sergt. Coats Brown, of Fort, McClellan, Ala.; Sergt. Charles H. Culver, of Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.; Corp. Willard L. Baker, of Fort Benjamin Harrison; Sergt. Oscar L. Gallman, Fort F. E. Warren, Wyo.; Corp. Waide Gacobbe, Fort McKinley, Me.; Sergt. William H. Gothard, Fort Sam Houston; Sergt. Leo Dawson, Fort Benning, Ga., and Corp. Thaddeus Ference, Fort Jay, N. Y.

The entrants fired 10 shots slow fire standing, and 10 rapid fire sitting or kneeling at 200 yards, 10 shots rapid fire prone at 300 yards, and 10 shots prone, slow fire at 600 yards.

Tomorrow's grand finale calls for 20 shots per man at 1,000 yards.

Golfers Crack Par in Drill For Amateur

Chicago, Sept. 8 (AP).—The weather was much cooler—but the golf much hotter—today at the North Shore Country Club, scene of next week's National Amateur Golf Tournament.

Three golfers practicing for the championship battle toured the 7,022-yard layout in sub-par figures while several others used less than 75 strokes.

Johnny Goodman of Omaha, who won the National Open title on this course six years ago Tommy Tailor of New York and Jack Hoerner of Chicago scored a 71, one under regulation figures.

Carl Dann of Jacksonville, Fla., went around in 72 strokes while 3-putting three greens. Jack Emery of Detroit likewise had a 72.

Charlie Yates of Atlanta, former British amateur titleholder, took a 74 as did Johnny Cummings, Memphis, Tenn. Frank Stiedle long-driving entrant from Little Rock, Ark., used 75 strokes his first trip around the course and Marvin (Bud) Ward, highly-rated Portland, Ore., golfer had to be satisfied with a 76.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson.
WJSV Staff Baseball Announcer

Taft Wright was a clear standout among the Nats at Philadelphia yesterday and thus draws the chief award of points in the man-of-the-month contest. Points were distributed as follows:

To Wright six points because he drove in two of the Nats four runs with a double and later in the game doubled again to put the tying run on base.

To Alex Alexandra two points because he pitched a four-inning relief shift, holding the A's' scoreless and keeping the Nats in the game.

To Jimmy Bloodworth one point because he made two of the Nat's hits and drove in a run.

In the eighth the Nats had the tying run on second with none out. Vernon lined a single to center and raced to second when Chapman fumbled the ball. Giuliani grounded to Newsome and Vernon was snuffed out at third. Estalella batted for Alexandra and beat out a slow roller down the third base line, Giuliani taking second. Welaj and Lewis left him stranded.

The Nats got a bad break in the ninth and then a lucky one. Sammy West attempted to duck an inside pitch and the ball hit his bat and rolled fair. He was thrown out. And then Siebert fumbled Wrights' grounder for an error to put the tying run on base for the third consecutive inning. Travis and Bloodworth left it there.

Jockey Reno Hit By Auto, Killed

Collinsville, Ill., Sept. 8 (AP).—Tracy Reno, 30, a veteran jockey, was struck by an automobile and killed while he was crossing a highway near the Fairmount Jockey Club tonight.

He was astride Jim Dandy, a 100-to-1 shot, when he defeated Gallant Fox, Kentucky Derby winner, at Belmont Park, New York.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Slam biddings has always been one of the departments of contract bidding that defied the best analysis. Recently, with the introduction of the Blackwood convention for locating aces, slam bidding has become much simpler, but it is still a subject experts advise beginners to avoid.

"Don't bid slams until you know how," is the paradoxical counsel of one master. He forgets it is largely by our mistakes that we learn.

A hand that failed to produce slam contract has been submitted for discussion today.

The hand sent by Dr. E. D. E. concerns a pre-emptive bid that failed to result in a slam, though a slam was made. Here are the cards; the doctor sat South, was dealer and vunerable:

North
♠ J9764
♡ 74
◇ KQ97
♣ Q8
South
♡ AKQJ109653
◇ None
♣ K107

He says: "I opened with five hearts; my partner, North, passed, and East passed. West led a small club; East played the ace. After this trick the hand was a laydown.

"Will you comment on my opening bid and my partner's response? Is there any legitimate way a slam contract should have been arrived at? I, at first, thought of an opener of two, but concluded five more nearly gave a picture of my unusual distribution. With one honor trick and the doubleton in hearts, do you think North would have been justified in chancing a raise to six?"

No. North's values are not sufficient to induce him to bid six, but South could have. With the club king protected, he might have gambled for the slam at the start (as long as he had decided on a pre-emptive bid) and said six hearts. The queen-jack of clubs in his partner's hand are enough to make his slam secure, but by no reasoning could he expect his partner to raise on these cards.

He might have chosen to open with a forcing-two, as he considered, but even then he would have to bid the slam himself. Sometimes it is best to bid the full value of a hand at once.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Luther C. Steward and Gertrude M. McNally, president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the strong National Federation of Federal Employes, have been re-elected to the positions which they have held virtually since inception of the organization 22 years ago. The biennial convention in San Francisco accorded them an ovation.

Three new vice presidents were elected, namely, L. J. Wall, seventh vice president, of Springfield, Ill; Alfred Berryessa, eighth vice president, of San Francisco, and Oscar W. Dam, ninth vice president, of Seattle. The retiring members of the executive council are: Lee R. Whitney, of Milwaukee; William M. Rapsher, of Philadelphia, and Arthur Joachims, of Seattle. Other officers are: Ulrey J. Biller, of Washington, nationally known authority on retirement systems, fourth vice president; John Fitzgerald, of New York, first vice president; Charles L. Wiegand, of Baltimore, second vice president; Dr. Walter P. Taylor, of College Station, Texas, third vice president; George L. Evans, of Denver, fifth vice president, and Vaux Owen, of Atlanta, sixth vice president.

The N. F. F. E. was quick to send expressions of support to the President in "this time of crisis." The letter, received at the White House, said:

"By unanimous action of the fifteenth convention of the N. F. F. E. . . . the national officers have been instructed to convey to you this expression of the deep sense of responsibility felt by each member of the N. F. F. E. at this time of crisis, and their determination to carry out in letter and spirit the principles set forth in your radio address of September 3 and the proclamations of September 5, 1939.

"The National Federation of Federal Employes recognizes that at this critical juncture the duties of every Federal employe, regardless of position or location assumes a greater significance than ever before, and that there is imposed upon these employes the immensely important responsibility of setting an example, through patriotic, unselfish, impartial and broad visioned devotion to the public business.

The organization—largest group of Federal employes—said it was "mindful of the fact that during the days which lie ahead, tasks of the highest national importance will be placed into the hands of Federal employes for execution. That these vital and extraordinary tasks will be carried out faithfully and well, and in the finest tradition of the Federal service, is the pledge which the national officers make to you on behalf of the N. F. F. E. and through you to the whole American people.

"Now as in the past, Mr. President, we know that the men and women of the Federal service will be found to be a tower of strength to the Nation they are so proud to serve.

Those veterans' administration hospital attendants eligible for civil service status under the June 24, 1938, Executive Order, should not be too disturbed if they were not examined on August 25. To complete the job of giving them status, there will be one and possibly two more examinations. The next is scheduled on or about September 25. If the eligibles are not all taken care of then, another examination will ensue within about a month. There are approximately 13,000 eligibles. The examinations had to be staggered so as not to disrupt the 24-hour operation of the hospital services.

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

Chapter 28

THERE WAS something uncomfortably spooky about these huge unlighted interiors full of desertion and decay. The place got under my skin, after a while, until I would have much preferred to be wandering around in a ruined castle jammed with ancient ghosts. These buildings were crowded with modern ghosts, the terrible robot ghosts of murdered machines. The dead iron bodies stood stiffly ranked as far down the length of the vast rooms as my light could reach (which was never half way), with pipes swarming out of, and over, and between them like the frozen arms of that god of India. They threw enormous snaky patterns of shadows on the ceiling. I didn't pretend to investigate very thoroughly.

DYER

Another building, as big as a hangar, was empty of machinery, but a complicated design of bolts sticking up all over the concrete floor suggested that giant castings had been planned for this department, too. Another building was just plain empty, with nothing to explain what it was meant to cover.

I struck none that showed signs of recent activity until I got back almost to the eastern end of the plant. Here I looked into a structure in which parallel lines of railway track had been laid, the rails all new and bright, and all pointing toward the sound. In the next building preparations were under way for a similar installation; wooden ties were distributed down the long floor and a pile of rails waited by the near wall.

I began to feel a tingle of electricity percolating into my brain. Something had gone wrong with the glittering picture of riches extracted from the sea, and the mouldering machinery in the buildings behind me was all that remained of that enterprise. Now Mr. Raskin, having as he supposed shaken off the owners of the Sea Reduction Corporation, was engaged in floating a dazzling new venture, and using a part of the old plant (too bad to throw away such a wonderful foundation for castles in the air!) to give color of reality for the suckers he had nibbling at the bait. My arrival on the scene at this critical moment had been bad enough; the killing of the Jap by the dogs was worse still; and the crowning piece of ill luck happened when Adriana and I saw the Jap's body a few moments before they were able to dispose of it. What the unfortunate Oriental had to do with the situation was beyond my understanding; and, indeed, I could not imagine what stakes might be involved great enough to put Mr. Raskin on our trail with (as I felt sure had been the case that morning) murder in his eye.

THE MOMENT I entered the building from which the speedboat had been launched I began to find out.

I suppose I had been making quite a row slamming in and out of the buildings along the line. I had felt sure that the place was all mine and that I should hear the cruiser coming back long before I was in any danger of being surprised. And when I found the dooor of the second building from the end ajar, I flung it open, and strode in without the slightest apprehension.

This comfortable condition did not last ten seconds. I was scarcely inside the building when a hard and unmistakable Something was pressed into the small of my back, and a voice from the darkness behind me said in a deep growl:

"Put up your hands! Smartly, now!"

So I did. And that was that.

With no further polite conversation than that the gent who had so unceremoniously pushed a gun against my spine reached up and took the flashlight from my raised left hand (which told me he must be tall), and then expertly slapped me from armpits to thighs. He found my knife, withdrew it from the sheath, and grunted once when the still unwiped blade showed red in the light. I heard it clatter on the concrete a good distance away.

And all the while he somehow managed to keep the hard blunt muzzle poking into my most valuable internal apparatus. I couldn't think of a thing to say.

When he had satisfied himself that he had cleaned me of my weapons he held the flash to one side and stepped sidewise to see my face (still keeping the gun in my back). There was a ring of surprise in his tone when he spoke again.

"Oh, it's you?" said he. I couldn't before, but oddly enough, considplace where I'd heard him speak ering the present circumstances, I had a pleasant association with the voice.

"Check," I said, "It's me, all right. Or rather, it's I. So what?"

"Of course, I suspected you'd be in on this," he remarked, partly to himself. There was so little menace in his speech that I sneaked a look over my shoulder. Behind the glare of the flashlight, I saw the dim outline of a white beard.

"Why, it's Zeus!" I said, and started to turn around.

"Don't move," snapped that elderly artist who had looked so benign before, as he dug me in the backbone with his crude argument. (It was probably a .45 automatic, and it felt at least as large as a one-pounder cannon.) "I want to hear your explanation of what you're doing in this place at this time of night. Are you a friend of Thornton Raskin?"

"Look here," I said. "You've got me on the spot. But do you have to insult me, too?"

"Are you an American citizen?"

This seemed a curious question.

"From away back," I answered. "But what's that got to do with it?"

"Why are you here?" he went boring ahead.

"Do you have to tell you?" I countered.

"No," he said. "But I'd hate to make up my mind that I ought to shoot you."

"You don't know how I'd hate to have you," said I, "and if I can save you from coming to such a beastly decision, I'm willing to tell you that I have the best right in the world to be here. I practically own this plant."

"Oh?"

"ABSOLUTELY. My uncle died last spring, and left me nearly a controlling interest in the Sea Reduction Corporation. A friend of mine has enough more of the stock so together we do have a controlling interest. The difficulty is that thanks to Mr. Raskin we have the interest but not the control. I'm snooping around trying to find out what the devil is going on in our plant. See?"

Zeus was silent for an instant, and I thought he pushed a little less hard on my kidneys. I deduced he was believing me.

"If it comes to that," I said, "why don't I ask you what you're doing in my property, armed to the gills, and feeling free to use your artillery on the owner of the plant? If I may say so, you look too respectable to be in cahoots with Raskin & Co."

"I'm not that."

"Good," said I, "then we ought to be friends. Can't I put my hands down, and turn around? I'm as harmless as a baby, I guarantee it."

"Your knife doesn't look so harmless."

"It looks like that because I just had to kill a police dog with it. When Raskin and his party went off they left this plant in charge of a couple of the meanest hounds you ever saw. I might be a fresh corpse right now if I hadn't had a knife."

"Hmm," said Zeus. There was indecision in his deep voice, and I couldn't get away from the feeling that he was a thoroughly good sort and that this situation was ridiculous. We should be allies, of that I was certain.

"It's a good thing I did use that knife," I went prattling on, "or you might have been chewed up when you came in. By the way, when and how did you get into the enclosure? Did you climb the fence?"

"No," said the artist (if he was an artist), "I came in by the gate facing the beach, about half an hour ago."

"I came in that way, too. But I thought they locked it, afterwards."

"They did," he said, "but the lock picked rather easily."

"Come along," I said, "my arms are tired and I'm getting a crick in my neck talking to you over my shoulder like this. Let's be friends."

The older man took a couple of steps back in order to carry his gun beyond my reach and said:

"Very well. Drop your hands and turn around, if you like. But you're big and young and you look strong and I'm not satisfied about you yet, so I'm warning you, don't make any sudden moves. You might startle me into pulling the trigger."

IT WAS AN army automatic pistol, right enough, enormous on the fringe of the light. He still kept it (and the flash) pointed squarely at me.

"If you don't belong to Mister Raskin's crowd, and I don't," said I, "we ought to be working together. Why do you flatter me by acting as if I was as dangerous as a rattlesnake? What do you think I am?"

"You certainly don't act like a foreigner," said he, a bit irrelevantly I thought.

"Why should I? I'm Garret Marriner, skipper of the yawl Adriana, late of Princeton and New York. You are the skipper of the Tout Passe Sauf La Beaute, and you hail from Westport, Conn. That's about all my secret agents have been able to find about you."

"My name is Eben Bronson," he said, and I could see him smiling faintly among his wonderful whiskers. "I'm a marine painter. No; we won't shake hands just yet."

"Which brings me," said I, "right back to the question of what a painter is doing behind such a piece of heavy artillery in the plant of the Sea Reduction Corporation at practically midnight?"

Even in the outer fringes of the glaring flashlight I could see his face fairly well, and make out the look of appraisal in his eyes which were almost as blue as Adriana's and many times as shrewd. He seemed to be debating an answer, and then evidently changed his first choice. I fancied the muzzle of his pistol was sinking a little.

"Because," he said, "I happened to be in the Menemsha store when the postmaster told you about that telegram."

This was hardly a real answer, so I said:

"You wanted to know what was 'O. K. tonight?' Of course, that's why I'm here. So did I."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

D. C. Delegates To Take Over Fair Today

3,000 of Finest, Officials And Others, to Be on Hand for District Day

It's District Day at the New York World Fair today and some 3,000 Washingtonians — including the cream of local officialdom—will be on hand to celebrate down to the last weary footstep.

Special trains were to leave Washington at 6:55 a. m. and by the time passengers begin to fully awake, they will be in the "World of Tomorrow" ready to participate in a day-long program of events. Immediately upon arrival at the fair, they will march to the Court of Peace, where welcoming ceremonies will be led by Mayor LaGuardia and

The official greeting exercises will last but 30 minutes and then the Washington delegation will "take over." District civic and municipal leaders will be guests at luncheon in Perylon Hall and at dinner in the Federal Building.

A special detachment of District National Guardsmen will serve as escort. Commissioner Hazen will respond to welcoming addresses by LaGuardia and Whalen.

During the ceremonies, music will be furnished by the Police Boys Club Band and the police drill team will go through its paces. Many District residents left late yesterday aboard a special train to make the trip a three-day affair. Nearly every city and Federal Government department will be represented.

In addition to Hazen, guests will include Commissioners McCoach and Allen, Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Park and Planning Commission; Police Superintendent Brown, Maj. Horace Smith, White House aide; Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Miss Ruth Overton, daughter of Senator Overton and queen of the President's Cup Regatta; Corporation Counsel Seal, Traffic Director Van Duzer, Maj. Daniel Donovan, District auditor, and a host of others.
